PREFACE

THE idea of this work first occurred to one of the authors, Dr Main Dixon, in the course of his experience in lecturing on Scottish Literature to his students in the University of Southern California. He felt the need of a book to which he could refer them for details of Scottish Grammar and Pronunciation, which he could employ, in class, for the recitation of our literary masterpieces, and which the students themselves, after they left the University, could use either for purposes of declamation or teaching.

The book is divided into three parts. Part I describes the sounds of Modern Scots with examples of their use written in the alphabet of the International Phonetic Association. Part II contrasts Scots Grammar with Standard English usage and gives copious illustrations from Modern Scottish Literature. Part III consists of a series of extracts from Modern Scots writers and a selection of ballads and songs with phonetic transcriptions. Most of these transcriptions are in Standard Scottish Speech (see Introduction, p. xxi); Extracts XII A, XIII A, XVI A, XVII A, IX B, XIV B, may be described as Standard Scottish with local colour; Extracts VII A, XIV A, XX A, XXII A, XXIV A, are intended to represent the exact speech of definite sub-dialects.

The authors desire to express their obligation to the following publishers and writers for kindly allowing them to reproduce copyright matter: Messrs Hurst and Blackett, Ltd. for the passage from George Macdonald's Alec Forbes; Dr Charles Murray, and his publishers Messrs Constable and Co., Ltd., for the poem of "The Whistle"; Messrs Douglas and Foulis for the extract from Dr Alexander's Johnny Gibb; the Executors of the late Dr John Watson for the passage from Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush; Messrs Sands and Co. for the extract from Salmond's My Man Sandy<sup>1</sup>; Mr J. Logie Robertson for permission to print "The Absconding Elder" from his Horace in Homespun; Mr Joseph Waugh for the story of the "Wooer" from Robbie Doo; Mr J. J. Bell for the extract from Wee Macgreegor entitled "Taiblet": Mr Alexander Kennedy for permission to use Mr Alexander Anderson's (Surfaceman's) poem of "Cuddle Doon"; the publishers of the Dumfries and Galloway Courier and Herald for the passage from Trotter's Galloway Gossip; Mr James S. Angus for the verses entitled "Klingrahool"; Lady Murray, Miss Hilda M. R. Murray and Sir Oswyn Murray for the extract from the Southern Scottish version of "Ruth" by the late Sir James A. H. Murray. Grateful acknowledgement is also due (1) to Professor Lawrence Melville Riddle, Head of the French Department in the University of Southern California, for his careful revision of Part I and his many useful suggestions, (2) to the Rev. Alexander Grieve, M.A., D.Phil., Glasgow, for valuable assistance in the correction and criticism of Parts I and II, (3) to the Rev. Robert McKinlay, M.A., Galston, for much information on local dialect forms and middle Scots, (4) to the Reader and Printers of the Cambridge University Press for their great patience and care in the production of this work.

Finally the authors have to thank the Carnegie Trustees very heartily for the financial guarantee with the help of which the book is published.

INTRODUCTION

THE phonetic texts in this volume are intended chiefly for the use of students of Scottish literature who have few or no opportunities of hearing the language in its spoken form. A study of the texts will enable the student to read or recite any passage from Scottish literature with a pronunciation which would be recognised as Scottish wherever it be spoken. In our Colonies, in the United States, in educational centres all over the world, are to be found lovers of our national literature who will welcome the means we offer, of increasing their enjoyment of its masterpieces. It is a keen artistic pleasure—which is, indeed, not a small thing—to be able

To lend to the rhyme of the poet The beauty of the voice.

We have seen in recent years a revival of interest in Scottish history, literature and antiquities. This renaissance has extended to our Scottish Schools, and Scottish literature is now not only studied but read aloud and recited by our pupils. We trust that the description of Scottish sounds and the series of phonetic texts contained in this volume may prove helpful to our teachers in settling difficulties of pronunciation and in establishing a certain amount of uniformity in the public use of our ancient national speech.

At the present time, Scottish dialect varies from one district to another all over the Lowland area, in pronunciation, idiom, vocabulary, and intonation. Most of our Scottish writers, however, have refused to bind themselves to any local form of dialect. Like Molière, they take their good where they can get it. They use the Scottish tongue and address themselves to Scottish speakers everywhere. They aim to be understood by the nation and not merely by the parish or county. "I simply wrote my Scots as I was able," remarks Stevenson, "not caring if it hailed from Lauderdale or Angus, Mearns or Galloway; if I had ever heard a good word, I used it without shame, and when Scots was lacking or the rhyme jibbed I was glad, like my betters, to fall back on English." It is this ingrained consciousness of a general Scottish speech—of a real "Lingua Scottica" apart from dialect varieties—that explains the almost passionate insistence of patriotic Scotsmen on the use of the term "Scottish Language." And certainly the term "language" is as applicable to our speech as it is to Danish or Norwegian, for like these, it has a national life and a national literature behind it. Our literature goes back to the time when Scotland had a King and Court of her own in Edinburgh, when Scottish was the language of the University, the School, and the fashionable courtiers of the ancient capital. The language was used all over Scotland in official documents, Session Records, Town Council Minutes, with practically no distinction of dialect. In The Heart of Midlothian Scott makes the Duke of Argyll say of Lady Staunton (Effie Deans) that her speech reminded him of "that pure court-Scotch which was common in my younger days, but it is so generally disused now that it sounds like a different dialect, entirely distinct from our modern patois." Even at the present time, however, we have still a vague belief in a standard pronunciation corresponding to the written language. This belief manifests itself in the public reading or recitation of whatever is not patently topical in purpose. An Aberdonian reciting a national ballad in public would instinctively avoid his local "fa" for "wha" (who), and "meen" for "mune" (moon). So also a Glasgow man would avoid as far as he could his local pronunciation of wo?ar (water), i.e. he would certainly insert the t. Neither would completely veil his locality from the average audience, but he would undoubtedly tone down his district peculiarities. "That is not my Scots," a critic might say of his speech, "but it is very good all the same."

Literary Scottish is undoubtedly founded on a Lothian dialect. The Lothian type of Scottish speech is spread over a wide area of Mid Scotland, comprising the counties of Berwick, Peebles, Haddington, Edinburgh, Linlithgow, Fife, Clackmannan, Kinross, Stirling, Dumbarton, Renfrew, Bute, Ayr, Lanark, Wigtown, Kirkcudbright, and West Dumfries. The language spoken over this Mid district might be conveniently styled "Standard Scots." It is not absolutely uniform over this area, but the points of agreement are sufficient to mark it off distinctly from the dialects of the Southern and North-Eastern Counties. It corresponds better than the other dialects to the spelling of the literary language, and it comprises the area of the Old Scottish Court and the largest present Scottish population. We shall use it, therefore, for the interpretation of literary Scottish in the great majority of our phonetic texts, carefully noting variant pronunciations and eliminating localisms which do not correspond with general Scottish usage.

A few texts with suitable explanations are also given of other Scottish dialects. These are the dialects (1) of the Southern Counties—Selkirk, Roxburgh, East and Central Dumfries; (2) of the North-Eastern Counties—Aberdeen, Banff, Moray, Nairn, Caithness; (3) of the Orkney and Shetland Islands (founded on Standard Scottish with Scandinavian elements); (4) of Kincardine and Forfar (intermediate to the Mid and North-Eastern).

The Alphabet used in the phonetic descriptions is that of the International Association, with certain modifications to adapt it to Scottish needs. The formation of the sounds is fully described and key-words are given from modern European languages. The authors hope that anyone with an elementary knowledge of Phonetics will find little difficulty in following the texts.

PART I PHONETICS

CONSONANTS

1. TERMS USED IN DESCRIBING CONSONANTS

Back Part of tongue opposite soft palate.

Blade Part of tongue between the point and the front (i.e. middle) and opposite the upper teeth ridge.

Breathed Means that the consonant is produced with the vocal chords wide apart so that breath passes.

Consonant Is a speech sound, breathed or voiced, in which the breath current is completely or partially checked in some part of the throat or mouth, or forces its way out with audible friction.

Fricative Is a consonant in which the breath current, in its passage out from the lungs, is so narrowed that it has to force its way out with audible friction.

Front The middle of the tongue, opposite the middle of the hard palate.

Glottal Implies that the stop or friction takes place in the glottis, i.e. the space between the vocal chords.

Hard palate Part of the roof of the mouth between the upper teeth ridge and the soft palate.

Lateral Is a consonant in which the breath current is partially checked by some part of the tongue but finds egress by the side or sides.

Nasal Is a consonant in which the breath current is completely checked in the mouth but passes through the nose.

Plosive Is a consonant in which the breath current is momentarily checked on its way out and then issues with a plosion.

Point Tip of tongue.

Voiced

Soft palate Is the soft, fleshy part in the roof of the mouth, behind the hard palate.

Trill Is a consonant, produced by the vibration of some flexible part of the vocal organs, e.g. by the tongue or the uvula.

Uvula Pendulous tongue at the extremity of the soft palate.

Vocal chords Are two elastic folds of mucous membrane, so attached to the cartilages of the larynx and to muscles that they may be stretched or relaxed and otherwise altered so as to modify the sounds produced by their vibration (Imperial Dictionary) produced by their vibration. (Imperial Dictionary.)

Means that the consonant is produced with the vibration of the vocal chords and hence has a musical quality.

PLOSIVES

3. A plosive is a consonant in which the breath current, breathed or voiced, is completely checked in some part of the mouth, generally issuing with a burst or plosion.

- 4. Breathed lips plosive. The breath current is blocked at the lips, issuing after a short pause in a plosion.
- 5. The sound is the same as the E.  $\mathbf{p}$  and is written with p or pp (after short vowels).

Sc. Ph. E. taupie 'ta:pi a foolish woman tappit 'tapet topped.

6. Notice p for E. b in lapster'lapsterlobsternieper (N.E. Sc.)'niperneighbour.

- 7. Voiced lips plosive. Same sound as b in E. "but."
- 8. Generally spelled b or bb (after short vowels).

Sc. Ph. E.
birk birk birch scabbit 'skabet scabbed.

9. Between m and ər, and m and 1, b does not occur in Sc., though found in E.

chalmer chamber 't(a:mər amber lammer'lamər timmertimber 'tımər rummle rumble raml skemmel skeml shamble thummle 0<sub>A</sub>ml thimble tummletaml tumble.

10. m and b are both voiced sounds and formed at the lips. In m, however, the nasal passage is open. If, in pronouncing m, the nasal passage is closed prematurely, the consonant b will be heard.

11. Note b in Sc. instead of E. p in 'barlı "parley," 'babtıst (W. and Sth. Sc.) "baptist," kabtın (W. Sc.) "captain."

12. Breathed point plosive. This consonant is formed generally as in E., the breath current being blocked at the point of the tongue and the apex of the upper gum. In some dialects, e.g. in Orkney and Shetland, the point of the tongue is advanced to the teeth.

13. t is dropped

Pn.	E.
'perfək	perfect
rə'flek	reflect
strįk	strict;
	'perfək rə'flek

(2) after p:

corrup' ko'rap corrupt

empy 'empt empty

temp' temp tempt;

(3) after x medial in a few words:

lichnin	'lţxnən	lightning
tichen	tįxn	tighten frichen	frţxn	frighten
fochen	foxn	fought.

- 14. Note that in dialects in which the suffix vowel is dropped, inflectional t is retained after p and k: e.g. sipped, sipt; keeked, kikt.
- 15. The loss of final t in the words in Ph. § 13 (1), (2) may have been begun in such combinations as strict truth, strikt try0 where t after k becomes first a pure stop and then disappears completely. In E. "empty" (O.E. \(\overline{\pi}\)mtig) the p is originally intrusive. If the sound m is unvoiced and denasalized before the tongue takes the position for t, p will be the result. This new formation mpt is not an easy one and therefore not long stable. In E. ordinary pronunciation p is generally dropped, hence 'smt; in many Sc. dialects the original t is lost, hence 'smpt.

16. t is usually unsounded between f and n, s and l, s and n:

Sc.	Ph.	E.
cuisten	kysn	cast (pt. part.)
saften	safn	soften
wrastle or)	rasl )	vrmostlo t
warsle }	warsl	wrestle;

but castle is very generally pronounced 'kastal.

17. The verbal or adjectival termination ed becomes at after p, t, k, b, d, g, except in Caithness dialect where it is ad.

Ph.	E.
'hapət	covered
'fr <sub>t</sub> xtət	frightened
'gerdət	guarded
'ragət	$\operatorname{ragged}$
'rabət	rubbed
'sw <sub>l</sub> kət	deceived.
	'hapət 'frixtət 'gerdət 'ragət 'rabət

- 18. An inorganic t occurs in suddent, sadnt, suddently, 'sadntl, probably due to the influence of words like evident, apparent, etc. So also we find inorganic t in oncet, wanst, jinst; twicet, twoist (Lnk.), perhaps on the analogy of the regular ordinal termination t in fift, sixt, etc.
- 19. In anent, foranent, ə'nent, forə'nent, "in front of," "in comparison with," the t is excrescent. The O.E. is anefn (lit. on even) which later became anemn and anen, then anent. In Wyclif's time a Genitive ending in es was added on the analogy of words like thennes = "thence," etc., and his form of the word is anentis.
  - 20. t replaces k in twalt "quilt," in many dialects.
- 21. In Forfar and East Perth,  $\mathbf{t}^1$  takes the place of  $\mathbf{k}$  before  $\mathbf{n}$  as

Sc.	Ph.	E.
knee	tni:	knee
knife	tnəif	knife
knock	tnok	clock
knowe	tnau	knoll.

22. t takes the place of E. 0 in ordinals:

Sc. Ph. E. sixt sixth.

- 23. In the Orkney and Shetland dialects t and d (both point teeth sounds) replace th in such words as thin and the, thus dat tin tin = "that thin thing."
  - 24. For tu and tou = "thou," see Ph. § 217 (d).

d

- 25. Voiced point plosive. This is the voiced sound corresponding to t and is pronounced generally in the same way as in E. In the Orkney and Shetland dialects, the point of the tongue is advanced to the teeth.
- 26. Many of the Scottish dialects, especially the North East, have no d after n and 1 as in E.

	141	C
ш	a B	after	77
	-	aluci	**

/
Sc.	Ph.	E.
can'le	kanl <sup>1</sup>	candle
han'	han1	hand
lan'	lan1	land
len'	len	lend
soun' (noise)	sun	sound
soun' (healthy)	sun	sound
thunner	'θ <sub>A</sub> nər	thunder
wunner	'wanər	wonder.

In len', soun' (noise) and thunner the d in E. is inorganic.

(2) after 1:

aul'	a:l	old
caul'	ka:l	cold
faul'	fa:l	fold.

Usage in Mid. Sc. varies, so we write such words in the texts  $land^1$ , a:ld, etc.

- 26 (a). In the N.E. feedle, fid1; wordle, wordl show a metathesis of d and 1 as compared with the E. forms.
- 27. The sound d in hand is produced by closing the nasal passage, without stopping the emission of voice. If the nasal passage is kept open till the end of the word, no d is heard, but only a prolongation of the n. This prolonged n may still be heard in some dialects, although in most it has now been shortened. l and d are likewise formed in the same part of the mouth—i.e. between the tip of the tongue and upper teeth ridge—only in l the sides of the tongue droop to allow the emission of the voiced breath. The change from ld to a lengthened l is therefore a very simple one.

28. In some Mid. and Sth. dialects,  $it = \mathbf{rt}$  becomes d after voiced sounds: e.g.

a maind od fain.

"I remember it well."

hwaat izd?

hwaat wuzd?

mat 1zd?

-mat wazd?

"What is it?"

"What was it?"
Wilson's Lowland Scotch, p. 86.

hi gies the man'd.

hei gi:z 8 mand.

"He gives it to the man."

Murray's Dialect of Sth. Sc. p. 191.

t however is also found.

28 (a). Notice d in bodm, "bottom," and in dtfrlake, dishilago, from "tussilago, coltsfoot."

29. d takes the place of  $\boldsymbol{\theta}$  or  $\boldsymbol{\delta}$  in E., in Sc.

Ph.

study or stiddy 'stadi or 'stidi stithy

smiddy

'smidi

widdy

'widi, 'wadi

withy—hangman's noose, the gallows.

30. In the Buchan dialect d is used for 8 before er. In the fisher dialects of Aberdeenshire d in these words is point teeth plosive.

fader 'fader father midder 'mider mother bridder 'brider brother idder 'ider other badder 'bader bother.

31. At an early period in the history of the language, a change of d to o before er, or had occurred all over the country. Thus we get forms like ether, father, blether (see Ph. § 85), O.E.  $n\overline{w}dre$ , fwder, bl $\overline{w}dre$ . In the N.E. (also in Linlithgow and Edinburgh to some extent) a further change took place. All words having of or substituted dor: thus ether, father, blether, become edder, fader, bledder, and, further, words like "brother, other, feather," O.E. brovor, over, fever, become bridder, idder, fedder.

j

32. Voiced front plosive. This is the plosive corresponding to the fricative j in "young" (see Ph. § 105). The front (i.e. the middle) of the tongue rises further than for j until it presses against the hard palate so as to form a stop to the breath current. j is not common in Sc. but may be heard in some parts of Buchan, e.g. əm jaən ə'wa: hem, am gyaun awa' hame, "I am going away home."

k

- 33. Breathed back plosive. This sound is the same as k in E. "cook" and is formed by the back of the tongue pressing against the soft palate. When a front vowel follows k, the area of articulation is further forward on the roof of the mouth.
  - 34.  $\mathbf{k}$  is written with the letter c.
    - (1) Before back vowels:

Sc.	Ph.	E.
Sc. cauf	ka:f	chaff
cour	ku:r	cower
cowt	kaut	colt
curchie	'k∧rt∫į	curtsey.

(2) Before r, 1:

crap	krap	$\operatorname{crop}$
cleed	klid	clothe.

(3) Before front vowels derived from back vowels, c also is more common than k:

	Sc.	Ph.	E.
	cairts	kerts	cards
	cuinie	'kynjı	coin or corner
	cuits	kyts	ankles
	scuil (old)	skyl	school.
But	kail	kel	cole
	kaim	kem	comb
	skule	skyl	school.

Note also schule as a common spelling for "school."

- 35. The letter k is used regularly before e and i and y, i.e.:
  - (1) before \varepsilon, 1, 2, 3:

keckle	kekl	cackle
ken	ken	know
kep	kep	catch
kist	kįst	chest
kivvy	'kıvı	covey, group
kypie	'kəipi	a game of marbles played _	with a hole in the ground
kythe	kəiθ	make or become known kyte =	kəit	belly.
) before n :

(2)

knee	kni:	knee
kneel	knil	kneel
knock	knok	clock.

- The pronunciation of k before n is still to be heard in the North-East, but it is practically obsolete in the Mid. district.
- 37. Many Sc. words have k instead of E.  $ch_1 = t_1$ , supposed by many to be the result of Scandinavian influence.

kirk	kįrk	church
birk	bįrk	birch
poke	pok	pouch
breeks	briks	breeches
sic	sík	such
lerrick, larick	'lerįk, 'larįk	larch.

38. skl replaces E. sl in many words and is written scl or skl.

Sc.	Ph.	E.
sclice (O.Fr. esclice)	skləis	slice sclate (O.Fr. esclat)	sklet	slate sclent	sklent	$\operatorname{slant}$
sclender (O.Fr. esclendre)	'skl ${f en}d$ ər	slender.

39. sk often stands for E.  $sh = \int$ .

skelf (O.E. scilfe)	skelf	shelf
skemmels (O.E. scamel)	skemlz	shambles.

40. N.B.:

$paitrick^{_1}$	'petrik	partridge acqueesh	ə′kwi∫	between.

9

41. Voiced back plosive. Corresponds to the so-called hard g in E. "gun." It often stands for E. final  $dge = \mathbf{d}\mathbf{g}$  as in:

42.	Sc.	Ph.	E.
	brig	brįg	bridge
	rig	rįg	ridge
	segg	seg	sedge.

43. g is rarely pronounced now before n as in gnaw. In Buchan it may still be heard, e.g. "a gnawing tooth" becomes a gnyauvin teeth =  $\mathbf{a}$  'gnja:ven ti $\mathbf{\theta}$ .

44. Glottal stop or plosive. This sound is produced by the sudden closing of the glottis followed by a slight plosion. It may occur before the voiceless plosives p, t, k, and sometimes before n and η. It may be heard occasionally in other positions, for instance finally in exclamation No! no?! It is most common in the Mid. region, especially between Glasgow and Stirling, but does not extend into the Southern Counties or Galloway. P very frequently takes the place of a medial or final consonant, e.g. "butter, water, that" may be pronounced 'bapər, 'wapər, δap as in the Glasgow district. The reader may use this sound before t, p, k or omit it. We have used this symbol in the extract from J. J. Bell's Wee Macgreegor.

NASALS

45. A nasal consonant is a speech sound in which the breath current is checked in some part of the mouth, but finds free passage through the nose.

m

46. Voiced lips nasal. The same sound as m in E. "more," etc. This sound differs from the stop consonant b in the fact that the breath current passes through the nose. Hence m often develops into b and b is often changed into m. Many words in Sc. have no b after m as in E. See Ph. § 9.

n

- 47. Voiced point nasal. This sound is identical with E. "n" in "no," etc. The point of the tongue touches the apex of the upper gum. Only in cases of assimilation is it advanced to the teeth, e.g. in lenth, len0, "length." In the Insular dialects it is generally of the point teeth variety.
- 48. n differs from the stop d only in one detail, viz. that the breath current passes through the nose. Hence nd may easily change into n and n develop into nd. Sc. generally has n instead of E. nd. See Ph. § 26 (1).
  - 49. Note n for E. 1 and E. r in

Sc.	Ph.	E.
flannen	'flanən	flannel
garten	'gertən	garter

and the loss of n in upo',  $\mathbf{a'po} = "upon."$

50.  $\bf n$  takes the place of  $\bf \eta$  (see Ph. § 51) by assimilation in:

Sc.	Ph.	E.
lenth	lεnθ	length
strenth	stren0	strength

ŋ

- 51. Voiced back nasal. In this sound the breath current is checked between the back of the tongue and the soft palate and finds egress through the nose. It is practically the stop g nasalized. The sound is heard in E. "song."
- 52. It is written ng at the end of a syllable and n before a back consonant.

Sc.	Ph.	E.
bink	bţŋk	shelf
gang	gaŋ	go hing	hţŋ	hang
singe	sţŋ	singe.

53. In words of the following class, g is not heard in Sc.:

hungry	'haŋrı
langer	'laŋər
single	sįŋl

54. The E. verbal termination ing is replaced by  $\mathbf{tn}$ , or more commonly  $\mathbf{sn}$  in Sc. Most Sc. dialects have lost the distinction between the old Pres. Part. in an(d) and the infinitive or verbal noun in in(g). The Caithness and Southern dialects still mark the distinction.

Sicna gutterin a noor saw.

'stknə 'gatərin ə nur sar.

"Such messing I never saw."

Fat ir ye gutteran aboot.

fat 14 jı 'gatə1an ə'but.

"What are you messing about?"

Nicolson's Caithness Dialect, p. 19.

The heale beakin o' neuw beak'n breid 'at schui was thràng beakand yestreen.

δε hiəl 'biəkin o niu 'biəkŋ brid ət  $\int \phi$  waz θraŋ 'biəkan je'strin.

"The whole baking of new baked bread that she was busy baking last night."

Murray's Dialect of the Sth. Counties of Sc. p. 211.

55. The breathed nasals  $\mathbf{m}$ ,  $\mathbf{n}$ ,  $\mathbf{n}$ , are not regular sounds in most of the Sc. dialects;  $\mathbf{m}$  may be heard in the exclamation  $\mathbf{m}\mathbf{m}\mathbf{m} = iphm$ !

η occurs in the Shetland dialect:

knee ŋŋi: knee buncle bjɔŋkl a knot or lump.

56. Voice front nasal. Raise the front of the tongue (as in j) until it blocks the breath current across the middle of the hard palate, then drive the voice through the opened nose-passage and the result is the sound  $\mathbf{p}$ . Heard in Fr. signé, It. degni, Sp. cañon, Port. minha. In Sc. this sound survives only in the dialect of the Sth. Counties. In Middle Scots it was written  $n_3$ , (cf.  $l_3$  Ph. § 61); this  $n_3$  was confused with  $n_2$  and hence arose the modern spelling pronunciation of some proper names that had originally  $\mathbf{p}$ .

This old sound is now generally represented by  $\boldsymbol{\eta}$  or  $\boldsymbol{\eta} \boldsymbol{j}$  or  $\boldsymbol{n} \boldsymbol{j}$ , e.g.:

Ph.	Mod. Sc.	Ph.	E.
_'fepit	feinyit	'feŋıt (rare)	feigned

57. Words like "sing" and "reign" (Fr. règne) were rhymes or half-rhymes until a comparatively recent period:

"Yes, in the righteous ways of God With gladness they shall sing,
For great's the glory of the Lord
Who shall for ever reign."

Scottish Metrical Psalms (138. 5).

58. Note form  $drucken \begin{cases} dr A k n \\ dr A k \eta \end{cases}$  "drunken."

LATERALS

- 59. Voiced point lateral. (a) This sound is formed by the point of the tongue touching the apex of the upper gum while the breath current escapes by the side or sides of the tongue. The back of the tongue is not raised. This is the sound that is commonly heard in E. words beginning with 1. It does not ring so sharp and clear as Fr. 1, in which the point of the tongue is always more advanced—touching the teeth. This form of 1 is rare in Sc.
- 60. Voiced point-back lateral. (b) This variety of  $\mathbf{l}$  is formed in the same way as (a) except that the back of the tongue is also raised as for the vowel  $\mathbf{u}$  or  $\mathbf{o}$ . The acoustic effect is that of a deeper sound. It is common in E. after a vowel or consonant. In the E. little the first l is (a) and the second (b). In Sc. little both l's are of the (b) variety and the vowel is not  $\mathbf{r}$  as in E. but  $\mathbf{l}$  or  $\mathbf{o}$  or  $\mathbf{A}$ .
- 61. Voiced front lateral. (c) In this sound the front, i.e. the middle of the tongue, presses against the hard palate and the breath current escapes at the side or sides of the tongue. The French call this sound l mouillé. It is replaced now in Standard French by j but survives in the dialects and it is heard also in It. egli, Sp. llano, Port. filho. It is still used in Sth. Sc. (see Murray's Dialect of the Southern Counties of Scotland, p. 124), but in the other dialects it has been replaced by 1 or 1j. Its phonetic symbol is A. In Middle Scots this A was written l3 (cf. n3, Ph. § 56). The printers confused this digraph with lz and this new spelling has influenced the pronunciation of some words; e.g. Dal3ell was printed Dalzell and many people now pronounce it dal'zel instead of dal'jel or the popular dr'el and da'el.

Middle Scots.	Ph.	Mod. Sc.	Ph.
bailzie	'be\i	baillie	'bəili, 'bel j ı
spulzie	'spyʎɪ	spulyie	'spylı, 'spulı
tailzeour	'te\ur	teyler	'təil j ər, 'tel j ər.

- 62. When l occurs between back consonants, a peculiar sound is often heard in Sc., which is formed in the back of the mouth by a narrowing of the breath passage. This sound may be heard instead of 1 (b) in such phrases as muckle gowk, "big fool," muckle gweed, "much good."
- 63. In our general texts, we shall use only the symbol 1 denoting in most cases the voiced point-back lateral.
- 64. After short back vowels in Sc., I became a vowel and formed a diphthong with the preceding vowel.
- (1) When the preceding vowel was a, the resulting diphthong au was monophthongized at an early period into a:, sometimes shortened.

Sc.	Ph.	E.
ba	ba:	ball
ha	ha:	hàll
cauk	ka:k	chalk
hause	ha:s	halse (neck)
palmie	'pa:mį	a stroke on the hand
saut	sait	salt
scaud	ska:d	scald
Wattie	'watı	Walter.

In Mid. Sc. this a: is also pronounced o:.

(2) of becomes ou and remains so in Sth. Sc. (Ph. § 209). In the other dialects ou has been levelled under au (Ph. § 207).

bowe	bau	boll
cowt	kaut	colt
knowe	knau	knoll
powe	рли	poll
rowe	rau	roll.

(3) ŭl became uu and then u:, sometimes shortened to u and in stressless position unrounded to A.

buik	buk	bulk
coom	kum	culm
couter	'kutər	culter
foo	fu:	full

Sc.	Ph.	E.
foomart, fun	nart1 'fumərt	fulmart
poo, pu'	pu:	pull
poopit	'pupit	pulpit
shoother	′∫uðər	shoulder
sud	sad, sud	should.

65. The letter "l" in the above cases was retained in the written language long after it ceased to be sounded. Its appearance came to indicate a long vowel or diphthong and consequently it was often inserted in words to which it did not belong etymologically. Examples of this curious spelling may be found in Modern Sc.

nolt	naut	neat (cattle)
chalmer	't∫a:mər	chamber.

This intrusive "1" was sometimes even pronounced, thus the "Nolt Loan" in Arbroath, Forfar, is now pronounced nolt lon.

66. Note 1 for n in chimley 'tfimli, 'tfamli chimney.

THE TRILL

- 67. Voice point trilled. This sound is formed by the trilling of the point of the tongue against the upper gum. It occurs in words in all positions.
- 68. In Celtic districts a point fricative consonant with the point of the tongue turned backwards is commonly heard, the symbol for which is 1. The voice point fricative, commonly called untrilled r, is not a Sc. sound.

69. In many Sc. words as compared with E., r exchanges position with the preceding or following vowel.

Sc.	Ph.	Ε.
corss	kors, kors	cross
girse	gţrs	grass
Curshanks	'k∧r∫əŋks	Cruickshanks
kirsen	'kţrsən	christen

brunt	brant	burnt
crub	krab	kerb
truff	traf	turf
rhubrub	'rubrab	rhubarb
provribs	'provribz	proverbs
wrat	wrat	wart.

70. In many speakers a vowel is heard (1) before "r" in words like shrub fərab shrill fəral.

(2) Occasionally after r, before 1 and m, as in:

farrel 'faral a quarter of cakes airm 'eram arm worm 'waram

- 71. In the Avoch dialect of the Black Isle, Rosshire, r takes the place of n in words like knife, knee, knock, etc. = kraif, kri, krok.
- 72. In the N.E. fre: = from becomes fer. In Sth. Sc., an unvoiced r is heard in some parts in words like three, thrae (frae), throat, ri:, ræ:, rot.

FRICATIVES

73. A fricative is a consonant breathed or voiced where the breath passage is narrowed so that the breath has to force its way out with audible friction.

f

74. Breathed lip-teeth fricative. This consonant is formed between the lower lip and upper teeth as in E. f.

v

- 75. v is the voiced counterpart of the last sound and is also similar to E. v.
  - 76. f takes the place of E. v in the plurals of some nouns.

Sc.	Ph.	E.
$knifes^1$	knəifs	knives
leafs	lifs	leaves (sb.)
wifes	waifs	wives.

77. f and v often disappear medially and finally in Sc.

e'en	i:n	even ower	Aur	over
weel-faurt	'wil 'fa:rt	well favoured doo	du:	dove, pigeon
gie, gya, gae	gi:, gja:, ge:	give, gave lea'	li:	leave
lo'e	lu:	love
pree	pri:	prove, taste
shirra	'∫trə	sheriff.

78. f and v are often lost after 1 and r.

del'	del	delve
twal'	twal	twelve
sel'	sel	$\operatorname{self}$
ser'	seir	serve
hairst	herst	harvest
siller	'sįlər	silver, money.

79. f for 0 occurs in 'fø:rzdt, Fuirsday, "Thursday," in a number of Scottish dialects. The N.E. has Feersday, 'fi:rzdt, also frok for throck, "the lower part of the plough to which the share is fastened." In Roxburgh feet = fit is used for theet, "the rope, chain or trace by which the horse draws the plough." In Caithness, "thresh" (vb.) and meeth, "sultry" are pronounced fief, mif. Cf. prov. E. fink for think and Russ. Feodor = Theodore.

- 80. For f as a substitute for m see Ph. § 122.
- 81. v is often a substitute for an original w (1) initially before r and (2) finally. This change is mostly confined to the N.E.

82. Breathed point-teeth fricative. This sound is formed between the point of the tongue and the upper teeth. It is the same sound as is heard in E. "thin" and is written th in Sc.

Sc.	Ph.	E.
baith	beθ .	both
bothy	iθcd'	bothy
graith	greθ	harness
tho'	θο: -	though
thole	θο1	endure
threip	θrip	insist upon, argue.

83. (1)  $\theta$  may replace xt in some Northern dialects in:

micht, mith	mıθ	might (vb.)
dochter, dother	'doθər	daughter.

drouth and drucht, druθ, draxt are heard in Sc. for "drought" and "dryness."

In Middle Sc. cht is a spelling for an original th in many words, e.g. aicht, baicht, facht, for aith (oath), baith (both), faith.

(2)  $\theta$  replaces  $\mathbf{f}$  in Sth. Sc. in frae, i.e. "from," =  $\theta$ ræ:,  $\theta$ ræ (unaccented).

84. Voiced point-teeth fricative. As in E. "the" and written th in Sc.

Ph.	E.
ðe:	those ðįr	these don	yon, that
'ðon $d$ ər	yonder
ðu:	thou.
	ðe: ðir ðon 'ðondər

85. Sc. has developed 8 from an original d where it does not occur in E., generally before er. See, however, Ph. §§ 30, 31.

blether	'bleðər	bladder
consither	kən'sıðər	consider ether	'eðər	adder
ether	'eðər	udder
lether	'leðər	ladder
poother	'puðer	powder
shoother	'∫uðer	shoulder.

These words may also be heard with d probably through the influence of E.

86.  $\boldsymbol{\theta}$  or  $\boldsymbol{\delta}$  is often lost in final position.

fro	fro:	froth
lay	le:	lathe
mou	mu:	mouth
quo	kwo:	quoth
unca	'Aŋkə	very or extraordinary.
	S VANO	From O.E. uncū b with change of accent.
wi'	wi	with.

87. In Sc. generally 3 is lost in the relative that which becomes 3 or t. In the N.E. the dropping of 3 in the pronominals this, that, they, their, there, was once universal and may still be noticed in some parts and with old speakers. In Caithness it is the rule yet. In the Strathearn dialect of Perthshire, when the combines with the prepositions of, in, at, on, to, with, by, the result is ee = i, e.g. dhe haid ee toon, 59 hed i tun = "the head of the town"; ee big hoos, i btg hus = "in the mansion house" (Wilson's Lowland Scotch, pp. 110—112). In Galloway we may hear such phrases as i' e' toon, i e tun; intae e' inns, 'inte e inz, "into the inns"; i' e' mornin, i e 'mornin, "in the morning" (Trotter's Galloway Gossip).

- 88. Breathed fore-blade fricative. The same sound as in E. "some." The breath forces its way between the blade (just behind the point) and the apex of the upper gum, the breath passage is shaped like a pipe, the sides of the tongue pressing against the upper teeth.
- 89. As in E., s is generally written initially with s, sometimes with c in romance words before e—medially by ss and s (especially in derivatives), finally by ss, se and ce. se and ce are used as in the corresponding E. words, but less regularly.

Sc.	Ph.	E.
soop	sup	sweep

cess	SES	a tax
gress	gres	grass
lass	las	girl
loss	los	lose
corss	kors, kors	cross
crouse	krus	bold, brisk
grice	grəis	a young pig
'tice	təis	entice
wyce, wise	wəis	wise.

90. In the Sh. dialect fornenst appears instead of foranent. See Ph. § 19. We may have here a metathesis form for Wyclif's anentis, influenced perhaps also by such words as against. In the English dialects also the st forms of this word are quite common. See E.D.D. under forenent.

91. Note s for E. ∫ (sh):

tc.)

Z

- 92. Voiced fore-blade fricative. Same sound as in E. "zone."
- 93. z occurs medially and finally. Medially it is generally written s, but z and zz are also used by writers who wish to indicate the exact pronunciation. Finally z is written s (1) in words like is, his, was, has, which originally had an s sound: (2) in the plural termination s and es after voiced sounds: in other cases se and ze are used.

Sc.	Ph.	E.

roose, reese, rooze	ru:z, ri:z, rø:z	praise grieves	gri:vz	farm bailiffs
lugs	lngz	ears
mutches	'matfəz	women's caps.

94. N.B. In words ending in sure the pronunciation is z, though E. influence has also introduced 3.

layser 'le:zər, 'li:zər, 'le:ʒər leisure pleiser 'ple:zər, 'pli:zər, 'ple:ʒər, 'pli:ʒər pleasure.

95. Breathed after-blade fricative. The after-blade is raised towards the after-gum and the point of the tongue hangs down. The breath passage is wider and shallower than for s.

96. This sound is generally written sh in Sc., older sch.

Sc.	Ph.	E.
shim	∫rm	hoe
shogue	∫og	shake or swing
cowshen	'k∧u∫ən	caution
gabbie- $gash$	'gabi'gas	chatterbox.

97.  $\int$  takes the place of E. s in many Sc. words: occasionally the original s spelling is retained.

(1) Initially:

$schir^{\scriptscriptstyle 1}$	∫ţr	sir shoo	∫u:	sew •
shunners	'∫anərz	cinders
suet	∫uət	suet
suit	∫ut, ∫yt	suit
sune	∫yn	soon.

(2) Medially:

Elshiner	'el(mər	Alexander
gushet	'g∧∫ət	gusset
offishers	'ofi∫ərz	officers

mm∫,	mince
'notif	notice
rın∫	rince.
	her∫ mın∫ 'notı∫

t∫

98. These two sounds make a sort of consonantal diphthong. Initially they are written ch: medially and finally tch, since ch in these two positions generally stands for  $\mathbf{x}$  in Sc. Some Romance words still retain ch for  $\mathbf{t}\mathbf{f}$  when no ambiguity arises.

Sc.	Ph.	E.
channer	't∫anər	mutter'
chowks	t∫∧uks	jaws
latch	lat	idle (v.)
wutchuk	'wat∫ak	swallow (bird)
mooch	mut∫	sneak about
pooch	put∫	pocket.

99. tf often takes the place of E. d3.

	parritch -	'parit	porridge
	marriage	'merit)	marriage
Note	eetch	it∫	adze.

100. In some districts of Scotland, e.g. Caithness, Avoch in Eastern Ross, Cromarty, Chirnside in Berwicksh., f takes the place of tf in many words initially, e.g. There's az gyd fizz t 'firset əz wəz 'ivər foud wi fafts, There's as gude cheese in Chirnside as was ever chewed with chafts (jawbones). On the other hand we find chop, tfop, in Nth. Sc. for "shop," and chingle, tfipl in general use = "shingle."

3

101. Voiced after-blade fricative. Same sound as in E. "pleasure."

Sc.	Ph.	E.
pushion	pu:zən, pazən1	poison
fushion	'fu:zən, 'fazən²	pith
Fraser	'fre:zər	Fraser.

d3

102. This consonant diphthong has the same spellings as in E. Initially j, medially dg, finally dge or in Romance words ge, when no ambiguity arises.

Sc.	Ph.	E.
jaud	dza:d	jade
$jile \ jeyle \}$ .	dʒəil	jail
jouk	dzuk	duck
jow	dzau	toll
fodgel	'fodʒəl	fat

breenge }	brind3	plunge
ginge-bread	'dzįndzbrid	ginger-bread
waages	'wa:dzəz	wages
wadge	wadz	wedge.

103. A number of words, generally of Romance origin, beginning with  $d\mathbf{z}$ , are spelled with  $\mathbf{g}$  when the vowel following is  $\mathbf{i}$ ,  $\mathbf{\varepsilon}$ ,  $\mathbf{i}$ ,  $\mathbf{t}$ .

geal	dzil	freeze
gee	dzi:	a fit of temper
gentie)	'dzentį)	gentle gentle	dzentl∫	genne
geeble	dzibl	splash
gigot	'dʒɪgət, 'dʒɪgət	leg of mutton gimp	dzimp, dzimp	slender.

Many of these are also written with j, no doubt to avoid ambiguity, e.g. jeal, jeable, jimp.

104. In N.E. Aberdeenshire gang is pronounced dath from jtn (see Ph. § 32) from gith from gth.

j

- 105. Voiced front fricative. It is the sound of initial y in E. young, and is generally so written in Sc.
- 106. (1) It occurs initially (a) arising out of an earlier diphthong:

Sc.	Ph.	E.
yerl	jerl	earl
$\left. egin{array}{l} yerth \ yird \end{array}  ight\}$	jerθ	earth
$yird$ $\}$	jįrd	carun
yernin	'jernən, 'jţrnən	rennet yin	jın	one
yowe	jΛu	ewe.

(b) From fronted g:

yeld	jeld	barren
yett	jet	gate.

(2) Before u followed by a back consonant or by r, written iu or eu or ui.

beuk, biuk	bjuk	book
heuk	hjuk	hook
kyeuk	kjuk (N.E.)	cook
muir	mju:r	moor
leuch	ljux	laughed.

(3) In some words it takes the place of 1 in some dialects.

ploo pju:	plough
bloo bju:	blue
ploy pjoi	pastime
kyuk (Strathearn, kjak Perthsh.)	cloak yakes (neighbour- jeks	laiks, marbles staked hood of Glasgow)	in the game.

107. j is dropped in your = ir (N.E. and Sth. Sc.) and in ye (unemphatic) = i in other dialects.

x

- 108. Breathed back fricative. The final consonant sound in Sc. loch, lox and in Ger. ach. When the preceding vowel is a front one the tongue advances almost into the front position as in laigh, lex+ (low), heich, hix+ (high). It then resembles ch in Ger. ich but in our texts we have not thought it necessary to use a separate symbol.
- 109. In Orkney and Shetland  ${\bf x}$  takes the place of  ${\bf k}$  before  ${\bf w}$ , thus:

question becomes 'xwestjen.

110. In many of the Mid. dialects  $\mathbf{x}$  stands for  $\mathbf{\theta}$  before  $\mathbf{r}$ , thus:

twa or three becomes 'twaxri, thrice ,, xrəis,
throo ,, xru:,
throat ,, xrot.

111. In Sth. Sc.  $\mathbf{x}$  occurs with simultaneous lip-rounding after a back vowel in words like lauch (laugh), leuwch (laughed, O.E.  $hl\bar{o}h$ ), lowch (loch), ruwch (rough), thus written phonetically lax\*, ljux\*, lox\*, rax\*. The existence of this rounded  $\mathbf{x}$  has to be postulated to explain the development of O.E. final  $h = \mathbf{x}$  into a vowel or  $\mathbf{f}$  as in modern English "dough," "laugh." See note to Ph. § 160.

ç

112. Breathed front fricative. Formed between the front of the tongue and the hard palate. It is similar to the sound in German ich and is the breathed counterpart of j. It is heard in Sc. often in the beginning of words, instead of h as in Hugh, hook, cju:, cjuk. It is also heard finally after a front vowel (more especially i) as a substitute for x, thus:

Sc. Ph. E. high.

1 e.g. Stirling.

In general the tongue is never so far advanced on the roof of the mouth as for the German sound, and the sound might be described as an advanced  $\mathbf{x}$ . In the general texts  $\mathbf{x}$  will be used indifferently for the back and advanced forms of the sound written ch.

W

- 113. Voiced lips-back fricative. This sound is written and pronounced in much the same way as in E. The back of the tongue rises simultaneously with the rounding of the lips. w used to be pronounced regularly before r in words like wright, wring, write, wrong, wren, wretch, wrought, but its use is becoming rarer. Sometimes a distinct vowel is heard between w and r.
- 114. In the North East w becomes v. This v was originally, no doubt, a bilabial sound like the Ger. u in Quelle, but it is now labio-dental. vrixt, vrait, vran, vrat $\int = wright$ , write, wrong, wretch are still current in the N.E. Sc.
- 115. w is lost very frequently before vowels, especially before u.

Sc.	Ph.	E.
oo (Sth. Sc.)	u:	we
00'	u:	wool
athin	ə'0įn	within athoot	ə'θut	without ook	uk	week
soom	sum	swim
soop	sup	sweep
towmont	'taument	twelvemonth
umman	'Amən	woman
toonty (Sth. Sc.)	'tunti	twenty.

116. Occasionally w is developed from u as in E. "one" =  $\mathbf{w} \mathbf{\Lambda} \mathbf{n}$ .

wir (unemphatic) wir, war, wər our onerstan wunər'stan understand.

117. For its development in N.E. Sc. before an original  $\bar{o}$  see Ph. § 152, and in Sth. Sc. before initial o see Ph. § 210.

- 118. In some of the Sc. dialects  $\mathbf{w}$  often replaces  $\mathbf{v}$ : for v=w see Ph. § 81. We have a similar phenomenon in the Cockney speech of Dickens' time, e.g. winegar and weal for vinegar and veal. So in Sc. we may hear wirtuous, weggybun, wanish, for virtuous, vagabond, vanish. If  $\mathbf{v}$  was at one time bi-labial, the confusion between it and  $\mathbf{w}$ , in Middle Sc. texts, may be easily understood.
- 119. w sometimes takes the place of E. j, developing in most cases out of an original u.

Sc.	Ph.	E.
act wall y	'aktwəli	actually anwall	'anwəl	annual gradwal	'gradwəl	gradual richtwis (O.E. rihtwīs)	'rįxtwis	righteous.

Μ

- 120. This sound is produced in the same way as w, only breath is used instead of voice.
- 121. wh is the common modern spelling, taking the place of the older quh, qwh. In some dialects the back action of the tongue is very marked so that the result might be represented almost by  $\mathbf{x}\mathbf{M}$  or  $\mathbf{x}^{\mathbf{m}}$ .  $\mathbf{M}$  is almost unknown in Sth. Eng. but may be heard in the North of England. It is the rule in Scotland in all words spelled wh. Examples:

Sc.	Ph.	E.
whan, quhan	man	when whare, quhar	ma:r	where whitrit, quhitrit	'matrit, 'mitrit	weasel whilk, quhilk	milk, wylk	which wha, quha	ma:, me:	who.

- 121 (a). For ma in Sth. Sc. = huə see Ph. § 210.
- 122. In the N.E. the back action of the tongue has been eliminated, producing (1) a bi-labial f and (2) later on, the lip-teeth f of ordinary speech. Hence the above words are pronounced fan, far, etc., fan, fa:r, etc. in the N.E.

123. In the dialect of Avoch (Eastern Ross) and Cromarty m is lost in the interrogatives wha, whase, what, whan, whare, which become a, us, at, an, ar, respectively, e.g.

"Where are you going, boy?" a:r ou geen, bjox?

h

- 124. Breathed glottal fricative. This sound is produced by the friction of the outgoing breath on the edges of the vocal chords, or against the interior walls of the larynx. It is really a stressed breath. Hence its liability to disappear to consciousness when the syllable in which it occurs loses the stress. As in E., words with the minimum of stress tend to lose the "h," e.g. him, her, his. See Ph. § 217 (b). On the other hand, notice that us as when stressed becomes haz, hig.
- 125. As in E., the pronoun "it" has generally lost its aspirate, but unlike E. the "h" may be retained under emphasis, e.g. "You are it," in the game, i.e. the person who has to pay the penalty, e.g. to stay in the house, becomes in Sc. ye're hit, jir hat. For other examples see Gr. § 23.
- 126. In some dialects the "h" is omitted or inserted contrary to E. usage, e.g. in the fisher speech of Avoch and Cromarty in the Black Isle, in Footdee Aberdeenshire, and in Cove in Kincardineshire. In his History of Buckhaven, Fifeshire, Dougal Graham (18th century) records a like peculiarity in that fishing village. If we may judge from the literary texts and public records that have come down to us, there was a similar hesitancy in the use of h in Middle Scots on the part of many writers.

VOWELS

127. A vowel is a speech sound in which the breath current, normally voiced, issues from the mouth without a check—complete or partial—and without audible friction.

128. TERMS USED IN DESCRIBING VOWELS

High indicates that the tongue is raised as far as it can go without producing audible friction, the mouth opening being small.

Low indicates that the tongue is as far down as possible, and the mouth-opening at its maximum.

Mid indicates that the tongue is midway between high and low and that the mouth is half open.

Front indicates that the highest point on the surface of the tongue is in the front and opposite the middle of the hard palate. The short slope is to the front and the long slope to the back.

Back indicates that the highest point on the surface of the tongue is in the back and opposite the soft palate. The long slope is to the front.

Central indicates that there is a very slight rise on the surface of the tongue midway between the point and the back. The tongue lies very nearly flat on the floor of the mouth in the position for easy breathing. Other names used by phoneticians for this position are mixed, flat, neutral.

Tense indicates that the muscles of the tongue are drawn tight, a condition of the tongue that generally produces a clearer and more ringing sound.

Lax indicates that the muscles of the tongue are relaxed so that the upper surface is not so convex as in the tense sound.

Rounded indicates that the contraction of the lips has come into play to modify the sound. In back vowels the cheeks also play an important part in the production of the sound.

NOTE TO VOWEL TABLES

Literary English and Scots are descended from sister dialects of Teutonic speech in Britain. The first comes from an East Midland form, the second from the Northern or Anglian dialect which from a very early period was spoken between the Humber and the Forth and subsequently extended to all the Scottish Lowlands. The only Old English dialect that has come down to us in a satisfactory literary form is the West Saxon speech of King Alfred. This dialect has been written with great phonetic accuracy and as we cannot put our hands on the original form of Teutonic from which all these dialects presumably have sprung, it serves as a very valuable test of the development of the vowels in English and Scots. Naturally West Saxon stands in closer relationship to the Teutonic languages of the Continent than do its modern collateral descendants, and so it serves to link up our modern dialects with Teutonic speech in general.

FRONT VOWELS

131. High front tense. The tongue occupies the forepart of the mouth, the point rests on or close behind the lower teeth ridge and, behind the point, the tongue arches up towards the teeth ridge and hard palate. The front of the tongue is opposite the middle of the hard palate, the space between being just sufficient to allow of the egress of the breath current without audible friction. The muscles of the tongue are tense, and the lips form a large ellipse with the corners well apart. This vowel is heard in E. deep; in Fr. ici; in Ger. Biene, ihn; in Sp. and It. vino. In Sth. E., i is either much prolonged or diphthongized, when i becomes ri or rj, thus deep is drip or drjp.

132. In Sc. i is spelled (1) ee, (2) ie, (3) ei, (4) ea, (5) e-e.

For final i diphthongised in Sth. Sc., see Ph. § 203.

133. N.B. Words of Romance origin retain this vowel in Sc., e.g.:

bapteese	bap'ti:z	baptise
ceevil	si:vl	civil obleedge	ə'blidʒ	oblige
peety	'piti	pity
poseetion	pə'zi∫n	position.

I

134. High front lax. This vowel is formed in very nearly the same position as for i, only the tongue is a little lower and its upper surface less convex owing to the muscles being relaxed. It is identical with the vowel in E. hit etc., Ger. mit, nicht. It occurs also as the first element in the Sth. E. diphthong in "sea, heat," etc.; sri, hrit, srj, hrjt.

135. In Sc. 1 is generally spelled with the letter "i":

Sc.	Ph.	E.
brither	'brīðər	brother
fivver	'fivər	fever
mither	'mɪðər	mother.

136. This sound or  $(\mathbf{z})$  frequently takes the place of  $\mathbf{\Delta}$  especially before a nasal.

nit	nit	nut
simmer	'sımər	summer
sin	sin	son
sin	sin	sun

sipper	'sipər	supper
winner	'winər	wonder.

137. In Sc. Dialect generally, the pure r sound is not so common as in E., its place being taken by t.

Į

- 138. High front lax lowered. The tongue is still further lowered from the r position until it is at least half way down to the mid position. The vowel in acoustic effect is midway between r and c, i.e. between the sounds in E. "pit" and "pet." In some dialects, especially in the North, the tongue is flattened as well as lowered, so that the sound in acoustic effect approaches e. See Ph. § 188. In other dialects c (see Ph. § 144) is heard instead of t in many words in all positions, e.g. pit becomes pet. In E. the second vowel in "pity" is often pronounced as t.
- 139. The vowel  $\mathbf{z}$  is generally spelled "i" in Mod. Sc., and in final position (2) ie or (3) y. In Middle Sc. it was generally written "y."

	Sc.	Ph.	E.
(1)	find	$\mathbf{fin}d$	find

(2)	tassie	'tasį	cup.
(3)	tuppenny	'tįpnį, 'tapnį	twopenny

е

- 140. Mid front tense. The tongue is now lower than for any of the previous vowels, and the mouth more open. As the tongue is tense, the acoustic effect is sharp and clear. e is heard in E. mate; Fr. été: Ger. See; Du. reel. It is always diphthongized in Sth. E.: thus mate is mert or mert.
- 141. The most common spellings for  $e^1$  in Sc. are (1)  $ai^2$ , (2) ae, (3) a-e, (4)  $ay^2$ .

	Sc.	Ph.	E.
(1)	mair	meir	more

	stravaig	strə'veg	wander aimlessly.
(2)	blae	ble:	blue, livid
-	mae	me:	more
	strae	stre:	straw
	tae	te:	toe.

<sup>1</sup> In some Sc. dialects, e.g. Morayshire, when e is short or half-long, it changes somewhat in quality. The sound is formed with the tongue lower and less tense as in baith, ane, bale (fester) =  $\mathbf{be}^{\mathsf{T}}\mathbf{0}$ ,  $\mathbf{e}^{\mathsf{T}}\mathbf{n}$ ,  $\mathbf{be}^{\mathsf{T}}\mathbf{1}$  which might be written also  $\mathbf{b}_{\mathsf{E}}\mathbf{0}$ ,  $\mathbf{e}_{\mathsf{T}}$ ,  $\mathbf{b}_{\mathsf{E}}\mathbf{1}$ .

The spellings ai, ay, for the vowel  $\mathbf{e}$  have a curious origin. They indicated first a diphthong as in dai, mai, sayde, paie, for "day, may, said, pay." In course of time this diphthong was monophthongized, resulting in a long vowel. The old spelling was retained for this long vowel. The i or y came to be regarded as a sign of length and was later extended to mark length in the vowels e and o and u. Again in words like name, schame, O.E. nama, scamu, the a standing in open position (see Ph. § 146 (2)) had been lengthened in the 13th century and the suffix e, representing nearly all the old terminations, had come to be regarded as a mark of length and was added to many words which had originally a long a, as bane O.E.  $b\bar{a}n$ , "a bone." Thus there arose two ways of indicating a long a, viz.: ai, ay, and a + consonant +e.

	Old Sc.	Middle Sc.	Ei.
	batale	bataill	battle
	have	haiff	have
	mare	mair	more.

	Sc.	Ph.	E.
(3)	blate	blet	shy
, ,	quate	kwe:t	quiet.
(4)	splay	sple:	split.

- 142. In Sth. Sc. a diphthong is used instead of e in words derived from original long a or open a (see Ph. § 146 (2)), e.g. stane, stren, O.E.  $st\bar{a}n$ , hate (vb.), hret, O.E. hatian.
- 143. In Forfar, Kincardine, Aberdeen and on the Banffshire coast, this e becomes i before n as bin, stin = E. "bone, stone"; O.E.  $b\bar{a}n$ ,  $st\bar{a}n$ .

144. Mid front lax. In Sc. Dialect, the tongue is always lower than for e, the mouth more open and the tongue-surface less convex, owing to the laxness of the muscles. E. "men, pen," etc. Ger. Fest, Thräne.

145. \varepsilon is spelled in Sc. (1) e, (2) ai.

	Sc.	Ph.	E.
(1)	ettercap	'stərkap	spider, spitfire
	ben	ben	inside room
	blether	'bleðər	bladder
	bress	bres	brass •
	gless	gles	glass
	ken	ken	know.
(2)	aipple	εpl	apple
	bairn	bern	child
	cairn	kern	heap of stones
	mainner	'menər	manner
	saiddle	sedl	saddle.

Note e may also be heard in (2).

146. Many words in Sc. have an e or e vowel where E. has an a vowel. This is frequently the case (1) in words ending in r+cons., and s+cons., e.g. E. "arm, harm, sharp, yard," become in Sc. erm, herm, ferp, jerd, and "brass, fast, glass," become, bres, fest, gles; (2) in words where a short a (ea, a) stood originally in an open syllable. A syllable is said to be open when it ends with a vowel as a in "la-dy" and ow in "low." When the syllable ends in a consonant, it is said to be closed as in "lad, bath." In early Middle English and Sc. the short vowels, a, e, o, in open syllables were lengthened and had a different development from the same vowel in a closed syllable. Thus O.E. baðian becomes bathe, but O.E. bæð becomes bath. E. "glad" comes from O.E. nom. glæd, but Sc. "glaid" from an oblique case of the adjective like glade or gladum, where a was in open position. So Sc. 'feðər goes back to Nom. Sing. fæder, but E. "father" to some form like fædres or fædras, where æ is in closed position. Chaucer's "small" in smale foules would give Mod. Eng. "smail," a form which actually occurs in the proper name Smail and the Sc. place-name Smailholm. The nominative smæl is the ancestor of Sc. "sma'," and E. "small," by regular process of change in each of the dialects.

147. High front lax rounded. y is an r pronounced with lip-rounding. It is like the vowel in Ger. Hütte, and is generally heard short and occurs before all consonants except r and voiced fricatives. In a few dialects this vowel is tense and very nearly equivalent to Fr. u in mur.

ø

149. Mid front tense rounded. In pronouncing this vowel, the tongue is in the position for e (Ph. § 140), with the lips slightly rounded. The vowel eu in Fr. peu has very nearly the same sound.  $\phi$  occurs in final position and before voiced fricatives, such as z, v,  $\eth$  and r, and is normally long.

150.  $\phi$  is written (1) ui, (2) u + e, (3) oe, (4) o, (5) oo. Ph. (1) cruive krø:v pen for live stock fuird fø:rd ford muirmøir moor puir pør poor. (2) excuse (vb.) eks'kjø:z excuse use (vb.) jø:z use. (3) shoe (ø: shoe. dø: (4) do do. (5) too tø: too.

151. The original vowel in most of the words containing y or  $\phi$  appears to have been a long o in O.E. and Scan. and u in Fr., e.g. O.E. mona, Sc. myn; Scan. hrosa, Sc. rø:z; Fr. user, Sc.  $j\phi$ :z. This o (or u) was fronted and became  $\phi$ .  $\phi$  remained before voiced fricatives and r and in final position, but in other cases it was generally raised and shortened to y. In many districts of the Mid. area, recent unrounding has taken place so that y becomes I and \( \phi \) becomes \( \mathbf{e}. \) Thus fruit, use (sb.), shoon become frit, jis, (in, but puir, use (vb.), shoe become peir, jeiz, fer. In some districts this unrounding is so recent that middleaged people remember the difference between their own sound and that of the older generation. In other cases the change goes back to the seventeenth century. In the Records of Stitchil<sup>1</sup> (1674) there is an entry of "5/6 as the price of 'shin," i.e. "shoes." Another instance from Kirk Session Records is given in Henry's History of the Parish Church of Galston (Ayrshire) under date

Oct. 1635: "The collection to the pare (i.e. poor) sall be gathered at the entrie of the people to the kirk." The conventional spelling disguises this change but it crops out occasionally, e.g. in the song of "Guid Ale." Burns writes:

I sell'd them a' just ane by ane Guid ale keeps my heart abune.

ane and abune would make a perfect rhyme in Burns' local pronunciation, although the spelling conceals this fact:

ə seld vəm a: dzıst jın bə jın gıd jıl kips mə hert ə'bın.

See also verse 4 in Burns' poem "To a Mouse," p. 335.

152. In the N.E. this  $\phi$  vowel (derived from O.E.  $\bar{o}$ , Scan.  $\bar{o}$ , Fr. u) was raised at a very early period to  $\mathbf{y}$  without being shortened and was then unrounded to  $\mathbf{i}$ . It is possible that  $\phi$  may have been unrounded to  $\mathbf{e}$  and then raised to  $\mathbf{i}$ . In either case the result was  $\mathbf{i}$ . Thus:

N. Sc.	Ph.	Mid. Sc.	Ph.
freet	frit	fruit	fryt
meen	min	mune	myn
peer	pi:r	puir	pø:r
shee	∫i:	shoe	∫ø:
sheen	∫in	shoon	∫yn.

When a back consonant preceded the original long o, it seems to have been rounded, and a glide developed between it and the vowel, which afterwards became w. Thus:

N. Sc.	Ph.	Mid. Sc.	E.
cweed	kwid	cuid	a small tub
cweet	kwit	cuit	ankle
gweed	gwid	gude	good skweel	skwil	schule	school.

153. For heuk, heuch, etc. see Ph. § 160.

154.  $\mathbf{y}$  and  $\phi$  are eminently unstable vowels in Sc. and the variations perceptible in different districts and in close proximity are very numerous. Sometimes the distinction between  $\mathbf{y}$  and  $\phi$  does not seem to hold, or a rounded central vowel is used instead of either.

æ

155. Low front lax. This is the same sound as the vowel in Sth. Eng. man. It does not occur regularly in Mid. Scottish but may be heard in the dialect of the Southern Counties as a substitute for  $\epsilon$  in words like beg, men, pen, Berwick, Nellie. The symbol is not used in the general texts.

ę

156. Low front tense. Sth. E. "fair," fee; Fr. fête, père. This is a very broad substitute for the e of "men" in some dialects (e.g. in the Langholm dialect of Dumfries) but the symbol is not used in the general texts.

BACK VOWELS

u

157. High back tense rounded. The highest point on the surface of the tongue is in the back, the tongue is raised as far as possible without producing audible friction, its muscles are tense so that its surface bulges upwards, the lips are drawn together at the corners and protruded. E. "food, rue, blue" (in Sth. E. this vowel is often diphthongised = vu or vw); Fr. roue, foule; Ger. Buhle; It. and Sp. uno; Du. goed.

158. u is commonly spelled in Sc. (1) oo, (2) ou, (3) u':

	S.	Ph.	E.
(1)	broon	brun	brown
	c00	ku:	cow
	doo	du:	dove.
(2)	doute	dut	doubt
	goun	gun	gown
	roun(d)	$\mathbf{run}d$	round
	soun(d)	$\mathbf{sun}d$	sound (sb., vb.).
(3)	fu'	fu:	full
	pu'	pu:	pull.

- 159. In some parts of the country, e.g. in Celtic districts and in the neighbourhood of Glasgow, the tongue is decidedly advanced from the back position and a sound is produced that in acoustic effect is midway between u and y.
- 160. In the N.E. and in some parts of the Mid. area an original long o before a back consonant becomes ju<sup>1</sup> or iu.

Sc.	Ph.	E.
beuk (buik)	bjuk	book
eneuch	ə'njux	enough
heuk	hjuk	hook
heuch	hjux	crag, gully
leuch	ljux	laughed
sheuch	∫ux (from sjux)	ditch.

In the N.E. district between Moray and Caithness original long o before r has also been developed into ju.

muir	mju:r	moor
puir	pju:r	poor.

- 161. In some districts of the Mid. area the u of ju before a back consonant has been lowered and unrounded, hence eneuch, heuk, heuch, etc. become ə'njax, hjax, etc.
- 162. In the dialect of the Sth. counties, u in final position has been diphthongized, producing Au. Thus coo, poo, you become kAu, pAu, jAu.

U

163. High back law rounded. The tongue is slightly lower than for u, its surface less convex and the lips are not so pursed. Same vowel as in Sth. E., bull, full. Rare in Sc. except in the Southern Counties where it is the first element of the diphthong v, used instead of o in words like bore, bver; sole (of a shoe), svel (see Ph. § 210).

&lt;sup>1</sup> The process may have started with the rounding of the back consonant, i.e. the action of the lips used in forming  $\mathbf{o}$  may have been kept up while  $\mathbf{k}$  or  $\mathbf{x}$  was being sounded. Then a strong glide may have developed between  $\mathbf{o}$  and  $\mathbf{k}$  or  $\mathbf{x}$ . The development of leuch = "laughed" may be thus summarised, O.E.  $hl\bar{o}h$   $(h=\mathbf{x})$ ,  $hl\bar{o}h^{\mathbf{a}}$ , louh, louh,

O

164. Mid back tense rounded. The tongue is lowered from the u position but is still kept tense, the lips are less rounded. o is the same vowel sound as in E. load, rode (Sth. E. diphthongizes this sound): Fr. beau, tôt; Ger. Sohn, Boot; Du. wonen. The most frequent source of o is O.E. short o standing in open position (see Ph. § 146 (2)) and lengthened in early Middle English and Sc.

165. o is generally written (1) o, (2) o-e, (3) oa.

Sc.	Ph.	E.
(1) corn	korn	corn
horn	horn	horn.
(2) hole	hol	hole
thole	θol	bear.
(3) body	'bodı	body
foalie	'fol <sub>Į</sub>	foal
$^{\bullet}$ $woa$	wo:	whoa.

166. This vowel is frequently diphthongized in Sth. Sc. and becomes vo. See Ph. § 210.

167. Mid back law rounded. The lips are less rounded than for o and the tongue position lower. o is the same vowel as in E. cost, on, etc.; Fr. tort; It. notte; Ger. Sonne. It is quite distinct from the Sth. E. sound in cost which is a low back*rounded vowel. o is common in the Sc. of the Sth. Counties and in the North in words where an original o stood in close position (see Ph. § 146 (2)). In the Mid. districts there has been a strong tendency to make this vowel more tense, so that in many words o has completely displaced o and in others o and o seem to be used indifferently, the latter being preferred for emphatic utterance.

168. o is the common spelling of the vowel o.

Sc.	Ph.
coft (bought)	koft
frost	frost
knock (clock)	knok
lot	lot
post	post
rod	rod

169. This vowel is generally unrounded in Sc. to a when it is in contact with a lip-consonant—seemingly by a process of dissimilation.

Ph.	E.
'baðər	bother
'banət	bonnet
kraft	croft
drap	drop
hap	hop
laft	loft ·
pat	pot
rab	Rob
saft	soft
'stamık	stomach
tap	top.
	'bader 'banet kraft drap hap laft pat rab saft 'stamik

170. In districts where the original o becomes o, the vowel is unrounded to a in many words, e.g.

$bunnet^1$	'banət	bonnet
buther	'baðər	bother
munny	'manţ	many ·
$Rubbert^{_1}$	'rabərt	$\operatorname{Robert}$
$stummick^{1}$	'stamik	stomach

- 171. Low back tense rounded. The tongue is in the lowest position in the back of the mouth, but the lips are less rounded than for  $\mathbf{o}$ . The vowel occurs in E. law, cause, ball. It is common in Mid. Sc. In the North, in Galloway and in the Southern Counties it is of rare occurrence, being replaced by a broad  $\mathbf{a}$  sound. It varies over the country from  $\mathbf{o}$  to  $\mathbf{o}$  and  $\mathbf{o}$  on the one hand and to  $\mathbf{a}$  and  $\mathbf{a}$  (in Celtic areas) on the other.
- 172. (1) a, (2) aa, (3) a, (4) aw, (5) au, (6) al are the most common spellings of  $\mathbf{q}$ . All the words given in Ph. § 176 may be pronounced with  $\mathbf{q}$  instead of  $\mathbf{a}$ .

- 173. Low back lax. This is the most open sound of a which is heard very commonly in E. father, Fr. pâte, Ger. Name.
- 174. A lighter sound of a is often heard where the mouth is only half open and which might be described as mid back lax.
- 175.  $\alpha$  is generally fully long when final, and before a voiced fricative and  $\mathbf{r}$ . It is also long when it represents an older diphthong, arising generally from a lost consonant  $(\mathbf{l}, \mathbf{g}, \mathbf{w})$  with the spellings al, aw, au.
- 176. Common spellings for this long sound are (1) a, (2) aa, (3) a', (4) aw, (5) au, (6) al.

	Sc.	Ph.	E.
(1)	da	da:	father
	twa	twa:	two
	wha	wa:	who.
(2)	haar	hair	cold sea mist
	ḥaave	haiv	grey.
(3)	a'	a:	all .
	ca	ka:	call, drive
	fa'	fa:	fall
	sa'	sa:	salve.
(4)	blaw	bla:	blow
	chaw	tsa:	chew
	saw	sa:	sow
	tawse	ta:z	strap (for punishing).
(5)	baur	bair	joke
	cauk	ka:k	chalk
	daur -	da:r	dare
	fause	fa:s	false
	saugh	saix	willow
	bauld	$\mathbf{ba:} \mathbf{l}d$	bold cauld	$\mathbf{ka:} \mathbf{l}d$	cold fauld	fa:ld	fold
	auld	a:ld	old.

Sc.	Ph.	$\mathbf{E}.$
(6) chalmer	't∫a:mər	chamber
halflin	'ha:flįn	half-grown halse	ha:s	neck.

177. In the Mid. Sc. dialects  $\mathbf{Q}$  is used very widely instead of  $\mathbf{a}$ : in words of this class. See Ph. § 171.

178. In other cases a is of medium length or short, i.e. when it does not occur finally or before voiced fricatives and r and when it does not represent an older diphthong. Ph. § 175.

Sc.	Ph.	E.
chafts	t∫afts	jaws
dag	dag	rain or wet
fallow	'falə	fellow
lass	las	girl
sax	saks	six
thack	θαk	thatch.

179. For a representing an older o, see Ph. § 169.

180. Low back lax advanced. In this vowel the tongue is advanced bodily from the position of a but without the pronounced rising in the front which characterizes genuine front vowels. The sound is used regularly in the Northern English in words like man. It is similar to the vowel in the Fr. patte. It may be heard in Scottish dialect in districts that have come under Celtic influence in the North as a substitute for a. The symbol is not used in the general texts.

Λ

181. Mid back tense. This vowel is heard in E. but, hut, cur, etc. In Sth. E., the tongue is generally advanced and before r invariably flattened in words of this class. The short a in the German mann sounds very like this Sc. vowel, only in the German vowel the tongue is lax. In some Scottish dialects the tongue is lowered.

182. The common spellings of  $\mathbf{\Lambda}$  are (1) u, (2) ou, (3) o.

Sc.	Ph.	E.
(1) bull	$\mathbf{b} \mathbf{A} \mathbf{l}^1$	bull cut	kat	cut
putt	pat	put (at golf).
(2) young	jaŋ	young
touch	t∧t∫	touch.
(3) come	kam	come
work	wark	work (vb.).

183. Words with the spellings whi, wi in E. generally have  $\Delta$  in Sc.

whustle	masl	whistle
whurl	marl	whirl
swirl	swarl	swirl
wull	wal	will
wutch	wat/	witch.

184. In some districts, especially those on the Highland Border, this A sound very commonly takes the place of I or I as

Sc. and E.	Ph.
ditch	dAt
fill	fal
fish	f∆∫
hill	hAl
little	latl

- 185. For son, summer, etc., see Ph. § 136.
- 186. For A in eneuch, etc., see Ph. § 161.
- 187. For a unrounded from o, see Ph. § 170.

Э

188. Mid central. In the formation of this vowel the tongue lies nearly flat in the mouth, the centre being slightly raised, the mouth is half open as for easy breathing. This sound may be heard in the first syllable of E. "attack." It occurs generally in unaccented position as a substitute for any vowel, but it may be heard also in Sc. before r in accented position, instead of t or A and is then tense as a rule. Examples: third, bird; Oprd, berd.

- 189. In some of the Northern dialects another flat vowel may be heard, viz. the high central lowered. It takes the place of r in words like put, foot, hit, him, and occurs also in terminations such as er. Thus in Sc. one may hear five variants of the word "put"—sometimes more than one in the same dialect, viz. ptt, pet, ptt, pat, pat.
- 190. In nearly all suffixes the original vowel is reduced to a, e.g.:

Sc.	Ph.	E.
visible	'vızəbl	visible
hallan	'halən	cottage partition
oxter	'okstər	armpit
painfu'	'penfə	painful
barra'	'barə	barrow
elbuck	'ɛlbək	elbow.

- 191. Note: na = not, in dinna, winna (will not), etc., is pronounced na, although ne is also heard.
- 192. The termination y or ie is generally sounded  $\mathbf{z}$ , though a short  $\mathbf{e}$  is also heard in some dialects. After a voiced plosive  $\mathbf{z}$  is also common.

nappy	'napt	${ m ale}$
ony	'onţ	any
bonnie	'bonţ	bonnie
Sannie	'sanţ	Alexander
taupie	'ta:pţ	a silly person
tawtie	'ta:tį, 'tatį	potato.

- 193. In the N.E. after a voiced plosive or fricative y or ie is more commonly sounded i, as in hardy, Robbie, windy, bosom; 'hardi, 'robi, 'wandi, 'bo:zi. In Sth. Sc. i is also very common.
- 194. When the vowel in the syllable preceding y or ie final is i (written ee or ea),  $\ni i$  (written i), y or ie final is generally sounded i. Thus:

creepie (stool), greedy, Jeannie, whilie, wifie are pronounced

'kripi, 'gridi, 'dzini, 'məili, 'wəifi.

DIPHTHONGS

195. A diphthong consists of two vowel sounds pronounced with one breath impulse so as to form one syllable. One of the vowels carries a predominant stress. In Sc. the stress is generally on the first vowel, i.e. most Sc. diphthongs are falling ones. Diphthongs with the stress on the second element—rising diphthongs—were once common in Scottish speech, but now the first element has generally become a consonant; thus ane = one is now pronounced in Mid. Sc. yin = jin; heuch, buik, once hiux, biuk, are now generally hjux, bjuk. In Sth. Sc. huope = "hope" has become hwap.

a.i

196. This diphthong is not very common in Sc. It may be heard in final position and before voiced fricatives and r, but is frequently replaced by 9i.

197. Its common spellings are (1) uy, (2) ui, (3) ie, (4) ye, (5) i-e, (6) y-e.

Sc.	Ph.	E.
(1) buy	bar	buy.
(2) guiser	'gaızər	mummer.
(3) lie <sup>1</sup>	laı	lie (recline)
tie	tar	tie.
(4) aye	aı	yes
kye	kar	kye.
(5) five	faiv	five
rise	raiz	rise.
(6) byre	bair	byre.

198. The personal pronoun I is  $\mathbf{a}$  and  $\mathbf{a}\mathbf{r}$  in stressed position and  $\mathbf{a}$  when unstressed.

199. at is heard in some dialects instead of at.

200. This diphthong is quite different from the Sth. E. diphthong in  $fade = \mathbf{ferd}$  or  $\mathbf{ferd}$ . The first element is rarely a pure  $\mathbf{e}$  or  $\mathbf{e}$  sound. It is really a vowel between  $\mathbf{e}$  and  $\mathbf{o}$  and is always tense. So also is  $\mathbf{i}$  the second element of the diphthong. Another, but less convenient method of writing it, might be  $\ddot{\mathbf{e}}\mathbf{i}$ . In some dialects  $\mathbf{a}$  is the first element; in others, especially in the fishing villages of the N.E. coast, the first vowel of the diphthong is a slightly rounded  $\mathbf{a}$ , giving the impression of a sound which lies acoustically between  $\mathbf{o}$  and  $\mathbf{o}$ ; examples boide, foine, loike, koine, moine, poipe for "bide, fine, like, kind, mine, pipe."

201.	əi is spelled:	(1) i-e-, (2) y-e,	(3) ei, (4) ey, (5) or

(3)	eident	'əidənt	diligent.
(4)	fey	fəi	doomed
	hey	həi	hay.
(5)	boil or byle	bəil	boil
	coin -	kəin	coin
	join or jine	dzəin	join
	oil or ile	əil	oil.

202. In the dialect of Avoch, Eastern Ross, the diphthong ei may be heard in many words which have e or i in Sc. The original vowel is generally a: or a and e in open position (see Ph. § 146 (2)): e.g. bein, stein, eim, eit, peir, ∫eip, ∫eir for "bone, stone, home, eat, pear, cheap, chair."

εi

203. ei is heard in Sth. Sc. in final position, where i is the rule in Mid. Sc., e.g. bee, free, he, me, pea, we, dee (die), flee (fly), lee (a lie) are the Sth. Sc. bei, frei, hei, mei, etc.

19

204. For this diphthong in Sth. Sc., see Ph. § 142.

or or

205. This diphthong is rarer in Sc. than in E. Words with oi or oy spelling are generally pronounced with the əi diphthong except when oy is final.

Sc.	Ph.	E.
boy	bor, bor	boy
ploy	ploi, ploi	pastime

206. "Joist" is generally dgist in Sc., but dgasst and dgaist are also known.

Λu

207. This diphthong is spelled (1) ou, (2) ow, (3) owe, (4) ol. In most cases the diphthong arises from the loss of a consonant h, g, l, or w.

, -,
	Sc.	Ph.	E.

208. Au is used in Sth. Sc. in words which in the other dialects end in long u, e.g.

Mid. Sc.	Sth. Sc. Ph.	*	E.
boo	bau		bend
coo	kau		cow
doo	dau		dove
800	sau		sow
yoo	jau		you.

ou

209. This diphthong is heard in Sth. Sc. in words which originally had (1) ol, (2) oh, (3) og, (4) ow, (5) oh. All except (2) and (5) have Au in Mid. Sc., e.g.

(1)	bolster	'bouster	bolster.
(2)	sowcht	souxt	sought.
(3)	bow (sb.)	bou	bow.
(4)	stowe	stou	stow.
(5)	dow chter	douxter	daughter.

uə

210. This diphthong is heard in Sth. Sc. in words that have o or o in the other dialects.

born	buərn
corn	kvərn
morn	mvərn
bore	buər
sole (of a shoe)	suəl .
Rome	ruəm

we is derived from O.E. open o or classical o. Later additions to the dialect have so. When the diphthong is initial, it may appear in Sth. Sc. as wa, e.g. wapen, open, wart∫st, orchard; when preceded by h, it becomes ma, e.g. mal, a hole, map, hope. See Murray's D. of S. C. of Sc., pp. 112, 147.

VOWEL AND CONSONANT LENGTH

LENGTH OF VOWELS

- 212. It should be noted that the addition of an inflectional ending does not usually alter the quantity of a preceding long vowel. Thus both fee pr. t. and fee'd pt. t. have a fully long i, but the verb feed has a comparatively short i. Compare also

Sc.	Ph.	$\mathbf{E}_{ullet}$
broo	bru:	brew
broo'd	bruid	brewed
brood	brud	brood
gree	gri:	agree
gree'd	gri:d	agreed
greed	grid	greed
loo	lu:	love
loo'd	lu:d	loved lood	lud	loud
lay	le:	lay laid	le:d	laid
lade	led	load
bray'd	breid	pushed
braid	bred	broad.

213. When a word is in frequent use, the natural tendency to shorten before t, d, n manifests itself, especially if there is no danger of confusion with another word, e.g.

gaed = "went" may be geid or ged, gie'd = "gave" , , giid or gid.

214. (a) Sometimes a vowel is long because it represents a diphthong in the older form of the word or the loss of a consonant.

Sc.	Ph.	E.
quate	kwe:t	quiet
rael	re:l	real vain	ve:n	vain
ain	ein	own;

but en = one. For other examples see Ph. § 176.

- (b) In the case of words like auld, laugh, saugh, the diphthong arose from the glide before 1 and x. The tendency to shorten a vowel before x, a breathed consonant, accounts for the double forms laix, lax, straixt, straxt, for laugh and straight.
- (c) The ending er seems in some dialects to have a shortening influence. Hence couter, shoother have generally a short u, and faither, raither are heard in different districts with both long and short e.
  - (d) For shortening through lack of stress, see Ph. § 216.
  - (e) Meaning sometimes influences length, e.g.

bət nu: de ər 'mo:nən in 'ilkə grin 'lo:nən, but now they are moaning in ilka green loaning. The Flowers of the Forest (Elliot).

(f) In the texts the mark for length (:) will be used after the tense vowels e, i, o, u and a when they are final and accented, or when they stand in the accented syllable before voiced fricatives and r.

LENGTH OF CONSONANTS

215. In many dialects (e.g. the Galloway dialect), when d is dropped after n, the n is noticeably lengthened. Sometimes the lengthening is equally distributed over the vowel and consonant. In the general texts we write such words land and land.

STRESS

216. Stress is the comparative force of the breath current, with which the syllables that make up a word are uttered. In Sc. and E. the root syllable of native words is generally the one that has the chief stress. As this root syllable is very often the first in the word, there is a tendency to stress foreign words in the first syllable. In Sc. we often find Romance words retaining their original stress contrary to English usage, e.g.

WORDS IN THE BREATH GROUP

217. (a) The sounds produced in a single breath for the purpose of conveying a thought or a definite part of a thought are styled a breath group. A breath group may be a single word but generally consists of a number. The lightly stressed vowels in the breath group are subject to change. Long vowels are shortened and often become lax or are graded down to a central vowel. This applies also to monosyllabic words that are generally employed with a minimum stress. These have nearly always a strong and a weak form, the latter being the more common. Words habitually used with minimum stress are the articles, pronominal words, monosyllabic prepositions, conjunctions and auxiliary verbs. Examples:

E.	Strong	Weak
you	ji	ji, jr
I	ar, a	Э
my	mar, ma	mə
when	man	mən
us	hţz, hʌz	əs, s, z
our	u:r	ur, wər, wır, war.

(b) Vowels may even be lost and consonants may disappear or be assimilated to neighbouring sounds in the breath group, e.g. h is regularly lost in unstressed pronominals like him, her, his and the auxiliary have. Examples:

Sc.	Ph.	E.
I sepad (used by Barrie)	əsə'pad	I shall uphold fousticat (N.E.)	'fustikat	how is't ye call it?
guidschir	'g∧t∫ər	grandfather
ne'erday .	'ne:rdţ	New Year Day
see till't	sitlt, sidlt	see to it, i.e. look at it see till 'im	sitlm, sidlm	see to him, i.e. look at him.

(c) In the sentence "ye would na been sae shy," Gr. § 61, na = na (not) + a (av = have). The two a's have coalesced to form one vowel, so that would seems to be followed by a past part.

Then the usage is extended to cases where na does not occur, e.g. "I would rather paid the needful repairs myself." Galt, in Annals of the Parish, ch. 27.

(d) The curious form tu or tou for "thou" was once common in Mid. Scotland and survives in the nickname for Paisley, viz. seestu = "seest thou?" For examples of its use, see Extract from Galt's Entail, and Gr. § 23. It arose from an old assimilation in the breath group that was not unknown in O.E. and was very common in Middle E. where  $th = \theta$  following t, d, and often n and n became n, thus:

"And tatt was don, that witt tu wel."

And that was done, that knowest thou well.

Ormulum, 1004 (c. 1200).

Often u or ou and e were written for  $\partial u$  and  $\partial e$ :

"Wilt u se a wel fair flur?"
Wilt thou see a well fair flower?
Floris and Blancheflur (13th cent.).

"Wretched body why liest thou so?"

When Debate of the Body and the Soul (13th cent.).

"hi byeb brizte and clene ase hi weren at e point and at e time."

they be bright and clean as they were at the point and at the time (of their christening).

The Ayenbite of Inwit (1340).

Thus one or all pronominal words beginning with th might have alternate forms without th. Sometimes one form might prevail for one or all pronominal words in a dialect, sometimes another. In spoken Sc. at the present time there is only one form of the relative that, viz.  $\mathbf{at}$ ; yet it is but very rarely used in written Sc. which has either that,  $\mathbf{dat}$ , or the highly artificial wha,  $\mathbf{mat}$ . In one dialect, viz. the Caithness Sc., all the pronominal words beginning with  $th = \mathbf{d}$  still drop the consonant and so for this, that, the, they, their, them, there, then, thence we get  $\mathbf{rs}$ ,  $\mathbf{at}$ ,  $\mathbf{at}$  (relative),  $\mathbf{i}$ ,  $\mathbf{e}$ :,  $\mathbf{er}$ ,  $\mathbf{sm}$ ,  $\mathbf{er}$ ,  $\mathbf{sn}$ . For instances in other Sc. dialects, see Ph. § 87.

(e) This close binding of words into a sort of compound in the breath group also explains such forms as the tane and the tuther, to ten, to 'troor or 'troor," the one and the other," from the O.E. bet an, bet over. So also O.E. mīn āgan, bīn āgan would be in Sc. məin e:n, to also O.E. mīn āgan, bīn āgan would be in Sc. məin e:n, to also O.E. mīn āgan, bīn āgan would be in Sc. məin e:n, the and give rise to a new possessive ne:n. Hence his nain son, hiz ne:n sin; his nain sel', hiz ne:n sel, i.e. "his own self." In a tantrin ane or twa, "an odd one or two," the t of the definite article has been prefixed to antrin, "odd." (Mid. Eng. auntren "to come by chance," Mid. Fr. aventurer.) The dropping of d in words like cauld, find may also be susceptible of a similar explanation, but see Ph. § 27.

PART II GRAMMAR

CHAPTER I

THE ARTICLES

1. Indefinite article as ane. There seems to be a trace of French influence through Middle Scots literary usage in the use of ane, en, for "a" before consonants, yet it was always more or less of a literary affectation, and took no root in popular speech.

"Ane herrand damysele, and ane spekand castell sal nevyr end with honour." (A hearing damsel and a speaking castle

<sup>1</sup> This is a moot question with philologists, who regard such an intrusive influence as contrary to philological usage. It has been explained as a survival in the Northern dialect, the English having dropped the "n" before a consonant before 1200 A.D. But facts are against such an explanation: e.g. Barbour writing in the 14th century uses a and an just as we do to-day, while Henryson, before the close of the 15th century, uses ane freely before consonants, and Lyndsay in the 16th century has ane constantly before consonants, recalling the Fr. une:

"Tyll Jamys of Dowglas at the last Fand a litill sonkyn bate."

The Bruce, 1375 A.D.

"With that ane Paddock, on the watter by,..."

Henryson, The Mouse and the Paddock, 1. 10.

"Intyl ane garth, under ane reid roseir, Ane auld man, and decrepit, hard I syng."

Henryson, The Prais of Aige, circ. 1473 A.D.

"And sett ane seage proudlye about the place.

They have ane boumbard braissit up in bandis."

Lyndsay, The Papyngo, 1538 A.D.

See Murray, Dialect S. C. Sc., The Middle Period, French Influence, p. 55. Also Gregory Smith, Specimens of Middle Scots, who remarks in his Introduction, p. xxxiii:

"It is more difficult to settle the question of Mod. Sc. indebtedness to French in its use of ane. According to Dr Murray, it was introduced in literature and set speech in imitation of the French, so that the Sc. ane kyng answered to the French un roi....The proposition cannot be brought under any of the ordinary categories of linguistic imitation, for it implies more than the mere Gallicising of native forms. It amounts to the admission of a grammatical interference in a quarter least liable to interference of any kind, and to an absolute recognition by every writer and scribe of the propriety of an affectation as ingenious as uncalled for."

will never come to a good end.) Complaint of Scotland, p. 167. (Quoted by Andrew Cheviot, Proverbs, p. 40.)

- 2. Use of "a" before vowels. In many modern dialects the tendency is to use "a" indifferently before vowels and consonants, although most modern authors seem to adopt the ordinary English usage<sup>1</sup>.
  - "It's no a boat,...it's a beast."
  - "A beast?"
  - "Aye, a aggilator." J. J. Bell, Wee Macgreegor, c. 5.
- 3. Emphatic "a" as ae, e:. "a" is found as ae when emphatic; pronounced je: in G. S. W.
- "Sir, my Lord, if ye'll believe me, there was no ae single ane,...that would gie your Lordship a bawbie for auld lang syne." Galt, Sir A. Wylie, I, c. 18.
- 1 Examples of this use of "a" before vowels are to be found sometimes in literature:
  - "Thare he of chance a ymage fand." Legends of the Saints, Alexis, 156.

"It war a our hie thing

Agayne the faith to reyff my rychtwis king."

Blind Harry's Wallace, vIII, 639-640.

Lauder of Fountainhall in his Journal (Scot. Hist. Society) scarcely ever uses "an" before a vowel. "A ignorant fellow," "a old woman," "a emblem," etc. His Journal may be taken as a good example of the colloquial in Edinburgh in the seventeenth century. Cf. also Pitscottie's History, 1. 158: "Licherie and wenus lyfe hes oft a euill end" (Scot. Text Soc. Edition).

Examples are also to be found in documents written by the less educated, e.g. in Town Council Records:

- "James of Loche layd the sayd penny in a ymage hand." Peebles Records, 17 Jan., 1462.
  - "Dik Bulle sal gef a aktre." ib., 25 Oct. 1452.

Such writers frequently use "a" before a consonant where literary men would have written "ane":

- "Ilk persoun sall pay a penny on the mercat day." Stirling Records, 12 March, 1519.
- "The officer of the quarter, a principall man." Aberdeen Records, 12 May, 1514.
  - "Ane suord, a quhinger,...a pair of blak hoiss." ib., 12 Jan., 1572.
- "A consent to transact with my Lord of Fentoun." Stirling Records, Feb., 1615.

(Contributed by Rev. R. McKinlay, M.A., Galston.)

The indefinite article is found along with ae (one), when ae signifies "solitary," "single":

"An auld maid leevin' in a flat wi' an ae lass." Ramsay, Reminiscences, c. 5.

4. Definite article for indefinite article. Scottish usage often prefers the definite article to the indefinite:

"He had gotten into roving company, and had taken the drap drink." Scott, Guy Mannering, c. 6.

"It was an unco thing to bid a mother leave her ain house wi'the tear in her ee." Scott, Antiquary, c. 22.

So with St. "apiece," originally a pece or a piece, "a" being the St. indefinite article, Sc. has the piece:

"We had a gweed stoot stick the piece." Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 18.

- 5. Definite article for pronoun. The definite article is found in Scottish where a pronoun is used in standard speech:
- "'Wanting the hat, continued my author Kirstie." Stevenson, Weir of H., c. 5.
- "'But I maun see the wife (your wife), Patie,' says she." Wilson, Tales of the B., "The Hen-pecked Man."
- 6. Definite article in adverbial combinations. (a) The definite article takes the place of "to" or "this" in connection with "day," "morrow," "night," or their equivalents, to form adverbial combinations. "To-day" is the day; "to-morrow" is the morn; "to-morrow morning" is the morn's morning; "to-morrow night" is the morn's nicht; the streen is "last night (yester even) or yesterday":
  - "Wear them the day, hizzie." R.L. Stevenson, Weir of H., c.6.
  - "Ye'll come in sune again, Welum?"
- "The morn's nicht, gin it be possible." Ian Maclaren, Days of A. L. S., "Drumsheugh's Love Story."
- "But I've tellt him he's to get nae gundy till the morn's (to-morrow) morning." J. J. Bell, Wee Macgreegor, c. 1.

"Yon's no a bad show o' aits ye hae in the wast park the year, Hillocks." Ian Maclaren, Days of A. L. S., "Triumph in Diplomacy."

"Says she, 'Dawvid was up by the cairts the streen, wusnin he?'" Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 19.

- (b) "Just now" is the now or the noo, de nu:. The now is "genteel Scottish":
- "He cannot leave the shope any earlier the now." J. J. Bell, Wee Macgreegor, c. 13.

"I maun see—."

"No the noo, John, I think he's sleepin' again." ib. c. 14.

By analogy, "together" becomes thegither, do'gtdor:

- "She winns speak a word, they say, for weeks thegither." Scott, Antiquary, c. 40.
- 7. Intrusive definite article in Sc. The definite article in Sc. is used in the following cases where it would be omitted in St.:
- (a) Before the names of all diseases: "suffering from the headache," "ill of the rheumatiz."
- (b) Before the names of trades or occupations: "learnin the carpenterin."
- (c) Before the names of sciences or departments of learning: "He knows the chemistry"; "The boy is good at the Latin."
- (d) Before the names of days, months, seasons, especially when any particular circumstance is associated therewith: "He'll come at the Martinmas"; "Wae's my heart, I had been tender a' the simmer."
- (e) In phrases, with words like "kirk," "school," "bed," "tea" (evening meal): "My oe (grandchild) is at the school"; "I never gang to the kirk twice a day"; "It's gey wearisome lying in the bed."

"I forgot about that. Weel, I—I'll wait an' see what she's got in for the tea first." J. J. Bell, Wee Macgreegor as a Soldier of the King.

CHAPTER II

NOUNS

- 8. Plurals in en. There are several Sc. plurals in en: een, in, "eyes"; shoon, shuin, fyn, fin or shaen, fen, "shoes"; hosen, 'ho:zən, "stockings"; owsen, 'Ausən, "oxen'"; treen, trin, "trees"; turven, 'tarvən, "turfs"; breeken, 'brikən, "breeches."
- "Can this be you, Jenny?—a sight o' you's gude for sair een, lass." Scott, Antiquary, c. 26.
- "'When did ye begin to dander in pink hosen, Mistress Elliot?' he whispered shyly." R. L. Stevenson, Weir of H., c. 6.

(Compare the passage in Daniel iii. 21: "in their coats, their hosen, and their hats.")

- "Tak tent ye dinna o'erdrive the owsen."
- "Ye're e'en come back to Libberton to wait for dead men's shoon!" Scott, H. of Midlothian, c. 5.
- "I ate the half o''t mysel, and rubbet the ither half into ma shaen." The Scottish Review, 1908, p. 545.

Double plurals like shins, breeckens are met with.

- 9. Plurals in r. There is a plural of "calf" (O.E. calferu) caur, carr, car, ka:r found in Aberdeenshire, Perthshire, W. Forfarshire, Renfrewshire usage:
- "The caur did haig, the queis low." Jamieson, Popular Ballads, 1, 286.
- "Bairns manna be followed like carr." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 5.

Breer, breers, 'bri:rz, "eyebrows" or "eyelashes," are found in Aberdeen and Banff. Childer, the plural of child, so common in English and Irish usage, is almost never heard now in Scotland.

10. Exceptional plurals. Coo, ku:, "cow," pl. kye, ka: (O.E.  $c\bar{u}$ , "cow,"  $c\bar{y}$ , "cows"). "Kine" is a double plural form, ky-en, and is used by Burns in "Auld Rob Morris":

"He has gowd in his coffers, he has owsen and kine."

But the word is now obsolete, if it ever was in common use. Probably Burns used it here for the sake of the rhyme.

11. Nouns expressing time, space, weight, measure, and number. Such nouns, when immediately preceded by a cardinal numeral, are frequently used without any plural sign in Sc. dialect:

"The powny hasna gane abune thirty mile the day." Scott, Antiquary, c. 15.

- 12. Singular words treated as plurals. Words like parritch "porridge," "pudding," "broth," "brose," take plural pronouns and verbs north of the Humber:
- "They'll be unco puir pudding athoot something mair than bluid in them." D. Gilmour, Paisley Weavers, c. 5.
- "'They're gude parritch eneuch,' said Mrs Wilson, 'if ye wad but take time to sup them.'" Scott, Old Mortality, c. 5.
- "I doot some o' ye hae taen ower mony whey porridge the day." Ramsay, Reminiscences, c. 6.
- 13. Spurious singular nouns. "Corpse" was regarded as a plural, and a spurious form corp, korp came into common use:

"They pu'd him up like a deid corp." R. L. Stevenson, David Balfour, c. 15.

(Compare glimp, glimp for "glimpse" and hoe, ho: for "hose.")

- 14. Simpler verb form in place of noun derivative. Note the common use of the shorter and more direct verb form in place of the noun derived from it: e.g. differ, 'differ for "difference"; len', len for "loan"; transacks, tran'saks for "transactions":
- "'Weel, I canna see nae differ in her,' returned the first." R. L. Stevenson, Weir of H., c. 1.

"Mony's the body that's hed their gullie i' ye about yer bits o' transacks." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 23.

"It's a sang-buik that I want the len' o'." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 23.

"'The modiewarts are castin a' up round the foun' (foundation) o' the hoose, an' they winna be lang there,' answered Jane." The Scottish Review, 1908, p. 525.

"They've been haein' a gay on-cairry (carrying-on) doon at the Ward." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 17.

15. Nouns intimately connected with family life: ation, esn; guidman, gyd'man; guidwife, gyd'wəif; minnie, 'mint; luckie, 'lakt; gudesire, gyd'saır, 'gatsər; tittie, 'tıtı; eme, im; nevoy, 'nevoi; oe, o:; get, get, git; bairn, bern; wean, wein; loon, lun.

Family connections are known as ation, ein:

"She lows't the richt gate aboot the minaister an' a' 's ation." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 49.

The head of the household, or husband, is goodman, guidman, guideman (accented on final syllable). (Compare Scriptural "For the goodman is not at home" (Proverbs vii, 19).) The correlative is guidwife, "wife" or "lady of the house": "I haena lived for five-and-twenty years without expectin' to get a guidman some day." Wilson, Tales B., "Willie Wastle's Wife."

"'Whist! whist! gudewife,' said her husband." Scott, Guy Mannering, c. 24.

Where the gudewife is supposed to be the abler partner, dominating the gudeman, she is popularly known as the "gray mare" or grey mear: "As he had a golden nag at his door, so he had a grey mare in his shop." Scott, H. of Midlothian, c. 3.

"Rob has a grey mear in his stable." Scott, Rob Roy, c. 26.

A John Tamson's man is one who lets his wife rule: "'The deil's in the wife,' said Cuddie, 'd'ye think I am to be John Tamson's man, and maistered by a woman a' the days o' my life?'" Scott, Old Mortality, c. 37.

"Mother" is found as mither, with diminutive minnie, minny:

"But i' my auld minny's buiks, I hae read jist as muckle as that, an' waur too." G. Macdonald, David Elginbrod, I, c. 13.

"'But minnie was asking ye,' resumed the lesser querist.'' Scott, Antiquary, c. 26.

 $\it Luckie$  is used for the "mistress of a family" as well as for a grandmother:

- "'Ay, ay,' exclaimed the mistress of the family. 'Hegh, sirs, can this be you, Jenny?' (Jenny answers.) 'Ay, ay,' answered Luckie Mucklebackit." Scott, Antiquary, c. 26.
  - $\hbox{``Grand mother'' is } \textit{grand mither, } \textit{granny, } \textit{luckie, } \textit{luckie-minnie:}$
  - "Speak to your grandmither, Jenny." Scott, Antiquary, c. 26.
- "'O what was it, grannie?'—and 'what was it, gudemither?'—and 'what was it, Luckie Elspeth?' asked the children, the mother, and the visitor, in one breath." Scott, Antiquary, c. 26.
  - "Luckie" also used of "the landlady of an inn":
- "'No, no,' said the Deacon, 'ye're clean out there, Luckie.'" Scott, Guy Mannering, c. 11.
  - "Grandfather" is gudesire, gran'faither, luckie-dad:
- "The bits o' bairns, puir things, are wearying to see their luckie-dad." Scott, H. of Midlothian, c. 46.
- "'Weel spoken, bairns!' cried your grandfaither." Wilson, Tales B., "The Whitsome Tragedy."
- "Before our gudesire gaed into Edinburgh to look after his plea." Scott, Antiquary, c. 9.
  - "Sister" is colloquially tittie:
- "A bonnie spot o' wark your tittie and you hae made o't." Scott, H. of Midlothian, c. 25.
- "Uncle" is eme (German oheim, ohm; O.E. ēam, "maternal uncle"):
- "Didna his eme die and gang to his place wi' the name of the Bluidy Mackenyie?" Scott, H. of Midlothian, c. 11.
  - "Nephew" is nevo, nevoy (French neveu):
  - "If ye didna, your nevoy did." Scott, Antiquary, c. 36.
- "'Div ye mean to tell me,' asked his mistress,...'that my nevo is comin' doon the burnside wi' a leddy?'" W. Cross, Disruption, c. 1.

"Grandchild" is oye, oe:

"And grannies danced with their oyes." Galt, A. of Parish, c. 48.

"'And,' continued Mrs Butler, 'he can wag his head in a pulpit now, neibor Deans, think but of that—my ain oe.'" Scott, H. of Midlothian, c. 9.

Knave-bairn is a male child (compare German knabe):

"Wha could tell whether the bonny knave-bairn may not come back to claim his ain?" Scott, Guy Mannering, c. 22.

Lass-bairn is a female child; lass, a young unmarried woman:

"Verra improper o' you, wi' a young lass-bairn, to encourage the nichtly veesits o' a young gentleman." G. Macdonald, David Elginbrod, I, c. 6.

Bairns and weans are both used commonly for "children":

"There was my daughter's wean, little Eppie Daidle—my oe, ye ken, Miss Grizel." Scott, H. of Midlothian, c. 4.

"Just to tak his meat, and his drink, and his diversion, like ony o' the weans." Scott, Antiquary, c. 26.

But wean has often a contemptuous flavour, less present in bairn, so that we have the adjective weanly, "feeble":

"'My bairn! my bairn!' cried the distracted father, 'where can he be?'" Scott, Guy Mannering, c. 9.

"...and plaits rush-swords and grenadier caps for the weans." Scott, Antiquary, c. 12.

"'Aye,' said Brodie, 'paidling in a burn's the ploy for him. He's a weanly gowk.'" G. Douglas, H. with Green Shutters, c. 5. But bairnly is also used for "childish":

"Man, Charlie, it's bairnly to make sic a wark for a bit tig on the haffet." Galt, Sir A. Wylie, I, c. 5.

Get, gett (common gender) is a "child":

"'He was the get of a Kilwinning weaver,' said Craiglands." Galt, Sir A. Wylie, III, c. 20.

"And where's that ill-deedy gett, Giles?" Scott, Bride of Lammermoor, c. 13.

Loon is "son" or "boy":

"An' hedna he Jock Ogg, the gauger's loon, haill twa year at it?" W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 12.

In Forfar loon is = a "boy baby." A doctor will intimate to a parent that the child born to him is a "loon"; i.e. not a girl.

16. Familiar masculine or general Personal Terms: body, 'bodi; buddy, 'bodi; chap, chappie, 'tʃapi; creature, 'kretər.

The term body, bodie or buddy is characteristically Scottish. It is used as an indefinite pronoun: "one," Ger. mann, Fr. on. It has been defined for us by George Douglas (Brown) in The House with the Green Shutters, c. 5: "In every little Scottish community," he says, "there is a distinct type known as the bodie. 'What does he do, that man?' you may ask, and the answer will be, 'Really, I could hardly tell ye what he doeshe's just a bodie.'...The chief occupation of his idle hours (and his hours are chiefly idle) is the discussion of his neighbour's affairs." It has also been defined for us by Dr William Wallace, editor of the Glasgow Herald, in the National Review for October, 1907: "As used in the larger cities, it (buddy) is applied goodnaturedly and not disrespectfully to a man who is not necessarily deficient in capacity or even in character, who is indeed as a rule somewhat noisily energetic and public-spirited, but who looks at everything, and especially every political question, from the standpoint of his sect, his class, his trade, or his crotchet; who seldom thinks nationally or impersonally, but almost always provincially, if not parochially."

Body is used as a familiar ending to a name, sometimes with a slight indication of contempt, as in "lawyer-body," "minister-body":

"She was a Gordon of Earlswood—the oldest stock in Galloway and brought up to be a lady-body." S. R. Crockett, Courtship of Allen Fairley.

Chappie is used like bodie:

"They're proposin' byuldin a hoose for a manse to the Free Kirk minaister chappie." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 42.

"He af'en calls for the letters fan the dog-dirder chappie's occupiet." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 38.

Coof, kyf, is used contemptuously. It is probably a form of "cove"; cf. O.E.  $c\bar{a}f$ , "bold":

"Though hundreds worship at his word, He's but a coof for a' that." Burns, For A' That. "'Me ken or care for him, ye spiritless coof, ye!' she replied." Wilson, Tales B., "Guidwife of Coldingham."

Trypal, 'trəipəl, is a "sloven":

"Mair smeddum aboot 'im nor the like o' that gawkie trypal." W. Alexander, Johiny Gibb, c. 10.

Hempie, 'hempi, is a "rascal," "rogue." Originally one destined for the hemp or gallows-rope:

"This is the very lad Tirl that I raised a summons against before the Justices—him and another hempie." Scott, St Ronan's Well, c. 8.

Creature, creatur, crater is also used in this same familiar way: "Fat's he?—the sin o' a peer nace nyaukit beggar creatur." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 21.

"It's my idea that the creature Dougal will have a good action of wrongous imprisonment." Scott, Rob Roy, c. 30.

"'Eh! ye crater!' said Robert Falconer, 'ir ye there after a'?'" G. Macdonald, Robert Falconer, c. 10.

Hotch, hot, is "a big lumbering person":

"'Ou aye,' said he, 'ye great muckle fat hotch o' a decent bodie ye—I'll gang in and have a dish o' tea wi' ye." G. Douglas, H. with Green Shutters, c. 21.

Other familiar terms for "man," "person" or "fellow" are billy, 'bil; callant, 'kalənt; callan, 'kalən; cull, kal; carle, karl; carlie, 'karlı; chield, chiel, tʃil; chielie, tʃili; loon, lun; stock, stok; wight, wixt:

"I was disturbed with some of the night-walking queans and swaggering billies." Scott, Fortunes of Nigel, c. 3.

"'As I live by bread,' said Campbell...'I never saw sae daft a callant.'" Scott, Rob Roy, c. 25.

"Ye wadna be doing your duty to the callan, if you learnt him naething but a jargon o' meaningless gibberish." Cross, Disruption, c. 8.

"'Na, na,' answered the boy, 'he is a queer auld cull.'" Scott, St Ronan's Well, c. 30.

"In the evenings Andrew had recourse to the firesides of the gash and knacky carles and carlines of the village." Galt, Sir A. Wylie, 1, c. 4.

"An' Lachlan himself, though he be a stiff chiel (difficult fellow to manage)." Ian Maclaren, Days of A. L. S., "For Conscience' Sake," c. 5.

"Mains's chiels (employees) was lowst gin that time." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 40.

"Gettin' a share o' a gill wi' a cheelie." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 14.

"That I suld have been left sae far to mysel' as to invite that writer loon till his dinner." Wilson, Tales B., "The Fatal Secret."

"Ga'in was a 'fine stock' with a fluent and compendious power of 'newsin.'" W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 36.

"Every wight has his weird." Scott, Rob Roy, c. 34.

"'I wonder what that auld daft beggar carle and our son Steenie can be doing out in sic a nicht as this!' said Maggie Mucklebackit." Scott, Antiquary, c. 36.

"While Andrew...settled into a little gash carlie." Galt, Sir A. Wylie, I, c. 6.

Buckie, 'bakt, "restless youth" or "mischievous boy": with the stronger form deevil's or deil's buckie:

"The huzzy Beenie—the jaud Eppie—the deil's buckie of a callant." Scott, St Ronan's Well, c. 2.

"...That daft buckie, Geordie Wales." Burns, Lines written to a Gentleman. Ellisland, 1790.

Taupie, tawpy, 'ta:pt, is a contemptuous word for "softy," "good for nothing," mostly applied to girls, but also to the other sex:

"An inhaudin unedicat taupie chiel in a kwintra chop." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 35.

"'Ye're na to be a tawpy noo,' she went on, endeavouring to dry his eyes. 'Ye're to be a man.'" J. J. Bell, Wee Macgreegor, c. 5.

The "loons" are the "masses" as opposed to the "classes"; "simple" as opposed to "gentle." The word is contrasted with laird or "proprietor":

"The lairds are as bad as the loons." Scott, Rob Roy, c. 26. "It's just the laird's command and the loon maun loup." Scott, Rob Roy, c. 26.

Waufie, 'wa:ft; waf, waf (adjective and noun), is an "idle fellow," a "person of no account":

"A'll grant ye that the new factor is little better than a waufie." Ian Maclaren, Days of A. L. S., "The Country Tyrant."

"Ilka waf carle in the country has a son and heir." Scott, Guy Mannering, c. 39.

17. Feminine personal terms. Wife, waif, is the equivalent of "woman," with a diminutive wifie, 'waif, "little woman," used freely:

"Excuse a daft wife that loves ye, and that kenned your mither." R. L. Stevenson, Weir of H, c. 8.

"Meantime two of his congregation, sisters, poor old mutched wifies, were going home together." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 56.

Kimmer, 'kimər, is used loosely as a synonym of "woman," a "woman-friend" or "girl-friend" (Fr. commère):

"I'm saying she was naturally a bonny bit kimmer rather than happit up to the nines." J. M. Barrie, The Little Minister, c. 6.

"She gecked and scorned at my northern speech and habit, as her southland leddies and kimmers had done at the boarding-school." Scott, Antiquary, c. 33.

Carlin, 'karlin; carline, 'karlain, is used of an "elderly woman," being the correlative of carle, karl:

"But what can ail them to bury the auld carlin (a rudas wife she was) in the night time?" Scott, Antiquary, c. 26.

Lass is a "young woman," with diminutive lassie and lassock. But it also is a general sex term:

"They brought him tidings that his wife had given birth to a daughter; but he only replied, 'Is it so?...then God's will be done. It came with a lass and it will go with a lass.'" Scott, Tales of a Grandfather, c. 28.

(That is, in standard speech, "It (the Scottish crown) came with a woman, and it will pass from the Stuarts by a woman.")

"I was but a lassock when ye cam." S. R. Crockett, Bog Myrtle.

Lad, lad, and lass, las = "sweethearts"; e.g. "wull ye be ma lass?"

Lass and woman is the Scottish equivalent for "maid and wife":

"I...that have waited on her, lass and woman." Keith, Indian Uncle, p. 340. (W.)

Familiar and somewhat contemptuous names for young women are cutty, 'kat; deemie, 'dimi (diminutive of "dame"); girzie, 'grzi (diminutive of "Griselda"); hizzie, 'hiz; jaud, dac:d="jade"; shilp, filp; limmer, 'limər; besom, 'bizəm; callants and wenches "boys and girls":

"'The cutty looks weel,' he had said." R. L. Stevenson, Weir of H., c. 6.

"He's ta'en a fancy to you bit shilp in the barroom o' the Red Lion." G. Douglas, H. with Green Shutters, c. 21.

"That deemie that they said hed the bairn till 'im." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 33.

"'I'll leave that for your pairt of it, ye girzie,' said he." R. L. Stevenson, Weir of H, c. 6.

"Wear them the day, hizzie." Ib.

"Na, she's a kind of a handsome jaud—a kind o' gypsy." Ib.

Taupy, taupy, 'ta:pt, is commonly applied to a "lazy, foolish woman" (Danish taabe and Swedish tap "a simpleton"):

"He was at first a farmer lad, but had forgathered with a doited tawpy." Galt, A. of Parish, c. 17.

"I'm in an hour of inspiration, ye upsetting tawpie." R. L. Stevenson, Weir of H., c. 6.

"The lazy taupy butt-a-house maun walk about her business." Wilson, Tales B., "Willie Wastle's Wife."

Hempie, 'hempt, is also applied to girls, as well as to men:

"Aye, ye were a hempie o' a lassie, Jean." Ian Maclaren, Days of A. L. S., "Endless Choice."

18. Familiar terms of quantity. Colloquial Sc. is prolific in words signifying quantity, which precede nouns, usually with omission of the preposition. One of the commonest is bit, applied more strictly to a piece of ground:

"She...certainly thought...the land a 'very bonnie bit if it were better seen to and done to.'" Scott, H. of Midlothian, c. 25.

A bit becomes the equivalent of "some," "a little":

"A bunchie o' wormit to gi'e 't a bit grip." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 30.

Bit is freely used as a diminutive:

"Maybe some bit lassie brocht her copy-buke." Ian Maclaren, Brier Bush, "Domsie," c. 1.

It takes the form bittie, a bittie, a bittock, "a short time, space or distance":

"Aifter I hed latt'n 'im get oot's breath a bittie, he cam' tee won'erfu." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 45.

An augmentative form is "a bonnie bit":

"Geordie wud read a bonnie bit." Ian Maclaren, Brier Bush, "Domsie," c. 2.

Drap, drap, is used for small portions of liquid:

"But Mattie gae us baith a drap skimmed milk." Scott,  $Rob\ Roy$ , c. 14.

There is also a diminutive form, drappie:

"Twa mutchkins o' yill between twa folk is a drappie ower little measure." Scott, Redgauntlet, c. 20.

Other words are jilp, d311p (used contemptuously):

"I can nedder dee wi' a jilp o' treacle bree, nor yet wi' that brewery stuff...." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 30.

A kenning, "a little," "somewhat":

"His father was none sa ill a man, though a kenning on the wrong side of the law." R. L. Stevenson, David Balfour, c. 9.

Kneevelick, 'kni:vlik, "round lump," "large piece"; what the kneeve, nieve or "fist" can hold:

"Mrs Gibb produced an abundant store of cakes and butter ready spread, and the cakes placed face to face with several 'kneevelicks' of tempting blue cheese." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 2.

A maitter o', "only," "merely":

"A mere trifle—a maitter o' twa shillin's or half-a-crown." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 10.

Note also haet, het; starn, starn; starnie, 'starni; pickle, 'pikəl, or puckle, 'pakəl; tait or tate, tet; soup, sup (of liquids); thocht, 00xt; curn, curran, karən; grainy, 'greni:

"There's naething like a starn gweed maut." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 30.

"Dead folks may sleep yonder sound enow, but deil haet else." Scott, Fortunes of Nigel, c. 3.

"It struck me she micht be a wee thocht jealous o' the lassie." Wilson, Tales B., "Willie Wastle's Wife."

"So I took to the kist, and out wi'the pickle notes in case they should be needed." Scott, Guy Mannering, c. 45.

"Winna ye hae a starnie jam, Isie ? It's grosert-jam." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 73.

"We hed to lay im down upon a puckle strae." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 33.

"'There's a curran folk at the back door,' Jean announced later." J. M. Barrie, Little Minister, c. 3.

Gey pickle, gai 'pıkal; fell puckle, fel 'pakal; "a good many"; "quite a little":

"A grand farmer he was, wi' land o' his nain, and a gey pickle bawbees." G. Douglas, H. with Green Shutters, c. 5.

"It canna be coals 'at he's wantin' frae the station, for there's a fell puckle left." Ian Maclaren, Brier Bush, "Domsie," c. 1.

Tait is originally a "lump of wool or tow":

"Like a poor lamb that...leaves a tait of its woo' in every Southern bramble." Scott, Fortunes of Nigel, c. 26.

"'Heard ye ever the like o'that, Laird?' said Saddletree to Dumbiedikes, when the counsel had ended his speech. 'There's a chield can spin a muckle pirn out of a wee tait of tow!'" Scott, H. of Midlothian, c. 20.

Tait, tate is used freely of any small portion:

"There was some half-fous o' aits, and some taits o' meadowhay left after the burial." Scott, Bride of Lammermoor, c. 7.

"Och, Lizzie, it was jist a tate the size o' yer nail." J. J. Bell, Wee Macgreegor, c. 10.

"It's an ugly auld pictur! I dinna like it a wee tate (a little bit)." Ib., c. 8.

"A curn or two of Greek would not be amiss." Scott, Fortunes of Nigel, c. 27.

"They war sayin' he had gotten a curn' o' that ga'ano stuff." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 15.

"Ah, Thomas! wadna ye hae a body mak' a grainy fun whiles whan it comes o' itsel' like?" G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 68.

Hantle, hantl, is used of a "considerable number." (Compare Danish antal, Dutch aantal, Ger. anzahl: perhaps "hand" and "tale"):

"There's a hantle bogles about it." Scott, Guy Mannering, c. 1.

Hantle is also used of quantity = "much," both as an adjective and an adverb:

"Your father has always had a grand business, and I brought a hantle money to the house." G. Douglas, H. with Green Shutters, c. 14.

"'It's a hantle easier gettin' a lass than a kirk ony day,' says I." S. R. Crockett, Probationer.

Heap, hip, is also used in the same way:

"A heap good she's like to get of it." R. L. Stevenson, Weir of H., c. 5.

Cairn, kern, kjarn, is "a heap":

"Cairns o' them rinkin up upo' the dyke." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 18.

Rickle, 'rīkəl; ruckle, 'rakəl, is a "heap" (used contemptuously):

"There was a rickle o' useless boxes and trunks." Scott, Antiquary, c. 9.

Gowpenfu', 'gaupenfu, is what can be held in a gowpen or gowpin, i.e. with the palms extended in a cup-like fashion:

"Ow, ay, she brocht him gowpenfu's o' siller." G. Macdonald, David Elginbrod, I, c. 13.

"Left 'goud in goupins' with all those who had the handling of it." Galt, Provost, c. 34.

Nievefu', neavefu', 'ni:vfu, is a "handful," cf. kneevelick, p. 89:

"Awat ye may tak' a nievefu' on-been miss't." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 11.

Routh,  $rau\theta$ , is used for an "abundance":

"Ye'll have hair, and routh of hair, a pigtail as thick's my arm." R. L. Stevenson, Weir of H., c. 5.

Toosht, tuft, is used of an "untidy quantity," "heap of loose stuff":

"Aweel, a' the toosht aboot oor toon (farm) 'll mak' little odds." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 6.

A wheen, a whin, min, min "a few" or "a little," often in a contemptuous way:

"That cost me telling twenty daily lees to a wheen idle chaps and queans." Scott, Bride of Lammermoor, c. 26.

"'Oh,' she would say in weary complaint, 'I just took it to break a wheen coals.'" G. Douglas, H. with Green Shutters, c. 4.

"Sae aff a wheen o' them gaed followin' Rover up the road to the moor." Scottish Review, July 23, 1908, "A Black Day." (Here there is no contemptuous flavour.)

"What use has my father for a whin bits o' scarted paper?" Scott, Waverley, II, c. 29.

A wee, wi:, is "a little":

"...Ance I got a wee soupled yestreen, I was as yauld as an eel." Scott, Antiquary, c. 12.

Note the use of the feck, fek, for "the most part," "the greater portion," with or without a qualifying adjective:

"An ye sat still there the feck o'the aifterneen." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 20.

"I hae been through France and the Low Countries, and a' Poland, and maist feck o' Germany." Scott, Waverley, I, c. 36.

"Ye see the muckle feck o' the young chaps hed lasses." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 40.

19. Standards of quantity, etc. Gill, d3;1, \(\frac{1}{4}\) pint; mutchkin, 'matskin, English pint; chappin, 'tsapin, quart; lippie, 'lipi, 'lipi, \(\frac{1}{4}\) peek; forpet, forpit, 'forpit, fourth of a peek; firlot, 'firlot, 'firlot, bow, bowe, bau, boll or 6 imperial bushels; chalder, 'tsalder, 'tsalder, tsolder, 16 bolls:

"Gettin' a share o' a gill wi' a cheelie." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 14.

"Jist gang an' fess a mutchkin mair." G. Macdonald, Robert Falconer, c. 5.

"Mistress, I have had the two ounces o' tea on boiling in a chappin o' water for the last two hoors." Wilson, Tales B., "Willie Wastle's Wife."

"Four lippies—gweed mizzour—will that dee?" W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 1.

"Mattie Simpson that wants a forpit or twa o' peers." Scott, Rob Roy, c. 14.

"She had bought a firlot (of meal) selected with great care." Cross, Disruption, c. 15.

"Four bows o' aitmeal, twa bows o' bear." Scott, Old Mortality, c. 20.

"Drawing a stipend of eight hundred punds Scots and four chalders of victuals." Scott, H. of Midlothian, c. 43.

The tappit-hen, 'tapethen, was a measure variously estimated; sometimes as a quart. The Aberdeen tappit-hen, or liquor-jar, holds three magnums or Scots pints:

"Don't let the tappit-hen scraugh to be emptied." Scott, L. of Montrose, c. 5.

"Hoo's the tappit-hen?" G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 66.

"Their hostess appeared with a huge pewter measuring pot, containing at least three English quarts, familiarly denominated a tappit-hen, and which, in the language of the hostess, reamed with excellent claret." Scott, Waverley, I, c. 11.

20. Scottish Coinage Terms. Note, pun' note, pannot, 20 shillings (bank issue, and much more popular than the sovereign, equal to the U.S. five dollar gold piece); merk, merk (13s. 4d. = $3.30); pun' Scots (of silver = 1s. 8d. or 40 c.); bawbee, 'ba:'bi = halfpenny = one U.S. cent; "bawbees" stands for cash in general, e.g. "Have ye ony bawbees wi' ye?"; boddle or bodle, bodl, bodl = one-third of a U.S. cent; doit, doit, doit = a Scottish penny, one-sixth of a U.S. cent; plack, plak = one-third of a Scottish penny.

The plural "pence" was used only for English values; "pennies" was applied to the Scots money:

"'Ye maun gie me twopence, I'se warrant,' said the woman. 'Deed no, lucky,' replied Andrew; 'fools and their siller are soon parted. I'll gie you twal pennies gin ye like to tak it.'" Galt, Sir A. Wylie, I, c. 10.

"Were the like o' me to change a note, wha the deil d'ye think wad be sic fules as to gie me charity after that?" Scott, Antiquary, c. 12.

"My sma' means, whilk are not aboon twenty thousand merk." Scott, Waverley, I, c. 36.

"He had ne'er a doit that didna burn a hole in his pouch." Galt, Sir A. Wylie, I, c. 12.

"It stands me in three hundred, plack and bawbee" (i.e. counting minutely). Scott, Black Dwarf, c. 1.

"They wad hae seen my father's roof tree fa' down and smoor me before they would hae gi'en ae boddle apiece to have propped it up." Scott, St Ronan's Well, c. 2.

"Naebody wad trust a bodle to a gaberlunzie." Scott, Antiquary, c. 39.

PRONOUNS

PERSONAL PRONOUNS

- 21. Personal pronouns of the first person. Emphatic "I" may be  $\mathbf{a}\mathbf{i}$  as in St., but  $\mathbf{a}$  is also used. The unemphatic form is  $\mathbf{a}$ , written a and aw.
- "A'm thinking with auld John Knox that ilka scholar is something added to the riches of the commonwealth." Ian Maclaren, Brier Bush, "Domsie," c. 1.
- "Aw thoch aw had a' my material here." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 45.
- "'Aw'm gye an' well used to stickin' to my opeenion,' said the meal miller. 'Aw hae seen the Maitland fowk's verdick come roon' to mine a hantle deal oftener than mine whurl about to theirs." S. R. Crockett, Boanerges Simpson's Incumbrance.
  - "My" is sometimes represented by o' me (cf. Fr. de moi).
- "I think the Hieland blood o' me warms at that daft tales." Scott, Rob Roy, c. 26.
- "My" is usually pronounced like ma, ma, ma, and is often so written:
- "They're ma ain—a' ma ain!" G. Macdonald, Robert Falconer, c. 5.
  - "Mine" takes the form mines or mine's:
- "Mines is no to be mentioned wi' it." R. L. Stevenson, Weir of H., c. 5.
- "Keep your min' easy; mine's is a clipper." D. Gilmour, Gordon's Loan, p. 8.

The accusative "me" is colloquially us or 's. (The first extract is a proposal of marriage, which is certainly not to be made in the plural):

- "'Will ye hae's, Bell?,' demanded Sam'l, glaring at her sheepishly." J. M. Barrie, A. L. Idylls, c. 8.
- "'Will ye no gie's a kiss, Dand?' she said, 'I aye likit ye fine." R. L. Stevenson, Weir of H., c. 6.

"Our" takes the form wir, wir; wur, war, war, on the Northumbrian border, in Glasgow, Ayrshire, Perthshire and elsewhere:

"Maist o' us is that engross't in wir wark." Saltcoats Herald, Nov., 1910.

"But if I took it hame, there would be sic talking and laughing amang wur neighbours." Wilson, Tales B., "Whitsome Tragedy."

"A guinea and a half, if you please, sir. That is wur usual fare." Wilson, Tales B., "The Minister's Daughter."

"We roastit it an' toastit it an' had it to wur tea." J. J. Bell, Wee Macgreegor, c. 13.

Its usual form is oor, ur; with oors for the predicative use:

"There's a hantle to look after yet, and we maunna neglec' oor wark." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 21.

"And whaur did ye fa' in wi' this stray lammie o' oors?" G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 21.

"Us" takes the aspirated forms hus, has; huz, haz; hiz, hiz, and also us yins, thus distinguishing it from us for "me":

"Though it may begin at hus, it canna en' there." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 7.

"But ye winna persuade me that he did his duty, either to himsell or to huz puir dependent creatures." Scott, B. of Lammermoor, c. 24.

"I's warran he cares as little about hiz as we care about him." G. Macdonald, Robert Falconer, c. 4.

"'Deed, she micht ha'e askit us yins till her pairty!,' said John." J. J. Bell, Wee Macgreegor, c. 8.

22. Personal pronouns of the second person. The colloquial use of tu, tu (see Ph. 217 (d)); tou, tu; thoo, ou; thee, oi; thou, oau, is a distinctive mark of Paisley, which has been locally dubbed Seestu, Sistu (Do you see?) because the inhabitants were fond of using the phrase as a close to sentences:

"At length, in a tremulous voice, the childless one asked, 'Wha's tu in mournin for?'" D. Gilmour, The Pen Folk, p. 36.

"Thoo maun gie me something to pit it in, lad." D. Gilmour, Paisley Weavers, c. 4.

"Although thee and me thinks 't wrang tae eat bluid." D. Gilmour, Paisley Weavers, c. 5.

"Thou maunna lea' the deid burd in my keeping—tak' it wi' thee." D. Gilmour, Gordon's Loan, p. 9.

The usage is also found in Dumfriesshire:

"'And wha is't tou's gotten, Wullie, lad?,' said half a score of voices." Scott, Redgauntlet, Letter XII.

In north-east Aberdeenshire, thoo was once in common use, and may still be heard occasionally among old people:

"If thoo were a thrifty lass, as thoo're a fair." Old Rhyme. Cf. also Shetlandic:

"An sood du try da lek agen,

Dis twartee lines 'll lat dee ken

Du sanna pass me." Burgess, Rasmie's Buddie. In the Sc. dialect of the Black Isle, Easter Ross, and in the Canobie dialect of the Sth. Counties, thoo and thee are still in use:

Ar thoo get the water, Lugs?

"Where did you get the water, Lugs?"

"Your" and "you are" take the form yer, jer; yir, jir, jər:

"Wull ye mak' a prayer for yir auld dominie afore we pairt?" Ian Maclaren, Brier Bush, "Domsie," c. 3.

"When onybody passes ye yer tae say, 'Thank ye.'" J. M. Barrie, Thrums, c. 4.

Your wa's, yir waa's are used in place of "away":

"An come your wa's wi me." Child's Ballads, Battle of Harlaw, st. 13, p. 401.

"Gang ye yer waa's for the aifternoon." Life at a Northern University, c. 1.

23. Personal pronouns of the third person<sup>1</sup>. Burns uses the old English form scho,  $\int \phi$ , for "she":

¹ Highlanders are fond of the feminine pronoun for all genders. The story is told of a Highland domestic at Rothesay, who came in from the back yard one morning, carrying a rabbit. He explained the situation to his master in this fashion: "She was in the garden, an' she saw the rabbit; an' she took a stane, an' flung 'er at 'er an' kilt 'er."

"Here one of the gillies addressed her in what he had of English, to know what 'she' (meaning by that himself) was to do about 'ta sneeshin.' R. L.

Stevenson, David Balfour, c. 1.

"'What the deil, man,' said an old Highland servant belonging to the

"The gossip keekit in his loof,
Quo' scho, 'wha lives will see the proof.'"
Burns, There Was a Lad. (Song.)

Note the objective form of personal pronoun when two or more subjects are mentioned, e.g. "Me and him's awa tae the ploo."

"Her" is often found as 'er:

"'Er fader's to be latt'n gae to see his gweed-dother." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 49.

The old form hit for "it" is in common use where emphatic. Hit is a survival of O.E. "hit," neuter singular form of the personal pronoun:

"It would take a heap to revolutionize hit." G. Douglas, H. with Green Shutters, c. 10.

"Paw," said Macgreegor, "I see the zoo." "Ay, thon's hit." J. J. Bell, Wee Macgreegor, c. 2.

To be hit or het—"to be the player who is caught and has to take his turn at catching the others."

"I wis playin' wi' Wullie an' the ither laddies at tig, an' I never was het!" J. J. Bell, Wee Macgreegor, c. 8.

It is sometimes used as a preliminary subject in place of "there" or a plural form:

"'I tried to cry oot,' she said afterwards, 'for I kent 'at it were rottans.'" G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 8.

Note that the order of pronominal objects, direct and indirect, when used consecutively, often differs in Sc. from St., the direct object coming first.

"I'll show it ye some of thir days if ye're good." R. L. Stevenson, Weir of H., c. 5.

24. Reflexive pronouns. "Self" takes the form sel' or sell; masel' ma'sel'; oorsel' ur'sel, wir'sel; oorsel's, yersell, yersel's; hiz'sel, hissell, hersel', itsel', themsel's, theirsel's:

family, 'can she no drink after her ain master without washing the cup and spilling the ale, and be tamned to her?'" Scott, L. of Montrose, c. 4.

<sup>1</sup> The term is used to cover the varied uses with sel' or sell, some of them differing from the standard usage with "self": e.g. "I've hurt mys'l" (ordinary reflexive); "I've hurt ma'sel" (emphatic reflexive); "I did it ma'sel'" (emphatic nominative); "I did it ma'sel" (e.g. "by myself"). Compare the last with the use of lane (see par. 25); "I did it my lane." This is an adverbial use.

"A' mind gettin' ma paiks for birdnestin' masel'." Ian Maclaren, Brier Bush, "Domsie," c. 1.

"Weel, ye see, sir, your college is a great expense to heumble fowk like oorsel's." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 79.

Yoursel' or yersel' is the form used with singular "you"; yoursel's with plural "you":

"But I'll appel to yersel', Jinse." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 14.

"Put out the double moulds, and e'en show yoursel's to your beds." Scott, St Ronan's Well, c. 28.

"He couldna murder the twa o' them hissel'." G. Macdonald, Settlement, p. 165. (W.)

"That hour had been the last of hursel". S. R. Crockett, Raiders, c. 40. (W.)

"But it cam' o' 'tsel'." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 58.

"His ain dear Annie and her two sisters had to taigle home by theirselves like a string of green geese." R. L. Stevenson, David Balfour, c. 30.

Note the form nainsell, ne:nsel (ownself), specially common on the Highland border:

"Ye's hae as mickle o' mine to your nainsel' as 'll clear Mrs Forbes." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 89.

Ainsel is the usual Scottish form of "ownself":

"I'll show an elder in Yarrow Kirk, ony Sabbath atween this and Christmas, that shall outmanner your ainsel'." Wilson, Noctes Ambro., c. 14.

The sell o't is sometimes used for "itself":

"Kirkcaldy, the sell o't, is langer than ony town in England." Scott, Rob Roy, c. 14.

So also the sell o' ye for "yourself":

"I ken nae friend he has in the world that's been sae like a father to him as the sell o' ye, neibor Deans." Scott, H. of Midlothian, c. 9.

Murray lays down this distinction in his Dialect of the Southern Counties of Scotland (p. 197):

"In the plural there is a double form: oor-sel, yoor-sel, thair-sel, are used when the idea is collective: oor-sels, yoor-sels, thair-sels, when the idea is segregate. Thus, 'Wey-ll dui'd oorsel; Ye maun keip thyr be thair sel.' But 'Gang awa' yer twa sels.'"

25. Use of pronoun with "lane," len, "alone." The pronounadjectives my, yir, his, her, its are used with lane to make the equivalent of "alone." Oor, yir, their, are used with lanes, but oftener with lane. Sometimes the prefix lee, li:, and the adjective leeful, 'li:fə, or leaful are added for emphasis:

"So being my leeful lane with the dead body." Galt, Steamboat, c. 13.

"So 'at we micht hae a kin' o' a bit parlour like, or rather a roomie 'at ony o' us micht retire till for a bit, gin we wanted to be oor lanes." G. Macdonald, David Elginbrod, I, c. 12.

"A sturdy brat that has been rinning its lane for mair than sax weeks." Galt, Ayrshire Legatees, c. 5.

"Nae lass gaed hame her lane." Taylor, Poems, p. 93. (W.)

The indefinite pronoun "a body" takes the form their lane:

"What a time o' nicht is this to keep a body to, waiting and fretting on o' ye, their lane?" Wilson, Tales B., "Hen-pecked Man."

Note the phrase her lanesome = "alone":

"She'll shin be walkin' her lanesome—wull ye no', honey?" J. J. Bell, Wee Macgreegor, c. 2.

Note, however, the forms him lane, itlane and them lanes:

"I reckon he micht hae thocht lang there, a' him lane." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 53.

"There's nane (no poetry)
That gies sic great insight to me
As yours itlane."

Letter to R. Fergusson, Perth Magazine, 1773.

"Till the verry lasses are not to be lippent out them lanes." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 53.

Note the Aberdeenshire form, their leens, our linz:

"The Presbytery's ill eneuch their leens." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 18.

By...lane is the predicative form:

"Robes and foot-mantles that wad hae stude by their lane wi' gold brocade." Scott, H. of Midlothian, c. 4.

"Is he by his lane?" S. R. Crockett, Men of the Moss Hags, c. 4.

26. Interrogative pronouns. "Who" = wha, ma:, mo:; whae, me:; fa, fa: (Northern).

"'Folks says sae,' replied the bard. 'Wha says sae?' she pursued." R. L. Stevenson, Weir of H., c. 6.

"'What mistress do I forget? whae's that?' she pursued." Scott, Rob Roy, c. 6.

"Fa wud ken fat ye wud be at!" W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 16.

The accusative form is wham:

"Wham sal I lippen, O Lord, wham but thee?" H. P. Cameron, Sc. version of the Imitatio Christi, c. 45.

But in ordinary dialect no change is made for the accusative.

The possessive form is whas(e), ma:z, mo:z, me:z. In place of the possessive a periphrasis is common:

Whas is this? = "Whose is this?"

Wha is aught the wean? = "Whose is the child?" Wha belangs this hoose? = "Whose house is this?"

"Which" takes the forms whilk, Milk; quhilk (archaic); filk, filk; full, fal (Aberdeen).

"'An' filk o' them wud be warst likein?' inquired Mains." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 23.

The form whit yin = "which" is very common: "Whit yin will ye tak?"

"What" takes forms whit, mit; fat, fat (Northern):

"'Maw, whit's the name o' thon spotit yin?' cried Macgreegor."
J. J. Bell, Wee Macgreegor, c. 2.

"An' fat ither lessons wud ye like to tak?" W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 15.

Note the forms whatten, 'maten, whatten a, whatna, what'n, fatten (Northern); all worn-down forms of "what kind of?":

"Whatna hummeldoddie o' a mutch hae ye gotten?" Ramsay, Reminiscences, c. 4.

"But whaur will ye be the morn, and in whatten horror o' the fearsome tempest?" R. L. Stevenson, Weir of H., c. 8.

"When it was announced that Mr Thomas Thomson was dead, an Aberdeen friend of the family asked, 'Fatten Thamas Tamson?'" Ramsay, Reminiscences, c. 5.

27. Relative pronouns. That, \delta at, \delta st; 'at, at, at; 't, t. The idiomatic relative pronoun in Sc. is that, taking the forms 'at, 't, and often being omitted even when nominative of a clause:

"My Maggie's no ane 'at needs luikin' efter." G. Macdonald,

David Elginbrod, I, c. 6.

"Yon's a snippit horsie 't was i' the secont pair—yon young beastie." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 15.

The relative is sometimes omitted along with the auxiliary have:

"There's no mair than two acre seen the ploo." Ian Maclaren, Days of A.L.S., "Milton's Conversion."

An idiomatic possessive for this relative is got by adding "his," "her" or equivalents:

"That's the man 'at's hoose was brunt."

Wha, whae, quha, fa, and oblique forms. The dialect forms of "who," wha, fa (Northern) are used as relative pronouns (masc. and fem.) in rhetorical prose and in poetry.

"Scots, wha hae wi' Wallace bled." Burns.

Wha and wham are not, however, modernisms, for they occur in the forms quha and quham frequently in Middle Scots:

"(He) hid his blisfull glorious ene To se quham angellis had delyt."

Dunbar.

"Ane hasty hensure callit Hary Quha wes ane archer heynd."

Chryst's Kirk.

But quha and quham, as relatives, never passed into popular speech. The relative is always "that," "at." In Middle Sc. quha was often used for "he who" or "they who": in modern speech = "him that" or "them that." "Them that fin's, keeps."

Oblique cases, whase, wham, are found in poetry and prose, especially where tinctured by biblical phraseology:

"The Holy Ghost, whase temple we sud be, is wranged forby." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 85.

"Scots, wham Bruce has aften led." Burns.

The final m of the accusative is nearly always omitted in modern dialect usage.

Whilk, quhilk, filk, milk, filk.

The neuter of this relative takes the forms whilk, quhilk, filk (Aberdeen) and whuch ("fancy" Scotch):

"To ony body o' whuch they war jined members." G.

Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 68.

"'They ca' them,' said Mr Jarvie, in a whisper, 'Daoine Schie, whilk signifies, as I understand, "men of peace."" Scott, Rob Roy, c. 28.

"And I tried to gie birth till a sang—the quhilk, like Jove, I conceived i' my heid last nicht." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 84.

28. Ilk, tlk; ilkin, 'tlkin, as pronouns.

Ilk for "every one," used as a pronoun, is rarely found separately, without ane. Ramsay in his Reminiscences, c. 3, quotes the toast:

"May we a' be canty an' cosy, An' ilk hae a wife in his bosy."

Murray, Oxford Dictionary, under "Ilk," mentions ilkin as in modern Scottish a frequent pronunciation of ilkane:

"Take ilkin a dog wi' ye."

Ilk, meaning "same," is found in the phrase "of that ilk" (proprietor of the estate from which the name has been taken, or vice versa):

"Young Earncliff, 'of that ilk,' had lately come of age." Scott, Black Dwarf, c. 1.

29. Indefinite pronouns. Ane, en, jin, a body, a 'bodi, or 'badi; onybody, 'onibodi; a' body; naebody, 'nebodi. The indefinite pronoun "one" takes the form ane, en, jin:

"Ane canna expect to carry about the Saut Market at his tail." Scott, Rob Roy, c. 34.

Note the plural "their" in association with ane:

"Eh, sirs! yon's a awfu' sight, and yet ane canna keep their een aff frae it." Scott, Old Mortality, c. 17.

The common indefinite term is a body:

"Weel, weel, a body canna help a bit idle thocht rinnin i' their heid." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 47.

"Gin a body meet a body
Comin' through the rye,
Gin a body kiss a body
Need a body cry?" Popular Song.

"Anybody" is onybody:

"I might grane my heart out or onybody wad gie me either a bane or a bodle." Scott, Antiquary, c. 12.

"Everybody" is a'body (a' = "all"), 'a:bodi, 'q:bodi:

"Little wonder if a'body's talking, when ye make a'body ye're confidants." R. L. Stevenson, Weir of H., c. 9.

"Nobody" is naebody:

"Naebody got onything by him, and mony lost." Ramsay, Reminiscences, c. 2.

30. Equivalents of "anything," "nothing."

"Anything," "aught," are usually represented by ocht, aucht, oxt, axt, although onything is also in use:

"She whiles fetches ocht that there may be for us." S. R. Crockett, The Tutor of Curlywee.

"Well! weel! I didna mean onything." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 2.

Of ocht, a stronger form is aucht or ocht (anything whatever):

"Johnny got something very like crusty, and said he 'kent nedder aucht nor ocht aboot it." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 6.

"Anything whatever" may also be rendered ocht or flee (Aberdeen):

"There's nae occasion for you to say ocht or flee." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 36.

Naething is the Sc. equivalent of "nothing":

"Naething should be done in haste but gripping fleas." Sc. Proverb (A. Cheviot, p. 261).

Not a haet is the equivalent of "nothing":

"There's not a haet that happens at the Gourlays but she clypes." G. Douglas, H. with Green Shutters, c. 21.

CHAPTER IV

ADJECTIVES

31. Cardinal numerals.

thretty, 'Oreti ten. ten ane, en, jin, jin twa, twa:, two:; twae, eleeven, ə'livən forty, 'fortz fifty, 'fift; twal. twal twe: thrie. Ori: thretteen, 'Oretin saxty, 'sakstı seeventy, 'sivnty, fower, 'fauer fowrteen, 'faurtin fyve, farv fyfteen, 'fiftin 'sevantı sax, saks saxteen auchty, 'axtı, 'extı ninety, 'nainty seeven, 'sivan; saiven, seeventeen auchteen hunner, 'hundər 'sevan thoosand, 'Ou:zənd, aucht, axt; aicht, ext nineteen nine, nain twenty, 'twinti Ousnt

32. Idiomatic uses of cardinals. Ae, e:, or yae, je: (one), is the form of the cardinal before a noun:

"It canna be but that in the life ye lead ye suld get a Jeddart cast ae day suner or later." Scott, Rob Roy, c. 36.

"If it's sae graun' to listen to yae minister on Sabbath, what maun it no' be to hear a dizzen a' at yince?" S. R. Crockett, Trial for License by the Presbytery of Pittscottie.

The tae is used for "the one." Here the ending of the O.E. neuter form of the definite article (demonstrative) survives, attached to the second word (the tae = "that ae"). See Ph. 217 (e).

"The tae half o' the gillies winna ken." Scott, Rob Roy, c. 34.

Twa three is a phrase implying "some," "a few":

"Atweesh the shou'ders o' twa three o' them." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 18.

33. Idiomatic compounds and phrases formed with cardinal numerals. "Twelvemonth" is townon, townond, townont, 'taumond, 'taumont:

"Hoot, I haena been in Aberdeen this three towmons." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 27.

Twal hours, twal u:rz, is the midday meal or dinner; four-hours, faur u:rz, is the afternoon meal or tea:

"I thought ye would hae had that o'er by twal hours." Galt, Sir A. Wylie, I, c. 10.

"So I'll thank ye to get me a mutchkin of strong yill and a cooky, which will baith serve me for fourhours and supper." Ib., c. 12.

Twasome, threesome, foursome, combinations of two, three, or four persons, e.g. players at golf. In a "Scotch foursome" two players have one ball against the other two players, and strike it in turn.

34. Ordinal numerals. The terminal -t after cardinals takes the place of -th in ordinary dialect:

"Ye ken he's in the foort class." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb,

c. 10.

"Syne he read the twenty-third and fourt psalms." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 85.

"The places is to be set about the twenty-foift." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 34.

"'The boady of the saxt,' pursued Kirstie, 'wi' his head smashed like a hazelnit." R. L. Stevenson, Weir of H., c. 5.

"...and begud, or ever I kent, to sing the hunner and saivent psalm." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 45.

35. Uses and forms of "this," "these." "This" is sometimes used as a plural:

"That self sam ministeris: this speichis: this wemen": Spalding's Historie (17th century).

Also in modern use in the N.E.:

"I'll knock aff some o' that loons' heids." "This twa three notes." Greig, Mains's Wooing.

"These" is thir (O.N. deir; found in M.E. as dir, der):

"'pir wurdes,' he sayd, 'er all in vayne.'" Death of St Andrew.

"'Thir kittle times will drive the wisest o' us daft,' said Niel Blane." Scott, Old Mortality, c. 19.

But "these" is sometimes thae:

"They have been a sad changed family since that rough times began." Scott, Old Mortality, c. 36.

36. Uses and forms of "that," "those." "That" is yon, thon: "Yon divot 'at ye flang aff o' Luckie Lapp's riggin,' said Curly, 'cam richt o' the back o' my heid." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 20.

"Thon taiblet's jist fu' o' nits." J. J. Bell, Wee Macgreegor, c. 1.

"Those" is thae:

"'Upon my conscience, Rose,' ejaculated the Baron, 'the gratitude o' that dumb brutes, and of that puir innocent, brings the tears into my auld een.'" Scott, Waverley, II, c. 35.

"Are there really folk that do that kind o' jobs for siller?"

Galt, Sir A. Wylie, I, c. 30.

That is found in place of the plural "those" (a North country idiom):

"To mizzour aff some o' that bits o' places." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 30.

"Keep awa' fae the edges o' that ooncanny banks." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 5.

"Those" takes the form them when used pronominally:

"Them that buys beef buys banes, as the aul' by-word says." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 25.

37. Indefinite adjectives. "Other" is ither, 'ider; tither, 'trder. The tither, the tother, de 'tader are used for "the other":

"Ance I thocht to gang across to tither side o' the Queensferry wi' some ither folks to a fair." Ramsay, Reminiscences, c. 5.

"The probang we had the tither nicht." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 32.

Note the combination "the tane or the tither," "the one or the other":

"It was the tane or the tither o' them, I am sure, and it maks na muckle matter whilk." Scott, H. of Midlothian, c. 11.

The combination tane...tother is also used:

"And the 'did promise and vow' of the tane were yokit to the end o' the tother." Scott, Old Mortality, c. 37.

The combination tae...ither is also found: here the use is adjectival, not pronominal:

"I'se warrant it was the tae half o' her fee and bountith, for she wanted the ither half on pinners and pearlings." Scott, Old Mortality, c. 14.

38. Equivalents of "every," "each." "Every" or "each" is ilk, ilka:

"Ilk lass takes her leglin, and hies her away." Jane Elliott, Flowers of the Forest (Song).

"Ilka land has its ain land law." Scott, H. of Midlothian, c. 28.

"That will be just five-and-threepence to ilka ane o' us, ye ken." Scott, Antiquary, c. 16.

"In ilka-day meals, I am obligated to hae a regard for frugality." Galt, Sir A. Wylie, I, c. 30.

"What did ye do with your ilka-days claise (everyday clothes) yesterday?" Scott, H. of Midlothian, c. 15.

"Every" is a'kin, 'a:kin, or 'a:kəin:

"Wi a'kin kind of things." Child's Ballads, Lady Maisry, st. 2, p. 128.

The phrase, the piece, takes the place of "each" (used pronominally):

"We hed a gweed stoot stick the piece." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 18.

"Each" as a pronoun or its equivalent is not found colloquially before "other" (ither) after verbs:

"I thocht we understood ither on that matter." Gilmour, Pen Folk, c. 8.

39. Uses of "severals," "antrin," "orra."

"Several," 'sevrəlz, takes a plural in -s:

"There's severals 'll hae to gae yet." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 30.

"Occasional" is antrin, 'antrin; tantrin, 'tantrin; antrant, 'antrent:

"Pop the proverb in yer pooch An tak an antrin read."

T. W. Patterson, Auld Saws.

"Extra" or "odd" is orra, 'ora:

"Sanders was little better than an 'orra man' and Sam'l was a weaver." J. M. Barrie, A. L. Idylls, c. 8.

- "Had a whin kegs o' brandy in them at an orra time." Scott, Guy Mannering, c. 9.
- 40. Forms of "such." "Such" is sic, sik; siccan, 'sikən; sich ("genteel Sc."), sitj; siclike, 'sikləik, siccan-like:

"Sic a man as thou wad be, draw thee to sic companie." A. Cheviot, Proverbs, p. 298.

"And siccan a breed o' cattle is not in any laird's land in Scotland." Scott, Waverley, I, c. 36.

"That lady, holding up her hands, exclaimed, 'Sich vulgarity.'" J. J. Bell, Wee Macgreegor, c. 13.

"'I like na siccan work,' said some." S. R. Crockett, Accepted of the Beasts.

"Such" in the form sic, siclike, is sometimes used without a following noun:

"I could hae carried twa sic then." Scott, Antiquary, c. 33.

"I wonder how ye can be fashed wi' siclike." Galt, Sir A. Wylie, I, c. 18.

Siclike may follow its noun:

"They're forced...to bide about the Broch, or some gate siclike (method of that kind)." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 14.

"Such as" is usually represented by "the like o":

"Fan the like o' 'im's amo' them (when such as he are among them)." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 23.

41. Uses of "pickle," "puckle," "mair," "mae," "mickle," "muckle." "Some" or "a few" is sometimes represented by puckles:

"Nane but puckles o' the gentry gets 't deen in ae Sunday." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 16.

A puckle, pakl, or a pickle, pakl, is used of "a few," both for quantity and number:

"The laird has a puckle fine stirks i' the Upper Holm park." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 11.

"A pickle's no missed in a mickle." A. Cheviot, Proverbs, 22.

"More" is mair, meir, or mae, mei, mair being originally of quantity and mae of number:

"And what mair me than another?" Wilson, Tales B., "Roger Goldie's Narrative."

Mickle, muckle, meikle are all forms of "much":

"Muckle coin, muckle care." A. Cheviot, Proverbs, p. 254.

"I couldna hae thought he would hae done so meikle for me already." Galt, Sir A. Wylie, I, c. 25.

Consequently the proverb as quoted, "Many a mickle makes a muckle" is tautological nonsense. The proper rendering is "Mony a pickle makes a mickle."

42. Some common comparatives and superlatives. The comparative of ill is waur (worse), wair:

"I maun gae and get Rashleigh out o' the town afore waur comes o' it." Scott, Rob Roy, c. 25.

The superlative of ill is warst, warst, warst:

"Do you think that folk wad expec' onything o' me gin the warst came to the warst?" G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 4.

Muckle ("much" or "great") takes the comparative and superlative forms, muckler, mucklest.

"Muckler sooms to them that it wouldna be easy to uplift it fae again." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 47.

The form mae ("moe" of Shakespeare's "Sing no moe ditties, sing no moe") is in use:

"Sal-alkali o' Midge-tail clippings,

And mony mae." Burns, Death and Doctor Hornbook.

"I might hae broken my neck—but troth it was in a venture, mae ways nor ane." Scott, Waverley, II, c. 30.

"Later," "latter" is hinner, 'hinder, hint, hint:

"There's a heep o' judgments atween this an' the hinner en'." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 60.

"It happened at the hint end o' hervest" (Sth.).

"Latest," "last" is hinmost, 'hinmost:

"My father's hinmost words to me was, 'It's time eneuch to greet, laddie, when ye see the aurora borealis.'" J. M. Barrie, The Little Minister, c. 26.

"Lowest" is nethmost (neth = "beneath"):

"Ye've keepit me sittin wytein ye till the vera nethmost shall o' the lamp's dry." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 14.

"Uppermost" is boonmost or bunemost (boon, bune = "above"),
'bynməst:

"'O,' quo' the boonmost, 'I've got a het skin.'" Chambers, Popular Rhymes, p. 33. (W.)

Also eemest, umist, yimost, 'iməst, 'jiməst, O.E.  $\overline{y}$ mest, Gothic aúhumists:

"Three feet eemist, cauld an deed, Twa feet nethmest, flesh an bleed."
Gregor, Folk-Lore (1881, p. 79).

"Innermost" is benmost, 'benməst:

"While frighted rattons backward leuk,
And seek the benmost bore." Burns, Jolly Beggars.

43. Free use of "-est." The termination -est for the superlative of adjectives is used more freely in Scottish dialect than the standard usage allows. A phrase like, "An incident of the most extraordinary kind happened," would be rendered, "The awfu'estlike thing happened."

"Ye wad spoil the maist natural and beautifaest head o' hair in a' Freeport." Scott, Antiquary, c. 10.

- 44. Special comparative uses. Auld and young are used in the sense of "eldest," "youngest" (Wright, Grammar, p. 269). He compares this usage with auld = "first," "best," found in East Anglia, especially in the vocabulary of bowls and other games.
- 45. Some intensive forms = "very." The adjective "gay," usually in the forms gey, gai, geyan, 'gaian, or gye an', is freely used to modify or intensify:

"'Ay,' replied Andrew, 'they're gay and heigh.'" Galt, Sir

A. Wylie, I, c. 13.

"Lily's juist ower saft-hearted, and she has a gey lot o' trimmies tae deal wi'." Ian Maclaren, Days of A. L. S., "A Servant Lass," c. 1.

"My God, aye, it's a geyan pity o' me." G. Douglas, House with Green Shutters, c. 12.

Braw and is sometimes used in the same way:

"That loft above the rafters, thought the provident Wilson, will come in braw and handy for storing things." G. Douglas, H. with Green Shutters, c. 10.

CHAPTER V

VERBS

46. Inflections of the Present Tense Indicative. In ordinary speech the termination -s is sometimes added to the 1st pers. sing., especially of habitual action: or when the present is used for a dramatic past: or when a relative pronoun is the subject of the verb:

"I rises ilka day at sax." Murray's Dialect of the Sth. Counties, p. 214.

"Aa hears a reis'le at the doar an' thynks aa, quhat can that bey." Ibid.

"I heard the clatter o' them an' throws on my waistcoat." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 18.

"It's me at comes first."

Occasional examples are found in Middle Sc.:

"Quhilkis I obleissis me to redelevyr."  $Stirling\ Records, 1638.$

The St. termination -t is not found in the 2nd pers. sing. pres. indic.; e.g. thou will, thou sings, thou's for "thou wilt," "thou sing'st," "thou hast":

"Thou'll break my heart, thou bonie bird,

That sings upon the bough." Burns, Bonie Doon.

"Wee, modest, crimson-tipped flow'r, Thou's (hast) met me in an evil hour."

Burns, To a Mountain Daisy.

With noun subjects, not pronouns, the verb has -s in the plural pres. indic.:

"Yet he downa gang to rest, for his heart is in a flame, To meet his bonnie lassie when the kye comes hame." James Hogg (Song).

But the pronouns we, ye, they, are followed by the uninflected form as in standard usage, unless separated from the verb by intervening words:

You are a' says that. You at comes last, jist gets the same. It's his at kens fine. 47. Note the idiom common in Mid and Sth. Sc. the're = there is.

they wur = there was.

"O! Paw, there a wee doug ootbye, an its worryin' my hat."
J. J. Bell, Wee Macgreegor, c. 10.

Dhay wur nay pailinz, yee see.
"There was no fence, you see."
Wilson's Lowland Scotch, p. 123.

48. Marks of the preterit in weak verbs. The past tense indic takes -it, -et, or -t for all numbers and persons<sup>1</sup>, but see Ph. §17 and Gr. App. D:

"Dinna mind me, Paitrick, for a' expeckit this." Ian Maclaren, Brier Bush, "Doctor of Old School," c. 4.

"He juist nippet up his verbs...First in the Humanity, and first in the Greek, sweepit the field." Ian Maclaren, Brier Bush, "Domsie," c. 2.

49. The present participle and gerund. The present participle used to end in an(d):

"Upon Grene Lynton they lyghted dowyn, Styrande many a stage."

Child's Ballads, Battle of Otterburn, p. 387.

"An' ding me na by, i' yer bleezan torne." Psalm vi. 1, P. H. Waddell's Translation.

The Participial termination "an(d)" and the Gerund ending in yng, yne, ene were confused in most of the Sc. dialects after the sixteenth century and are now written in, in, in, in. In the dialects of the Sth. Counties and Caithness, the distinction is still maintained.

"Thay war dans and as thruw uther (durch einander) an' syc dans in' as never sas a fuore; hey beguid a-greitin, but feint o' eane kænnd quhat hey was greit and for; syc ongang in's as yr gaan' on yonder." Murray, Dialect of the Southern Counties, p. 211.

&lt;sup>1</sup> The connecting vowel is dropped when the verb ends in any consonant except t, p, k, d, b, g. After an accented vowel d (instead of t) is more common in the Mid and Sth. dialects as also after a liquid or nasal.

"He's fond o' gutterin aboot."

"He's aye gutteran aboot."

Warrack, Scots Dialect Dictionary, Introduction, p. 21, and Ph. § 54.

50. Use of the progressive form. The progressive form of the verb, first person sing., formed with the verb "to be" and the present participle, is used colloquially in making deliberate statements, where standard usage employs the simple verb:

"'My feth, sir,' said Archy, 'I'm dootin' that it's sic exercise as them that's engaged in't 'll no like vera weel.'" Wilson, Tales B., "Blacksmith of Plumtree."

"'Ye'll have ye're ups and downs like me, I'm thinking,' he observed." R. L. Stevenson, Weir of H., c. 6.

A free use of this form of verb is a mark of Highland speech, where there is a flavour of deliberateness:

"I was never knowing such a girl, so honest and beautiful." R. L. Stevenson, David Balfour, c. 21.

"I was to be carrying them their meat in the middle night." Ibid.

51. The use of "on," "ohn" with past participle or gerund. The past participle of verbs is used with on, ohn (Northern Sc. only) to signify lack, deprivation or omission: e.g. ohnbeen, onhed, ongrutten:

"I'll jist need to gang to my prayers to haud me ohnbeen<sup>1</sup> angry wi' ane o' the Lord's bairns." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 44.

"I'm nae responsible to gae afore Sir Simon onhed my papers upo' me." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 42.

"I cudna 'a haud'n up my heid, Tam, nor been ongrutt'n" (on + p. part. of greet, to weep). W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 16.

This combination with  $on^2$  is also common in Aberdeenshire usage with the gerund.

"Ye'll nae gyang on tellin's."

&lt;sup>2</sup> This infinitive (or gerund) in ing (an) may be heard in N.E. Scotland after

So in Mid. Sc.:

"Sa mony as the bot wald hauld on drawning thame sellffis." Pitscottie, Chronicles of Scotland, S.T.S. Ed. II, 122.

52. Special negative forms. Note the negative -na (not), na and ne, used with verbs; winna, 'winna (will not), sanna, 'sanna (shall not), canna, 'kanna (cannot), maunna, 'manna (must not), dinna, 'dinna (do not), daurna, 'da:rna (dare not), sudna, 'sadna (should not), binna, 'binna (be not), haena, 'hena (have not), comesna, 'kamzna (comes not), downa, 'dauna, etc.:

"I ken naebody but my brother, Monkbarns, himsell wad gae through the like o' 't, if indeed it binna you, Mr Lovell." Scott, Antiquary, c. 11.

"Yet still she blushed, and frowning cried, 'Na, na, it winna do; I canna, canna, winna, winna, mauna buckle to." Popular Song, "Within a Mile of Edinburgh Town."

"I couldna dee less nor offer to come wi'im." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 46.

Downa do is used of a refusal:

"But downa do comes o'er me now,

And, oh, I find it sairly."

Burns, The Deuk's Dang O'er my Daddie.

In Aberdeenshire -na sometimes takes the form -nin with am, 'amnın, wus, 'waznın, div, 'dıvnın, mith, 'mıθnın, used interrogatively (see "be," "do," "might").

53. Auxiliary verbs. Forms and uses of "do" (O.E.  $d\bar{o}n$ ). I, we, you, they, dae, de:, du, dø:, div, div, dinna, 'dinna, divna, 'divna, divnin, 'divnin:

Thou, he, she, it, dis, diz; disna, 'dizna.

"And dae they feed ye tae?" H. Maclaine, M. F. the P., p. 21.

"I divna ken wha's till preach." Ramsay, Reminiscences, c. 6.

on or ohn, but it is quite certainly an imitation of the infinitive after prepositions. The past participle is the original and still the more common form. In the N.E. on the preposition is pronounced on; on or ohn in this particular usage is pronounced on, un, coming from an original un. The confusion may have begun when a number of verbs came to have the same form for the Past Part. and the Pres. Part. Thus in most Sc. dialects such couples as falling—fallen, eating—eaten, holding—holden are represented in each case by one pronunciation, viz. 'faon, itn, haid. Examples of un+Past Part. may be found in O.E.

"But gin I dinna, my left leg dis." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 16.

"Div ye mind what I said, 'There's something ahint that face.'" Ian Maclaren, Brier Bush, "Domsie," c. 2.

"If George Howe disna get to college, then he's the first scholar I've lost in Drumtochty." Ian Maclaren, Brier Bush, "Domsie." c. 1.

A form div, div, dav, is found in interrogative sentences, usually for the purpose of emphasis:

"Duv ye think I'm fleyt at her?" G. Macdonald, Robert Falconer, c. 5.

"Will ye say 'at ye div tak' thoucht, George?" G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 25.

The form divnin, 'divnin, is found (Aberdeen):

"'Divnin ye see the ships sailin' on't,' said the lassie." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 2.

54. Forms and uses of "do" (O.E. dugan). The verb dow, dau, "can" must not be confused with "do" (O.E.  $d\bar{o}n$ ). Its past tense is dought, dauxt, docht, dowt, dow'd, daud.

"Ye'll make what speed ye dow." Galt, Sir A. Wylie, I, c. 30.

"My lady didna dow (couldn't bear) to hear muckle about the friends on that side of the house." Scott, Guy Mannering, c. 39.

"Women are wilfu', and downa bide a slight." Scott, H. of Midlothian, c. 15.

"Beggars douna bide wealth." A. Cheviot, Proverbs, p. 55.

"Went home to St Leonard's Crags, as well as a woman in her condition dought." Scott, H. of Midlothian, c. 21.

"I dochtna bide to hear yer bonnie name." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, "Last Wooing" (Song), c. 22.

"For he dow'd na see onybody want." Scott, Old Mortality, c. 37.

Note downa do = "can't be done," used as a noun-phrase:

"But downa do's come o'er me now, And, oh, I find it sairly, O."

Burns, The Deuk's Dang O'er My Daddie.

55. Forms and uses of "will." "Will" takes the form wull, wal, wil; "will not," winna, 'winna, wonna, wonna; "would," wud, wad, wad, wud, wad; "would not," wadna, 'wadnə, 'wədnə, widna, 'widnə, wudna, 'wadnə:

"'Wonna she, Johnnie?' 'Ay wull she,' answered Johnnie, following his leader with confidence." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes c. 9.

"How wad ye like when it cums to be your ain chance? as I winna ensure ye, if ye dinna mend your manners." Scott, H. of Midlothian, c. 4.

"His goodwife asked me if I widna hae my stockings changed." Wilson, Tales B., "I Canna Be Fashed."

"The dragoons will be crying for ale, and they wunna want it." Scott, Old Mortality, c. 3.

"Wad it be a glorified timmer leg he rase wi', gin he had been buried wi' a timmer leg?" G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 3.

"Sic a wife as Willie had!

I wadna gie a button for her."

Burns, Willie's Wife (Song).

"Will" is the ordinary auxiliary form interrogative for the future tense; "shall I," "shall you" are not used. (But "I shall," "you shall," become I'se, you'se):

"'Will I have gotten my jo now?' she thought with a secret rapture." R. L. Stevenson, Weir of H., c. 6.

56. Note frequent use of "will" in Sc. where omitted in St. usage, often to denote supposition:

"I see somebody will have (has) been talking to ye, she said sullenly." R. L. Stevenson, Weir of H., c. 9.

Note the use of "will" with "can" to form a future tense in Mid and Sth. dialects:

"'That's my bairn!' said Kirstie rising, 'I'll can trust ye noo, I'll can gang to my bed wi' an easy hairt.'" R. L. Stevenson, Weir of H., c. 8.

57. Forms and uses of "shall." "Shall" is found as sal, sall, sal, sal:

"My man sall hae his ain get, that sall he." G. Macdonald, David Elginbrad, c. 8.

Sal shortens to 'se, 's':

"I'se warrant he's do that, doctor." Brown, Rab and His Friends.

"That lad Cranstoun may get to the tap o' the bar, if he can; but tak my word for 't, it's no be by drinking." Ramsay, Reminiscences, c. 3.

"An' she's hae bite and sup wi' them." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 6.

This explains Barrie's sepad, sə'pad = [I']se uphad (uphold) "I shall maintain":

"I sepad it had been bocht cheap second-hand." J. M. Barrie, Thrums, c. 24.

"Should" is found as suld, sald, sud, sad:

"Wha suld come in but Pate Macready, the travelling merchant?" Scott, Rob Roy, c. 14.

"Bairns suld haud their tongues." G. Macdonald, Robert Falconer, c. 1.

"Ye sud learn to sing 't through." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 21.

"Shall not" is found as sanna, 'sanna; "should not" as shouldna, 'Judna, sudna, 'sadna:

"It sanna be the battle o' Culloden." Hogg, Tales. (W.)

"I sudna won'er." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 8.

"I sanna be speerin the price o' them eenoo." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 7.

58. Forms and uses of verb "to be." "Are" is found as are, ir, ar, ər, ir; "was" as wes, wez, wis, wiz, wus, waz, wass, was (Highland); "were" as war, war, pret. ind. pl. and pret. subj. sing. and pl.; "be not" as binna ind. and subj.; "am not" as amna, 'amnə, amnin (Aber), 'amnin; "was not" as wusnin (Aberdeen), 'waznin; dhay aar and dhur = "there is" (Perthshire, Strathearn district):

"'Eh! ye crater!' said Robert, 'ir ye there efter a'?'" G. Macdonald, Robert Falconer, c. 10.

"Yir trust wes mickle help tae him." Ian Maclaren, Brier Bush, "Domsie," c. 4.

"Wus ye sleepin' terrible soun', Jinse?" W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 3.

"'It wass like him to make all other men better than himself,' with the soft, sad Highland accent." Ian Maclaren, Brier Bush, "Domsie," c. 4.

"We ran like mad; but corn and byre war blazin'...." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 21.

"But an' he war goodman o' Newtoon." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 35.

"Afore it war weel gloam't." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 40.

"Aw thocht I was to get oor ain toon; amnin aw?" W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 21.

"Mrs Saddletree looked after her, and shook her head. 'I wish she binna roving, poor thing.'" Scott, H. of Midlothian, c. 24.

"Dhur naybuddee in." Sir James Wilson, Lowland Scotch, p. 122.

"You are" becomes ye'er, jiər, yer, jər, yir, jir; "where are," whaur, moir, whare, mair:

"Yer richt, Dominie." Ian Maclaren, Brier Bush, "Domsie," c. 2.

"'Weel, yir wrang, Weelum,' broke in Marget." Ian Maclaren, Brier Bush, "Domsie," c. 1.

"Ha! whare ye gaun, ye crowlin ferlie?" Burns, To a Louse.

59. Forms and uses of "have." "Have" takes the forms hev, hev, hae, he, 'a, a; "has not," hesna, 'heznə, hisna, 'hiznə; "have not," haena, 'henə, hinna, 'hinnə; "had," haed, hed; "had not," hadna; "having," haein, 'hein; "had" (past pt.), haen, hen:

"Didna I say, 'Ye hev a promisin' laddie, Whinnie.'" Ian Maclaren, Brier Bush, "Domsie," c. 2.

"I hae no fear about her; she's a wise bairn." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 2.

"Ye hae the best recht, Thomas, for hesna he been good to ye?" G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 45.

"We have haven deaths in our family too." J. M. Barrie, A. L. Idylls, c. 8.

"Ye wudna not till 'a been taul'" (would not have needed to have been told). W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 33.

"He got up and said—'I haena time to stop.'" Wilson, Tales B., "The Deserted Wife."

"Have" (hae, 'a) is constantly dropped after the auxiliaries "would," "should," etc. especially when followed by -na: see Ph. 217 (c):

"I would rather, having so much saved at the bank, paid the needful repairs myself." Galt, A. of Parish, c. 27.

"O, Tibbie, I hae seen the day Ye wad na been sae shy." Burns (Song).

Hae as an imperative signifies "take this" (cf. Fr. tiens):

"Hae, there's half-a-crown for boding so meikle luck to my Lord." Galt, Sir A. Wylie, II, c. 29.

60. Forms and uses of "may" and "might." "Might" is micht, mixt, mith, mit (Aberdeen): "might have" is michta, micht av, 'mixtəv, mitha, 'mitha (Aberdeen); "might not" is michtna, 'mixtnə, mithnin, 'miθnin (Aberdeen):

"But twa or three micht gang by my door and cross to Jamie Mitchell's yonner." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 4.

"Gin ye hae nae regaird for yersel', ye mith hae some for yer family, peer things." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 20. "Mitha been wi' ye!" W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 20.

"But mithnin he dee (do) wi' the less coontin?" W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 10.

The present may is usually the equivalent of "can," a survival of its early signification, O.E. and M.E.: "Ye may be luikin for me hame afore sindoon the morn's nicht." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 1.

61. Forms and uses of "can." "Can not" is canna, 'kanna; "could" is found as cud, kad, N.E. kwid, "could not" as couldna, 'kudnə, cudna, kadnə, cwidna, 'kwidnə (N.E.).

"Ye canna be fashed! Can ye no?" Wilson, Tales B., "I Canna be Fashed."

"I couldna weel see." Scott, H. of Midlothian, c. 15.

"Weel, cudna ye pit it oot at five per cent.?" G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 6.

"Can," "could" are used after the auxiliaries "will" and "have" in place of "be able," "been able": but not in the Northern dialects.

"They haena cuid geate ane." "If we haed cuid cum." Murray, D. S. C. Sc., p. 216.

"He'll no can haud doon his heid to sneeze, for fear o' seeing his shoon." Scott, Antiquary, c. 26.

62. Forms and uses of "maun," main, man, man, man. "Must" is replaced by maun, mun; "must not" by maunna, mauna, manna:

"A' body maun sit still and listen to him, as if he were the Paip of Rome." Scott, H. of Midlothian, c. 8.

"They are all gentle, ye mun know, though they ha' narra shirt to back." Scott, Rob Roy, c. 4.

"Hout, tout, neighbor, ye maunna take the warld at its word." Scott, H. of Midlothian, c. 12.

"An' ye manna speak muckle." Scottish Review, July 23, 1908, "A Black Day."

63. Forms and uses of "dare." "Dare" is daur, dor, daar, darr, daar; negative, daurna. Past durst, darst; negative, durstna; daur't, daur'd; when followed by a noun, the past tense is daur'd, dard, dord. (Used also in compound tenses—"Wull ye daar gang? They wadna daar cum; Yf wey haed durst beyde onie langer." Murray, D. S. C. Sc., p. 217.)

"Show me a word Saunders daur speak, or a turn he daur do about the house...." Scott, Antiquary, c. 26.

"O luve will venture in, Where it daur na weel be seen." Burns, The Posie.

"He should been tight that daur't to raize thee, Ance in a day." Burns, The Auld Farmer's New Year Salutation to His Auld Mare, Maggie.

64. Forms and uses of "owe," "ought." "Owe," "ought" take the forms awe, q:, aa, a:, o', o:, aucht, oxt, axt. Of aucht Murray remarks (D. S. C. Sc., pp. 217-8):

"The past participle apparently occurs in the difficult idiom, 'Quheae's aucht that?,' often 'Quheae's owcht that?,' contracted 'Quheae's aa that?,' 'Quheae's o' that?,' Whose is that?, Who owns that?...The second meaning given to āgan by Bosworth' would allow us to construe Quheae's aucht that? as Who is made to possess that? Who has the right to that?, or To whom does that belong?"

Thus indebtedness and possession have got mixed up, as in the English "owe" and "own":

"When I was passing along the sea-front of a fishing village in Fife, I heard a stalwart matron ask her gossip at the next door, 'Whae's aucht them?'—that is, who owns them, or has charge of them?" A. Geikie, Scottish Reminiscences, c. 14.

"For us and for our stage should ony spier,

'Whase aucht thae chiels maks a' this bustle here?'"

—that is, who is responsible for. Burns, Prologue, for Mr Sutherland's Benefit Night, Dumfries, 1790.

"Gin ye awe the siller, ye maun pay't, man." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 90.

"Wha's aucht this?" (Who is the owner of this?) G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 32.

"That schochlin' cratur, Bruce, is mintin' at roupin' the mistress for a wheen siller she's aucht him (owing him)." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 89.

".....As gin she aucht (owed) you anything for rent." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 83.

"He wuntit to ken immediately fat was auchtin you for fat ye laid oot upo' that place at the Ward." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 45.

"Ilk ane wi' the bit dribbles of syndings in it, and a paper about the neck o't, to show which of the customers is aught it." Scott, St Ronan's Well, c. 2.

65. Forms and uses of "behoved." Bud, bad, bood, bud, or bude, byd, but, bat (behoved), buit, byt. In the N.E. beed, beet = bid, bit. Used both for present and past tense formation, like "ought" and "should," but mostly as a preterit; "thought good," "decided to," "to be under moral compulsion"; "have reason":

"It's a strang tow 'at wad haud or bin Dawvid, whan he considers he bud to gang, an' 'twere intill a deil's byke." G. Macdonald, David Elginbrod, I, c. 14.

"So afore they could let him gang, they bood examine him on the Hebrew an' Latin." S. R. Crockett, Trials for License by the Presbytery of Pitscottie.

"How did she come home then?" "She bude to come hame, man." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 91.

"And like a bairn, I but to gang wi' him." R. L. Stevenson, David Balfour, c. 15.

"Richt or wrang aboot the women, I bude to ken mair aboot the men nor ye do." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 73.

"For tricks ye buit be tryin'." R. Fergusson, The Election.

"He beed a' be thocht saucy." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 28.

Note a preterit form I boost, I buist, I byst, as if from a present form I boos. In changing from the impersonal it boos me, "it behoves me," to the personal form, the "s" of the third person singular seems to have been retained, and to have been preserved in this preterit form:

"Or, faith! I fear that with the geese, I shortly boost to pasture

I' the craft some day."

Burns, A Dream.

"He beside himsel' buist be." Quinn, Heather Lintie. (Dumf.) (W.)

66. Forms of "need." "Need" has a past tense not, past part. not:

"He not naething but jist the chyne an's poles." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 9.

"An' ye hed been wi' her, like Tam an' me, ye wudna not till 'a been taul' that there's nae the marrow o' 'er atween this an Tamintoul." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 33.

"He behoved...clearly to determine the value of the principal terms." Discourses (1853).

67. Forms and uses of "let." "Let" is lat, lat, let, p. tense loot, lut, lyt, leet, lit; p. part. looten, 'lutən, 'lytən, latt'n, 'latən, lutten, latən:

"But I wud not latt'n them say't." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 19.

"'Indeed, doctor,' said the honest woman, 'I loot the brandy burn as lang as I dought look at the gude creature wasting itsell that gate.'" Scott, St Ronan's Well, c. 7.

"That nae only never laid a han' till't, but maybe never hardly leet their een see't." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 44.

"...When she gangs luikin aboot for a pirn or a prin that she's looten fa'." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 44.

Phrases: lat licht (to let it be known, to disclose a fact), lat at (to attack), lat sit (to leave alone, or leave off); lat-a-be (adverbially="and not really"), gae-lattin ("letting-go" or "bank-ruptcy"):

"An' fan maister MacCassock loot licht that he was thinkin' o' buyin' the furniture to the manse." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 46.

"Lat sit, an' gang an' luik for that puir doited thing." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 2.

"Jist sit doon there, and carry on frae whaur ye loot sit." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 70.

"...Speaks as if she were a prent buke, let-a-be an old fisher's wife." Scott, Antiquary, c. 39.

"Dawvid...lats at him fanever they meet." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 23.

"An'ro (Andrew) Lanchofts was jist at the gae-lattin, and wud lickly need to gi'e up the chop a' thegither ere lang." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 29.

68. Use of "gar" for causative purposes. Gar, gar, ger, ger, to "cause," "make"; p. tense gart, gert; p. part. gart, gert:

"Ah! gentle dames! it gars me greet To think how mony counsels sweet, How mony lengthened, sage advices, The husband frae the wife despises."

Burns, Tam O'Shanter.

"He has rendered no account of his intromissions, but I'll gar him as gude." Scott, Redgauntlet, c. 23.

"The sacristan...speaks as if he would ger the house fly abroad." Scott, Monastery, c. 8.

69. "Begood" for "began." "Begin" has the odd preterit form, begood, bə'gud, begude, bə'gyd, begouth, bə'guθ, seemingly by analogy with cud, sud, bude:

"But he begood to dwine in the end of the year." Ian Maclaren, Brier Bush, "Domsie," c. 3.

"But, after a while, I begude an' gaed through twa or three bits o' reasonin's aboot it." G. Macdonald, David Elginbrod, I, c. 13.

70. Some Impersonal Verbs: leeze me, liz mi, like, laik, fell, fel, worth, war0, weels me on, weels me o', wilz mi o, etc.

Leeze me (leif is me) often followed by on, "I am fond of," blessings on!"

"Leeze me that bonny mouth that never told a fool tale" (Kelly). A. Cheviot, Proverbs, p. 232.

"Leeze me on thee, John Barleycorn, Thou king o' grain!" Burns, Scotch Drink.

Like (the older impersonal use) = placet, to "please," "suit," "be agreeable to."

"We'll mak shift, an it like your honor." Scott, B. of Lammermoor, c. 8.

Fell—to "happen to":

"'Ay, ay, the fader o' 'im was a lang-heidit schaimin carle, an' weel fells the sin (good luck is the son's lot) for that,' was the remark in one case." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 2.

Worth—"to be (to)," "befall":

"Wae worth the wife

That has a waukrife wean!" Popular Rhyme.

"'Wae worth ill company,' quo the daw of Camnethan." A. Cheviot, Proverbs, p. 383.

Weel's me on, weels me o' signifies "blessings on," "I am happy with":

"Weels me o' drink, quo' copper Will." R. Fergusson, The Election.

APPENDIX C

ORDER OF VERBS WITH -NA SUFFIX

The use of -na as a suffix is associated with a different order of words in interrogative sentences: verb, negative, pronoun, instead of verb, pronoun, negative. This order was common in conversational English in the first half of the 19th century:

"Sawna ye nae appearance o' the fishers getting the muckle boats built doon to the water?" W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 6.

Compare Jane Austen:

"Did not they tell me that Mr Tilney and his sister were gone out in a phaeton together...I had ten thousand times rather have been with you. Now, had not I, Mrs Allen?" Northanger Abbey, c. 12.

"Na, nae freely that, Mr Cupples." G. Macdonald, Alec

Forbes, c. 67.

"Whan the time's guid for ither fowk, it's but sae sae for you and me." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 32.

Naar is "nearly":

"A chap or twa, naar grippit braid (nearly squeezed flat) i' the crood themsel's." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 18.

A matter of, ə'metər o, is "as much as":

"She ran awa to the charity workhouse, a matter of twenty punds Scots in my debt." Scott, Redgauntlet, c. 20.

The length of,  $\delta = len\theta$  o, is "as far as"; see under Prepositions:

"When they get the length of the burn, they heard a shrill whistle." Scottish Review, July 23, 1908, "A Black Day."

Ane's errand, enz'irən, jinz 'irənt, is "specially," "on purpose," "on the sole errand":

"The doctor hes dune his pairt, and it wes kind o' him tae come up himsel ane's errand tae tell us." "Ian Maclaren, Days of A. L. S., "For Conscience' Sake," c. 4.

An a', an a:, is "also," "as well":

"The coronach's cried on Bennachie And down the Don an' a'."

Scott, Antiquary, c. 40.

Fine, fain, is "well" or "exactly":

"I ken fine how to manage her." Cross, Disruption, c. 3.

At ane mair, at ane mae, ət en me:(r), is "at the last push," "in a state of nervous tension":

"I'm blythe to see yer bonny face ance mair. We're a' jist at ane mair wi' expeckin' o' ye." G. Macdonald, David Elginbrod, I, c. 11.

Haill on, hel an, is "steadily," "right along":

"An' 't (the hens) wud a' been layin' haill on the feck o' the winter." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 42.

75. Adverbs of inference and argument.

Still an' on', stil en en; nae-theless, 'nede'les ("nevertheless"); howsomever, 'husam'iver, howsumever ("however"); weel-a-wat, 'wile'wat ("certainly"); atweel, et'wil ("in any case"), mair by token (nay more, moreover), me:r by 'token:

"'Still an' on,' replied Mains, 'it's nae ceevil eesage to speak that wye.'" W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 9.

"But that nae-theless for peace-sake an' for example tae the bairns, I'd gang whar he gaed." D. Gilmour, Paisley Weavers, c. 5.

"Howsumever, to proceed: Ye maun understand I found my remarks on figures." Scott, Rob Roy, c. 26.

"I hope, howsomever, that your Lordship will let me do something to oblige yoursel." Galt, Sir A. Wylie, I, c. 28.

"Well-a-wat ye never spak a truer word, Dawvid." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 42.

"'Atweel I'll no grudge to do that,' replied Andrew seriously." Galt, Sir A. Wylie, I, c. 17.

"Mair by token, an she had kend how I came by the disorder, she wadna hae been in sic a hurry to mend it." Scott, Old Mortality, c. 8.

76. Some interrogative adverbs.

What for, mat for, and whit wey, mit wei, are used for "why":

"I was glad to get Jopp hangit and what for would I pretend I wasna?" R. L. Stevenson, Weir of H., c. 3.

"Whit wey is 't no the season?" J. J. Bell, Wee Macgreegor, c. 5.

What for no? is "why not?":

"And what for no?" G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 6.

No is a terminal word to a sentence, giving an interrogative force: "Am I not right in supposing this?"

"'Atweel, Cuddie, ye are gaun nae sic gate,' said Jenny, coolly and resolutely." Scott, Old Mortality, c. 38.

&quot;'Aweel,' said Cuddie, sighing heavily, 'I'se awa to pleugh the outfield then.'" Scott, Old Mortality, c. 38.

"That's to lat himsel' get a gnap no!" W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 2.

No gives an interjectional close to a sentence, shading it off:

"'He's jist owre bitter no, said the good wife." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 32.

77. Adverbs of probability.

Belike, bə'ləik, is "perhaps," "probably":

"In order that ye may not only deprive honest men and their families o' bread, but, belike, rather than starve, tempt them to steal!" Wilson, Tales B., "Willie Wastle's Wife."

Maybe, 'mebi; mebbe, 'msbi, "perhaps":

"Maybe ye'll no object to let me go with you." Galt, Sir A. Wylie, I, c. 30.

"'Ye'll mebbe tell me,' he said richt low, 'if ye hae the furniture 'at used to be my mother's?'" J. M. Barrie, Thrums, c. 22.

Like is used in the same way as belike:

"The three mile diminished into like a mile and a bittock." . Scott, Guy Mannering, c. 1.

"She asked my wife what was like the matter wi' her." Wilson, Tales B., "Willie Wastle's Wife."

Like is also thrown in adverbially to soften an expression, having usually a deprecatory flavour:

"Weel, gin ye insist, I'll juist hae to try a toothful' to oblige ve, like." S. R. Crockett, Ensamples to the Flock.

"An wud ye gi'e 'im an excamb like?" W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 42.

"Braver than her guidman, wha didna believe like (seem to believe) that his laddie could be deid." D. Gilmour, Paisley Weavers, c. 5.

Likein, 'laikan, is "for instance":

"'An' filk o' them wud be warst likein?' inquired Mains." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 23.

Or than no, or dan no:, is an Aberdeenshire phrase implying incredulity or lack of respect for a statement.

"Poo'er or than no (his power counts for little)—a grunoffisher glaid to gae aboot an' tell fowk fan to pay their hens to the laird." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 20.

Note the similar use of or ens no, or ens no: (ens = "otherwise").

"A bonny impruvement or ens no." Miss Ferrier, Marriage c. 33.

78. Adverbs of affirmation and negation.

Ay, at, is "yes":

"'Ay,' languidly assented Macgreegor." J. J. Bell, Wee Macgreegor, c. 4.

"'Ay are ye,' returned Annie." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 14.

Na, na:, is "no":

"Na, na. It's fair words make foul wark." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 6.

The ordinary form of the negative "not" is no:

"'There's no a lassie maks better bannocks this side o' Fetter Lums,' continued Pete." J. M. Barrie, A. L. Idylls, c. 8.

"Son of mines or no son of mines, ye hae flung fylement in public." R. L. Stevenson, Weir of H., c. 3.

But nae, ne:, is commonly used, especially in the N.E.:

"But I'm nae sure that ee didna for a' that." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 68.

No is sometimes used without the ordinary expletive "do":

"'Hoot, Tibby,' says I, for I was quite astonished at her, 'ye no understand things." Wilson, Tales B., "The Hen-pecked Man."

A double negative is common:

"Ye'll better jist say that ye're agreeable at once, an nae detain me nae langer." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 45.

Attached to verbs, "not" is found as na: e.g. daurna, canna, sanna, widna, dinna.

79. Colloquial equivalents for the ordinary negative.

The word de'il, dil, is used in Sc. colloquial as a negative:

"But deil a dram, or kale, or onything else—no sae muckle as a cup-o' cauld water." Scott, Old Mortality, c. 13.

But it is also used as a mere intensive, along with a wish:

"Deil gin they would gallop!" Scott, Old Mortality, c. 13.

Fient, fint, fint, and sorra, 'sora, are also used in this way:

"But ye'll hae forgotten that, wumman?" "Fient a bit o' me." Ian Maclaren, Days of A. L. S., "Endless Choice."

"This is fat we had ees't to ca' the Main St.—Duff Street; fat sorra ither?" (What the deuce else?) W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 2.

At no rate is a strong negative:

"Weel, but they can come at no rate, I tell ye." Scott, Guy Mannering, c. 11.

80. Use of negative in meiosis.

Under negative adverbs may be noted the frequency of meiosis in Scottish literature, especially in the form of reported conversations. The ordinary Scot avoids exaggeration, or the committing himself to a statement which he is unable to make good. Words of real admiration or praise, therefore, are often couched in a colourless negative form:

"Bella, the bride-to-be, arrayed in the dress that had cost her so many thoughts, heard her mother's words of admiration and her father's no less affectionate 'Ye're no' bad." H. Maclaine, M. F. the P., p. 16.

"That was a grand poem about the collier's no-weel wean." H. Maclaine, M. F. the P., p. 94.

81. Adjectives as adverbs.

Adjectives are freely used as adverbs:

"It would seem terrible conspicuous." R. L. Stevenson, Weir of H., c. 6.

"Your rale (real) natural, Harry." H. Maclaine, M. F. the P., p. 23.

82. Adverbs with auxiliary in place of verb.

The adverb awa (away) is used with 'll (will), and in the past tense alone, as a substitute for gae, gaed:

"We'll e'en awa to Chastington-hall." Galt, Sir A. Wylie, II, c. 28.

"After I had brocht them a' to ken what I was, I awa yont to my mither's." Wilson, Tales B., "The Hen-pecked Man."

83. Adverbs of emphasis. Use of "here—there," "ava'," ə'va:, ə'vo:, "whatefer," mat'sfər.

"Here—there" is used in a belittling way, to prepare for a strong statement to the contrary:

"Pretorian here, Pretorian there, I mind the bigging o't." Scott, Antiquary, c. 4.

"However, effecs here, or effecs there, it's no right o' you, sir, to keep me clishmaclavering." Galt, Sir A. Wylie, 1, c. 14.

Ava' is a "worn-down" or corrupt form of "of all," and gives closing emphasis to a phrase:

"To be sure, for my part, I hae nae right to be here ava'."

Scott, Old Mortality, c. 14.

"An' lows'd his ill-tongu'd, wicked Scawl, Was warst ava'."

Burns, Address to the Deil.

Whatefer ("whatever") added by Highlanders for emphasis, usually in negation:

"Weel, Sandy, ye may say what ye like, but I think he canna be a nice man, whatefer." A. Geikie, Scottish Reminiscences, c. 1.

But also in affirmations:

"Ow ay, it's a fery goot congregation, whatefer." Ib. c. 3.

CHAPTER VII

PREPOSITIONS

- 84. Ablow, ə'blo, see "below." As with many other prepositions the Scottish form favours the prefix a-.
  - 85. Sc. forms and uses of "about."

"About" = about, aboot, ə'but:

(1) = "near," "beside": "My twa-year-auld bairn was standin' aboot the door." J. M. Barrie, Thrums, c. 22.

About it = "near the mark,' "differing little."

Just much about it = "very much the same thing," "very nearly equal or alike":

"Auld vandal, ye but show your little mense,
Just much about it wi' your scanty sense."

Burns, The Brigs of Ayr.

- (2) = "regarding": "We have not cause to be anxious about a thing bein dune respectable aince we're gone." J. M. Barrie, Thrums, c. 21.
- (3) = "around," so as to envelop or encompass: "Tak yer plaid about ye, or ye'll be cauld." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 70.

The Standard use of "around" in this sense is post-Shake-spearian and quite modern. See Othello, II, iii, 99: "Then take thine auld cloak about thee."

Adverbially. Used familiarly after such a phrase as "come in," to signify "into the house," "close to me." "Come in aboot, an' lat me say a fyou words to ye afore ye start." Life at a Northern University, c. 2.

In about (a) "under control," "in hand": "Seemed rather pleased that he had been able to keep Dawvid tolerably well 'in about' in the long run." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 26.

(b) "within hail," "in the place": "Will there be ony chance o' 's bein' in about shortly?" W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 36.

(c) "into the house": "Nyod, Peter, ye mith jist gae in aboot, an' tell yer mither...." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 37.

(d) "home," "to the quick": "But gin I didna grip 'er in aboot, I did naething to the purpose, that's a'." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 45.

86. Sc. forms and uses of "above."

"Above" = aboon, abune, ə'byn; abin, ə'bın; abeen, ə'bin (Aberd.) (preposition, adjective, adverb): superlative form, bunemost:

"Will ye gang wi' me and fare To the bush aboon Traquair?"

J. C. Shairp, Poems.

"'Come, come, Provost,' said the lady rising, 'if the maut gets abune the meal with you, it is time for me to take myself away.'" Scott, Redgauntlet, c. 11.

"John, ye're no to gar him lauch abin his breith." J. J. Bell,

Wee Macgreegor, c. 3.

"Them 't 's obleeg't till's leenity for haein a reef o' onykin abeen their heids." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 17.

Adverbially:

"Yer words strenthen my hert as gin they cam frae the airt aboon." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 88.

Get aboon—(said of the heart) to "recover cheerfulness."

"Come, join the melancholious croon

O' Robin's reed!

His heart will never get aboon-

His Mailie's dead!" Burns, Poor Mailie's Elegy.

Keep one's heart abune—to "keep cheerful":

"Keep your heart abune, for the house sall haud its credit as lang as auld Caleb is to the fore." Scott, B. of Lammermoor, c. 8.

87. Aff—see "off."

88. Sc. forms and uses of "after."

"After" = aifter, 'eftər; efter, 'sttər; efther, 'sfðər (prep. and coni.):

"'I cud jist say the word efther auld Simeon,' said Macgreegor." G. Macdonald, Robert Falconer, c. 5.

Ettle efter—to "aim at," "strive for":

"I was jist ettlin' efter that same thing mysel." G. Macdonald, David Elginbrod, I, c. 5.

89. Sc. forms and uses of "against."

"Against" = again, agane, ə'gen; agen, ə'gen:

(a) "in time for":

"And then a puir shilling again Saturday at e'en." Scott, Rob Roy, c. 17.

"To see when the broidered saddle-cloth for his sorrel horse will be ready, for he wants it agane the Kelso races." Scott, H. of Midlothian, c. 4.

(b) "in opposition to":

"'He was a prick-eared cur,' said Major Galbraith, 'and fought agane the King at Bothwell Brig.'" Scott, Rob Roy, c. 29.

(c) "in contact with":

"...I got my heid clured wi' fa'in agen the curbstane." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 67.

90. Sc. equivalents of "along."

"Along" = alang, ə'laŋ:

"But as alang the hill she gaed." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 22.

Adverbially = alang, a-lenth, a-lenth, a-lenth, a-lenth.

"Gin ye'll step alang bye wi' me to Lucky Leevinston's." Wilson, Tales B., "The Fatal Secret."

"Gin ye gae muckle forder a-lenth ye'll maybe gar me lowse o' ye the richt gate." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 45.

91. Sc. equivalents of "among."

"Among" = amo', amon', amon', among, amang, among, among

"Mak' it up amo' yersels." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 8.

"There ocht to be ane or twa owre an' abeen, to wale amon'." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 31.

"Ony way, she's a kind o' queen amang the gipsies." Scott, Guy Mannering, c. 45.

92. Aneath, ə'ni\theta; aneth, ə'ns\theta—see "beneath."

- 93. Forms and uses of "anent," a'nent.
- (1) Anent = "concerning," "about":

"Glossin sent for Deacon Bearoliff to speak 'anent the villain that had shot Mr Charles Hazelwood.'" Scott, Guy Mannering, c. 32.

(2) = "opposite":

"It's right anent the mickle kirk yonder." Scott, Fortunes of Nigel, c. 2.

Thereanent (adverbial form, at close of clauses) = "concerning the matter":

"I did not think it proper to tell her altogether the truth thereanent." Scott, Fortunes of Nigel, c. 14.

- 94. Aside, asides—see "beside."
- 95. Sc. equivalent of "as far as."

"As far as" = the length of:

"Mr Dishart never got the length of the pulpit." J. M. Barrie, The Little Minister, c. 33.

A story is told of Henry Dundas, Viscount Melville, when in London, that he asked Mr Pitt to lend him a horse "the length of the Strand"; and that the reply came back that his friend had no horse of the required size in his stable, but sent him the longest he had.

96. Sc. equivalents of "around."

Around is a preposition that occurs rarely or never in Scottish dialects; nor is it found in the plays of Shakespeare nor in the Authorized Version of the Holy Scriptures, where its place is taken by "about," "round about." Its Scottish equivalents are about, roon about:

"Get up, guidman, save Crummie's life An' tak' yet auld cloak aboot ye."

Old Scots Song.

"Tak' yer plaid aboot ye, or ye'll be cauld." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 70.

The modern usage is present in nineteenth century poetry and prose: e.g.

"But he lay like a warrior taking his rest, With his martial cloak around him."

Wolfe, Burial of Sir John Moore (1820).

"Around" is the favourite word in American usage for general purposes.

97. Sc. uses of "at."

"Ye hae just a spite at the bairn." Galt, The Entail, c. 6.

"At" frequently takes the place of "with," as in the phrase, "I'm angry at you":

Or of the standard "of," after ask or speir:

"I speired at 'im what he meant by terrifyin' a bairn." J. M. Barrie, Thrums, c. 22.

Mint at—to "attempt to," "intend to":

"'For,' said she, and in spirit, if not in the letter, it was quite true,—'I never mint at contradictin' him. My man sall hae his ain get, that sall he.'" G. Macdonald, David Elginbrod, I, c. 8.

98. Use of "athort," ə'Oort.

(1) = "over":

"Athort the lift they start and shift." Burns, The Vision.

(2) = "across" (to the other side of):

"Come athort the reek, and lat's luik at ye." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 37.

Adverbially, "across":

"Peter was authorized to give Mrs Birse assurance that he would be 'athort the morn's gloamin,' without fail." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 32.

99. Forms and uses of "atower."

Atower, ə'taur; attour, ə'tur; outower, oot-ower, ut'aur = "over," "above," "at a distance" (preposition and adverb):

"It's weel worth yer while to ging atower to the T'nowhead an' see." J. M. Barrie, Auld Licht Idylls, c. 8.

"The plaid was atower ma shouthers." J. Wilson, Noctes, IV, 60.

"He's sleeping in his bed out-ower yonder ahint the hallan." Scott, Antiquary, c. 26.

"They jist haud a puir body at airm's lenth ootower frae God himsel'." G. Macdonald, David Elginbrod, I, c. 8.

Used along with bye, bye and = "in addition to," "over and above":

"Bye attour my gutcher has A hich house and a laigh ane."

Burns, Lass of Ecclefechan.

"She is maybe four or five years younger than the like o' me—bye and attour her gentle havings." Scott, Redgauntlet, c. 12.

100. Ayont—see "beyond."

101. Sc. forms and uses of "before."

"Before" = afore (of place) = "in presence of":

"Ye sud be more carefu' whit ye say afore the wean." J. J. Bell, Wee Macgreegor, c. 3.

(Of time) = "sooner than":

"'Ye'll be a man afore yer mither!' said John." J. J. Bell, Wee Macgreegor, c. 1.

(Previous to):

"My father the deacon was nane sic afore me." Scott, Rob Roy, c. 26.

102. Use of "beheef."

Beheef, bə'hif = behoof.

"Lawbourin the rigs in an honest wye for beheef o' the countra at lairge." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 44.

103. Sc. equivalents of "behind."

"Behind" is found as ahint, ə'hint; ahin, ə'hin; behint, bə'hint:

"There may be ane of his gillies ahint every whinbush." Scott, Rob Roy, c. 27.

"A bit bole ahin the shakker." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 25.

"I see her cocked up behint a dragon on her way to the tolbooth." Scott, Old Mortality, c. 7.

104. Sc. equivalent of "below."

"Below" = ablow:

"I hid from them ablow the claes." G. Douglas, H. with Green Shutters, c. 27.

"Keep yersel' ablow the claes, my mannie." J. J. Bell, Wee Macgreegor, c. 3.

105. Forms and uses of "ben."

Ben, benn, ben = "inside," "to the inner apartments," "into" (preposition, adverb and noun):

"I'm glaid to see ye. Come benn the hoose." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 89.

"I think...he gaed ben the parlor." G. Douglas, H. with Green Shutters, c. 27.

Ben is used as a noun = "parlour":

"Many a time have I slept in the little box-bed in her 'ben.'" A. Geikie, Scottish Reminiscences, c. 11.

"Leeby went ben, and stood in the room in the dark." J. M. Barrie, Thrums, c. 20.

On the N.E. coast "to sail ben" is to sail to the land.

106. Sc. forms and uses of "beneath."

"Beneath" = aneath, ə'nið; aneth, ə'nsð. Mostly to be translated "under":

"Jeames Anderson here, honest man aneath our feet." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 3.

"'Weel, Meggy,' says she, speakin' aneth her breath." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 19.

"A picter in our auld Bible o' an angel sittin' aneth a tree." G. Macdonald, David Elginbrod, I, c. 7.

107. "Benorth" as preposition.

Benorth = "to the north of," br'nor $\theta$ :

"Tod had his dwallin' in the lang loan benorth the kirk-yaird." R. L. Stevenson, David Balfour, c. 15.

108. Sc. forms and uses of "beside."

"Beside" = aside, ə'səɪd; asides:

"The watchers winna let me in aside them." J. M. Barrie, Little Minister, c. 4.

"Will ye sit doon asides 's, Thamas?" G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 51.

Aside = "in comparison with":

"Aside Eve he (Adam) was respectable." J. M. Barrie, Little Minister, c. 10.

Adverbially = "close at hand," "on the spot":

"Aw declare aw wud gi'e my best brodmil o' Mairch chuckens naarhan' to be aside an' hear foo she'll brak oot." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 43.

109. Sc. forms and uses of "between."

"Between" takes the forms atween,  $\mathbf{a}'\mathbf{twin}$ ; atweesh,  $\mathbf{a}'\mathbf{twif}$ ; acqueesh,  $\mathbf{a}'\mathbf{kwif}$ :

Heart of Midlothian, c. 26.

144. Use of "yont."

Yout, jont = "across and through" (of proximity); "on the other side" (as of a hedge or street). See "beyond," from which it differs specifically.

"Aft yout the dyke she's heard you bummin." Burns,

Address to the Deil.

"Meet thy titty yont the knowe." Hogg, Poems.

To go yont, to "cross over," "walk to a place near by."

"Sae, after I had brocht them to ken what I was, I awa yont to my mither's." Wilson, Tales B., "Hen-pecked Man."

"I'll gang yont, after fothering time the nicht, and speak to yer faither and mither." Wilson, Tales B., "Willie Wastle's Wife."

To hirsle yont, hirsl jont—to "shuffle along to the other end":

"Peter and the stranger did not rise to put the ladies into the pew, but, according to use and wont, simply 'hirsled yont.'" W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 11.

"The laird himsel' said, 'at hoo the bairns had never gotten on naething like it wi' ony ither body." G. Macdonald, David Elginbrod, I, c. 6.

146. Causal.

'Cause (because), kəz, sae (so), se, sin' (since), sin, noo than, nu ðan (now then):

"Ye maunna think, hooever, 'cause sic longin' thouchts come ower me, that I gang about the hoose girnin' and compleenin'." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 44.

"I whiles speak as I think, an' whiles as I feel; sae dinna misjudge me." D. Gilmour, Paisley Weavers, c. 3.

"I'll speak to the laird himsel' sin' ye'll no hear me." G. Macdonald, David Elginbrod, I, c. 6.

147. Adversative or concessive particles.

(a) With co-ordinate statements.

Edder, 'edər, "either"; nedderin, 'nedərin; netherins, 'neδərinz; naitherans, "neither"; bot, bət, bɨt, "but"; natheless, naithless, 'neθles, "nevertheless":

"Naw, I hardly think't I'll fash wi' that edder." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 15.

"An' he not nae leems till't, nedderin." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 15.

"I dinna like it naitherins." Picken, Poems. (W.)

"Bot ay, 'am mylane wi' thee." P. Hately Waddell, Psalm lxxiii, 25 (Tr.).

"Natheless, it is ill travelling on a full stomach." Scott, Pirate, c. 11.

"Naithless some waggish trickster loon Aye put the Bailie off the tune."

Spence, Poems. (W.)

(b) With subordinate clauses.

For all, for a', 'fər'a:; for a' as, 'fər'a: əz; for as...as, an emphatic "although":

"I'm no without some wits, for a' I'm a woman." Hunter, J. Inwick. (W.)

"She doubted na that the pasture might be very gude, for the grass looked green, for as drouthy as the weather had been (although the weather had been very drouthy)." Scott, Heart of Midlothian, c. 41.

"Katherine has a gae sharp tongue when she's lowst, for 'a as quait's she luiks." D. Gilmour, Paisley Weavers, c. 8.

148. Hypothetical conjunctions.

Hypothetical: Gin, gin; gif, gif; an = "if"; onless, without, 'cep = "unless":

"An her luikin a' the time 't a bodie speaks till 'er as gin butter wudna melt in her cheek." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 8.

"Gif I micht advise you as ye advised him." D. Gilmour, Paisley Weavers, c. 4.

"Mony o' them wadna mind a bawbee the weising a ball through the Prince himsell, an the chief gave them the wink." Scott, Waverley, II, c. 22.

"Onless they can haun in a gowpen o' siller." D. Gilmour, Paisley Weavers, c. 3.

"I have kent mony an honest man wadna have ventured this length without he had made his last will and testament." Scott, Rob Roy, c. 27.

"But ridickleous for the size o' 't, 'cep' ye gie 't room." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 80.

149. Temporal conjunctions.

Temporal: Or, afore = "before"; aifter, 'eftər; efter, 'eftər = "after"; ance, as sune's = "as soon as"; gin = "by the time that":

"There will no be a dry thread among us or we get the cargo out." Scott, Guy Mannering, c. 40.

"Will ye mak' a prayer for yir auld dominie afore we pairt?" Ian Maclaren, Brier Bush, "Domsie," c. 3.

"Wantin' gundy efter ye've ett twa apples." J. J. Bell,

Wee Macgreegor, c. 5.

"An' tell 'im that he'll be expeckit, gin the spring war in, to drive a fawmily convaiyance to the kirk every Sabbath." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 48.

Again, ə'gen, ə'gen, is used as a conjunction, in the sense of "in preparation for the time that":

"I hae just been putting your honour's things in readiness again ye were waking." Scott, Old Mortality, c. 23.

The standard usage allows "against" in this sense: Dickens has, in The Pickwick Papers, "Throw on another log of wood against father comes home."

150. Comparative conjunctions.

Comparative: Nor, na, as, gin, gin; or = "than"; sae-'s, se z = "so-as"; 's = "as"; by'se (as, in comparison with), bazz:

"That's better gin naething." J. B. Salmond, M. M. S., c. 11.

"Better soon as syne; better a finger aff as aye wagging." Scott, Rob Roy, c. 18.

"For the whole place aye seems fu' o' a presence, an' it's a hantle mair to me nor the kirk an' the sermon forby." G. Macdonald, David Elginbrod, I, c. 7.

"Little to be expeckit fae them, by'se fae the set o' leern't (learned) men't hed ta'en upo' them to provoke them to mischief." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 18.

CHAPTER IX

INTERJECTIONS

151. Summoning interjections.

Hae, he:; haw, ha:, hey, hai—calling a person, in order to offer something; a form of "have."

"'Hae then,' said she, placing the dish before him, 'there's what will warm your heart.'" Scott, Guy Mannering, c. 46.

Or to have the person listen to a remark:

"And from a window above came a jeering hail—'Haw, you wi' the fancy hat!'" J. J. Bell, Wee Macgreegor, c. 10.

"Hey! what are ye daein' there?" A. Geikie, Scottish Reminiscences, c. 6.

152. Assertive interjections.

Assertive particles: sang, san; 'od, 'odd, od; nyod, njod, nod; sall, sal; sal, sal; ma certies, ma 'sərtiz; ma certes, ma 'sərtiz, my certy, my certie; 'deed, did; fegs, fegz; by faigs, bai fegz; by crivens, bai 'krivənz; wow, wau; catch them; catch us; mind ye:

Sang precedes a deliberative statement:

"Sang, she'll better nae try't though." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 15.

Od, odd—of mild surprise.

"Od, man, your name has travelt far faurer nor these wee legs 'll ever carry yoursell." A. Geikie, Scottish Reminiscences, c. 6.

Nyod implies pleasant assertion:

"He added—'Nyod, that's capital fusky.'" W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 13.

Sall (upon my soul) is an expression of astonishment or admiration:

"When Mrs Macfayden allowed it to ooze out in the Kildrummie train that she had obtained a penny above the market price for her butter, she received a tribute of silent admiration, broken only by an emphatic 'Sall' from Hillocks." Ian Maclaren, Days of A. L. S., "A Triumph in Diplomacy."

"My certy, but this makes a perfect feel (fool) o' the kirk o' Foot Dee." A. Geikie, Scottish Reminiscences, c. 13.

"'Proud, John?'

"Deed, ay!" J. J. Bell, Wanderer's Return.

"Ma certies, Janet, but that's a sicht for a hungry man." Scotsman, Nov., 1909. (The Roarin' Game.)

"And fegs he did it tae perfection." Scotsman, Nov., 1909.

"'By faigs, Sandy,' says I, 'that's waur....'" J. B. Salmond, M. M. S., c. 2.

"By crivens, he's gotten a richt horse for Donal', noo." J. B. Salmond, M. M. S., c. 1.

"O, wow, my winsome bairn, Cuddie." Scott, Old Mortality, c. 6.

Catch them or catch us implies a negative, with emphasis:

"They want mair daylight, likely? Catch them." H. Maclaine, M. F. the P., p. 66.

"Catch us, we're no sae Gaelic." H. Maclaine, M. F. the P., p. 91.

"Mind ye, its awfu' eerie bein' at sea in the nicht-time." H. Maclaine, M. F. the P., p. 94.

153. Ejaculations of discomfort.

Exclamations of weariness, regret, sorrow.

Sirce-me, strs-mi; sirce the day, hegh, hex; hegh sirs, imply woe or sadness or weariness:

"Thirce me, neebour, I'm thorry for ye! Thith ith a terrible affair." G. Douglas, H. with Green Shutters, c. 24.

"Eh, sirce me; an' me was so happy no mony 'oors syne." J. B. Salmond, M. M. S., c. 8.

Aich, ex, is an expression of fatigue:

"The verra attemp'—an' dinna ye think that I haena made it—aich." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 70.

Och hone, ox hon, is an exclamation of distress or weariness: "'Och hone! och hone!' said Granny from her bed." G. Macdonald, Robert Falconer, c. 13.

"Ohone! ohone! the day o' grace is by at last!" G. Macdonald, Robert Falconer, c. 13.

Ochan; a Highland expression of sorrow or lament:

"Ochan, ochan; hanging a man for stealing sheeps!" A. Geikie, Scottish Reminiscences, c. 8.

Willawins!, 'wilawinz, "alas!":

"Willawins!—willawins! Such a misfortune to befa' the house of Ravenswood, and I to live to see it." Scott, B. of Lammermoor, c. 11.

"Oh, Willawins, Mons Meg, for you,
"Twas firing cracked thy muckle mou'."

R. Fergusson, King's Birthday at Edinburgh.

Waesucks! 'wesaks, "alas!":

"Waesucks! for him that gets nae lass."

Burns, Holy Fair.

154. Ejaculations of astonishment or advice or reproof.

Megsty me, 'megstį mi; gweeshteens, 'gwistinz; hooly, 'hulį; heely, 'hili; hech, hex; losh, los; losh me, loshtie, wheesht, whisht, keep me, keep's a':

Megsty me! gweeshteens, express surprise or astonishment:

"Megsty me, what am I about, daffing all this time here!" Galt, Sir A. Wylie, I, c. 16.

"Gweeshteens, ye've seerly been sair ta'en up." W. Alexander,  $Johnny\ Gibb,$ c. 14.

Hooly, heely imply caution or warning:

"With a sigh, he answered, Hooly enoch, Mrs Bowie, hooly enoch." D. Gilmour, Gordon's Loan, "The Wanters."

"Weel, jist heely till I gi'e a cry." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 11.

"'O, hooly, hooly, sir,' she said, 'ye'll wauken oor guidman.'"
The Jolly Beggar (Song).

"Hech! that's a droonin' awfu' strange, and waur than ane and a'." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 39.

Losh, loshtie imply surprise and deprecation, expostulation or sympathy:

"Losh, Drumsheugh, be quiet." Ian Maclaren, Brier Bush, "Domsie," c. 2.

"But losh me! when we cam' oot the coffin wi' my grannie in't was awa'." A. Geikie, Scottish Reminiscences, c. 13.

"Loshtie man, ye're seerly gyaun gyte." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 44.

"Wheest! here's the wife; no a word about it." H. Maclaine, M. F. the P., p. 34.

"'Oh, whisht! my bairn! whisht,' replied Mause." Scott, Old Mortality, c. 7.

"'Keep me, Sandy,' says I, 'is that whet's brocht ye here?'"
J. B. Salmond, M. M. S., p. 5.

Keep me, keep's a' are somewhat similar in usage to losh me:

"Keep's a', Burnbrae, is that you?" Ian Maclaren, Days of A. L. S., "For Conscience Sake."

Hoot awa, hut ə'wa:; hout tout, hut tut; hoots, huts; hout fie (fai), convey mild expostulation and reproof:

"Hout awa, the laws are indifferently administered here to a' men alike." Scott, Rob Roy, c. 18.

"'Hout tout, neighbor, ye mauna take the warld at its word,' said Saddletree." Scott, H. of Midlothian, c. 11.

"Hoots, lassie, I never got a telegram in a' my days." J. J. Bell, The Wanderer's Return.

"Hout fie, stir, ye suld aye be taking." Scott, Old Mortality, c. 23.

155. Derisive ejaculations.

Set him up for is a phrase used in derision:

"Set him up for a confectioner!" Scott, St Ronan's Well, c. 15.

Shute, fyt; him forrit or forward is often added:

"A lord! set them up and shute them forward." Scott, St Ronan's Well, c. 15.

156. Exclamations of disgust or impatience.

Dozen't, doznt (confound it!), implies disgust:

"'Dozen't, men, I never thocht o' that,' said Peter Birse, Jr." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 37.

Auch, ax, ox, implies impatience:

"'Auch, she's in the shop,' he says heich oot." J. B. Salmond, M. M. S., p. 83.

Sheugh, fox, fux, implies impatience and abhorrence:

"Sheugh, sheugh—awa with ye, that hae spilled sae muckle blude, and now wad save your ain." Scott, Old Mortality, c. 17.

157. Exclamations of resignation or assent.

Aweel, a'wil, implies submission to what cannot be helped:

"Aweel! this body's nothing but a wheen claes to my soul." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 58.

Weel-a-weel, 'wila'wil, implies assent:

"'Come to yer tea, West Mains,' said Myreside cordially.

'Weel a weel. Thank ye kindly.'" Ramsay, "Emancipation of Sandy Macgregor," Scotsman, Nov. '09.

158. Calls to animals; with colloquial terms.

Yean, jen, is an exclamation implying holding back or slowing:

"As each horse passed the gate the driver left its head, and took his place by the wheel, cracking his whip, with many a 'hup horse; yean horse; woa lad; steady!" G. Douglas, H. with Green Shutters, c. 1.

Hup is also a call to a horse to go to the right; wind, wynd, waind; wyne, wain, a call to the left. Hence neither hup nor wind signifies "to move in no direction whatever":

"A feekless loon of a Straven weaver...had catched twa dragoon naigs, and he could neither gar them hup nor wind." Scott, Old Mortality, c. 23.

"By their answerin' to our ca'—Hup, Wyne, go back, step awa." Watson, Poems (1853, Lanarkshire). (W.)

"Formerly, in speaking to their horses, carters employed hup and wynd in ordering them to either side, now mostly high-wo, and jee." Jamieson, Dictionary, under haup, hap, hup.

Proo, proo, prochiemoo, pru:, 'prusimu:

"It is interesting to hear these young women (in south Ayrshire) calling to their cows proo, proo, prochiemoo, a call which the animals understand and obey. The words are said to be a corruption of approchez-moi and to date from the time, three hundred years ago, when French ways and French servants were widely in vogue throughout Scotland." A. Geikie, Scottish Reminiscences, c. 7.

A cat is called baudrons, baudrins, 'bo:dranz, 'ba:dranz:

"Auld Hornie did the Laigh Kirk watch Just like a winkin baudrons."

Burns, The Ordination.

A cat is usually addressed as "Pussy baudrons":

"Poussie, poussie baudrons,

What got ye there?

I got a fat mousikie

Rinning up a stair."

Chambers, Popular Rhymes. (W.)

A dog, especially a collie or shepherd's dog, is spoken of as bawty, 'bo:tt, 'ba:tt, and so addressed:

"The Spanish empire's tint a head,

An' my auld teethless Bawtie's dead."

Burns, Elegy on the Departed Year, 1788.

A stray or ill-conditioned dog is a tyke, taik:

"Wha now will keep you frae the fox,

Or worrying tykes?" Burns, The Twa Herds.

A donkey is cuddie:

"The auld tinkler bodie, Wi' his creel and his cuddie."

Ballantine, Poems. (W.)

"The highway is as free to our cuddies as to his gelding." Scott, Guy Mannering, c. 8.

A fox is Tod Lowrie, Todlowrie, 'tod'lauri:

"Todlowrie, come out o' your den." Scott, Fortunes of Nigel, c. 31.

"Tod Lowrie kens best, wi' his lang head sae sly; He met the pet lammie...."

Baroness Nairne, The Mitherless Lammie.

A cow has hawkie, 'ho:kţ, 'ha:kţ, for a general or pet name; originally applied to a white-faced cow:

"An' dawtit, twal-pint hawkie's gaen
As yell's the bill." Burns, Address to the Deil.

CHAPTER X

PREFIXES, SUFFIXES AND COMPOUNDS

Prefixes

159. "a-." "a-" takes the place of the St. "be-" in many words:

ablow, ə'blo: (with intrusive "b"); afore, ə'foir; ahint, ə'hint; aneath, ə'ni0; asides, ə'səidz; atween, ə'twin; ayont, ə'yont, in place of "below," "before," "behind," "beneath," "beside," "between," and "beyond." (See under Prepositions.)

160. "Be-."

"Be" is used (1) before verbs to strengthen them, e.g. begrudge "to regret keenly"; (2) to make nouns into verbs, e.g. begowk or begunk "to deceive"; (3) to form adverbs, belive, belyve, belave, "immediately," "soon":

"Then, on the other hand, I beflumm'd (fooled) them wi' Colonel Talbot." Scott, Waverley, II, c. 35.

"But if ye didna fa' in wi' yer father within ten year, ye maun behaud (hold yourself) a wee,...an' go awa' ower the sea to Calcutta." G. Macdonald, Robert Falconer, c. 14.

"Belyve, the elder bairns come drapping in." Burns, Cotter's Saturday Night.

161. "For-."

(a) The prefix for- or fore-, = "early," gives several compounds. Forbear, 'forber, is "ancestor":

"Your grandfather...did some gude langsyne to the forbear of this great MacCallummore." Scott, H. of Midlothian, c. 26.

Forenicht = "the early part of the evening."

"He's very entertaining when he comes over forenicht." S. R. Crockett, Minister of Nether Dullery.

Fore-end = "first-fruits."

"I send you, out of the fore-end of my earnings, something to buy a new gown." Galt, Sir A. Wylie, I, c. 25.

(b) There is another for- (Ger. ver-) = "against." Foregather, forgedder is to "meet for a special purpose":

"Dog-dirders an' others forgedderin' to get a house." W.

Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 19.

Also "to meet by chance."

"If it ever was my fortune to forgather with a Frenchman." Moir, Mansie Wauch, c. 25.

(c) The second for is also used, like ver, of "reversal," "destruction," "exhaustion":

Forwandered—"strayed," a stronger form of "wandered":

"But he's awa' ower by the Wolf's Slock the day lookin' for some forwandered yowes." S. R. Crockett, Tutor of Curlywee.

Forbear is to "avoid."

"I know all his haunts, and he cannot forbear them long." Scott, Fortunes of Nigel, c. 25.

Forfeuchan, for'fyxən, fər'fjuxən, "exhausted":

"Weel, you may jalouse we were a wee bit forfeuchan when we cam' to the kirkyard." A. Geikie, Scottish Reminiscences, c. 13.

Forfoughten, fər'foxtən, forfochen, fər'foxən; forfochen, forfoughen, fər'fuxən, is "exhausted with fighting," "wearied out":

"Ye're baith o' ye sair forfoochen." Ian Maclaren, Days of A. L. S., "Drumsheugh's Love Story," c. 1.

"I am so forfoughten...that I think I had better ensconce myself in one of those bushes." Scott, Legend of Montrose, c. 14.

"This good little gentleman that seems sair forfoughen...in this tuilzie." Scott, Rob Roy, c. 28:

Forfecht, for'fext, is to "weary out":

"Fat needs fowk for fecht themsel's fan they hae plenty?" W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 30.

Forfain, for'fen, is "played out," the opposite of "fain," "eager":

"I hae putten the gudeman to his bed, for he was e'en sair forfain." Scott, Antiquary, c. 26.

162. " Mis-."

"Mis-" is associated with what is unpleasant:

Mishanter is an "accident":

"There's sae mony mishanters 't we hear o' happenin." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 46.

Mislippen is to "neglect," "abuse":

"Ye wudna like to hae neen o' the bucklins mislippen't." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 46.

Mistryst, mis'traist, is to "alarm":

"Pate Macready does say they are sair mistrysted (alarmed and annoyed) yonder in their Parliament House about this rubbery o' Mr Morris." Scott, Rob Roy, c. 14.

Misken, mis'ken, is to "mistake":

"No man fell so regularly into the painful dilemma of mistaking, or, in Scottish phrase, 'miskenning,' the person he spoke to." Scott, St Ronan's Well, c. 16.

Misdoot, mis'dut, is to "suppose what is unpleasant":

"I misdoot it's gaun to be terrible weather." S. R. Crockett, Ensamples to the Flock.

163. Negative uses of "on" and "wan."

"On-," "ohn-" is an equivalent of the English "un." For its use with the past part. and gerundive, see under ohn, on: Gr. § 51 and note.

Onkenned-"unknown."

"Weel, it's no onkenned to you that the twa first Maister Slees wraite their sermons." S. R. Crockett, The Three Maister Peter Slees.

"I wadna advise you to keep up expectin' an ondeemas (notto be reckoned) price for't." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 6.

Wan- signifies "absence" or "lack":

Wanworth is a "trifle," "what is worthless":

"Chain work got at a mere 'wanworth.'" W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 27.

Wanrestfu', wan'restfə (restless); wanuse, wan'ju:z (abuse, wreck and ruin); wanownt, wan'aunt (unclaimed):

"An' may they never learn the gaets
Of ither vile, wanrestfu' pets!"
Burns, Poor Mailie.

SUFFIXES.

164. -Art.

The suffix -art is used like the old French -ard to form personal words, adjectives and nouns:

Thrawart, 'Orawart, is "difficult," "unpleasant," "hard":

"Mony a thrawart job I hae had wi' her first and last." Scott, H. of Midlothian, c. 12.

Willyard (with intrusive y) is "obstinate":

"Uh! uh! it's a hardset willyard beast this o' mine." Scott, H. of Midlothian, c. 12.

165. Absence of "-d," "-ed," in past participles.

The dental termination of the past participle, borrowed from French or Latin, does not take on final "-d" or "-ed" in Scottish. Compare modern London usage, "situate" = "situated."

"John Anderson, my jo, John,

When we were first acquent (acquainted)."

Burns (Song).

"Domsie's a thraun body at the best, and he was clean infatuat' wi' George." Ian Maclaren, Brier Bush, "Domsie," c. 3.

166. -El.

-El of direction implies "towards," the converse of lin, implying "direction from." (For  $lin = Eng.\ ling$  in "darkling," see par. 176.)

"O, if ye get to easel or wessel again I am undone." Scott, Guy Mannering, c. 1.

"Now, weize yoursell a wee easelward." Scott, Antiquary, c. 7.

"How do you this blae eastlin wind, That's like to blaw a body blind?"

Burns, Letter to James Tennant.

"Erskine, a spunkie Norland (Norlin?) billie." Burns, Author's Earnest Cry.

(The resemblance in sound between -lin and -lan' (= "land") has no doubt led to a confusion between the two suffixes.)

167. -En, -ern.

The termination "-n," "-en," "-ern" occurs where the standard English has the simple noun or some other termination:

"The west Post is of stonern work." Scott, Fortunes of Nigel, c. 2.

"They had pillaged my mither's auld house sae, that beechen bickers and treen trenchers and latten platters were whiles the best at our board." Scott, Fortunes of Nigel, c. 5.

168. -Er.

-Er takes the place of final "-e" in words like "orange," "lozenge," probably by sympathy with "messenger," "dowager":

"Mr Broon was fair divertit, an' gi'ed her yin o' his cough lozengers." J. J. Bell, Wee Macgreegor, c. 2.

"He cam hame frae the Sawbath-schule suree the ither nicht wi' fower orangers an' guid kens hoo mony pokes o' sweeties." J. J. Bell, Wee Macgreegor, c. 3.

169. -Erie.

Sc. -erie, St. "-ery." -Erie is used freely like standard -ery in "trumpery," but with a French flavour:

"There's a wee spicerie of I'll no say what in this." Galt, Sir A. Wylie, II, c. 1.

"What's the need o' a' this fasherie?" Ib., II, c. 7.

"He has comed between me and as muckle spreicherie ('sprixəri), as wad hae made a man of me for the rest of my life." Scott, The Pirate, c. 7.

170. -Fast.

The termination -fast occurs in the compound bedfast (confined to one's bed):

"It laid me bedfast for a fortnight." Wilson, Tales B., "The Deserted Wife."

171. -Fu'.

Sc. -fu', St. "-ful."

"She's a rale genteel wumman, an' awfu' easy offendit." J. J. Bell, Wee Macgreegor, c. 3.

-Fu' implies the subjective condition; fearfu' is "timid," soothfu' is "honest," waefu' is "melancholy" or "sad." The suffix implying the production of a condition is -some (q.v.).

172. -Heid.

-Heid, hid, takes the place of St. "-hood," and is used in different combinations; bairnheid, maidenheid, youthheid, nee-bourheid, 'nibərhid, liveliheid, 'laɪvlɪhid:

"Your mither's wull wud be a law to ye sae lang, i' yer bairnheid." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 49.

"...Toil't awa' upo' this plan fae youthheid to aul' age." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 44.

"An' gi'e industrious fowk the means o' makin' a liveliheid." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 47.

"He's been a great freen to the cause in this neebourheid." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 31.

173. Sc. use of diminutive "-ie."

-Ie is a diminutive suffix particularly common in Scottish, and passages where it occurs in the vernacular cannot be rendered into standard English without dropping the diminutive form:

"I bide i' that wee hoosie (house) down at the brig." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 38.

"It wad flee nae mair nor a deid deukie (duck) i' this weather." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 16.

"But Peter showed nae regard for either the bit tender lammie (lamb) or its mother." Wilson, Tales B., "The Deserted Wife."

In some quarters, for instance in Dumfriesshire, it is added to nouns whenever the sentence is thus made to run more smoothly. Probably this explains its appearance in the House with the Green Shutters, the locality of which, Ochiltree in Ayrshire, is close to the Dumfriesshire border:

"From sidie to sidie they swung till the splash-brods were skreighing on the wheels."

This usage is also found in the Aberdeen and Forfarshire district. The saying which is quoted makes no reference to a diminutive man or horse:

"It's jist sic mannie, sic horsie atween the twa for that maitter." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 19.

174. -Le.

There is a curious termination -le in the north of Sc. equivalent to -ful, e.g. "A seckle o' corn," i.e. a sackful; "a platle o' pottage"; "a spadle o' muck"; "a cairtle o' peats"; "a hantle o' fowk."

In Buchan, Abd., they have an adj. forgetle = forgetful. Under date of 7th Sept. 1515, in the Aberdeen Council Register, "The quhilk day, David Brownn grantit him award to my lord the Elect of Abirdene iiiixx Cartill of dry petis."

Alexander Hume in 1598 wrote: "In abating from the word following, we in the North use a mervelouse libertie. As...a ship'l of fooles, for a shipful of fooles."

Hantle (a small portion) is not confined to the North-East, but is common south of the Forth. Murray suggests two etymologies: (1) antal Scandinavian for "a number," which suits the meaning; (2) -le = -ful, handful, hankle, hantle; but handful is common in all the dialects.

175. -Like. "-Like" after adjectives.

-Like attached to adjectives qualifies the meaning, giving it a more general bearing:

Wise-like, wais-laik, means "presenting a good appearance":

"'Ye ken what ye're about, wricht,' said Hillocks..., 'an' ye've turned out a wise-like kist.'" Ian Maclaren, Days of A. L. S., "A Servant Lass," c. 1.

"'The awfu'-like thing,' as Miss Mizy ever afterward spoke of the schoolboy's conspiracy." Galt, Sir A. Wylie, I, c. 3.

"Everything about the house was, to use her own phrase, 'in wyselike order.'" Cross, Disruption, c. 1.

Wainish't-like, 'wenift laik, is "having a shrunken appearance."

"I was thinkin' im luikin jist rael wainish't-like aboot the queets." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 35.

"'Daft-like!,' she had pronounced it. 'A jaiket that'll no meet.'" R. L. Stevenson, Weir of H., c. 6.

176. "-Lin," "-lins," "-lang," of way or condition.

-Lin, -lins, is a termination signifying "way," "condition," or "direction," surviving in English poetry in "darkling" (in the dark). In Scottish it is found with adverbs, adjectives and nouns:

Halflin(s) or halflins, 'halflinz, 'halflinz, 'halflinz, 'halflinz, 'halflinz, 's

"Chiefly through the exertions o' a hafflins laddie whose name was James Patrick." Wilson, Tales B., "Willie Wastle's Wife."

Also "partly": "While Jennie halflins is afraid to speak." Burns, Cotter's Saturday Night.

Hinderlins, 'hinderlinz, are the "hindquarters":

"We down bide the coercion of gude braid-claith about our hinderlins." Scott, Rob Roy, c. 23.

Blindlins, 'blindlinz, is "in a blind condition":

"'Na, na; I could gang hame blindlins,' remonstrated Annie." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 29.

Oughtlins, "in any way," "at all":

"Or if he was grown oughtlins douser." Burns, To a Gentleman Who Had Sent Him a Newspaper.

Another form of -lin is -lang:

Endlang, 'endlan, is "on end," "continually":

"He never could preach five words of a sermon endlang." Scott, Guy Mannering, c. 11.

177. -Most.

"-Most" is found as a suffix, with intensive force, in the word bunemost: bune = "above."

"I crammed them (the supplications) baith into his hand, and maybe my ain was bunemost." Scott, Fortunes of Nigel, c. 4.

178. "-Ock" as a diminutive.

-Ock is used freely in a familiar way as a diminutive; bowrock, 'burək; winnock, 'winak (small window); gullock, 'galək ("small beetle"), bannock (small bun), bittock (little bit):

"Sequestered for near a month in a bowrock (little bower or cottage) of old cold ruins on the Bass." R. L. Stevenson, David Balfour, c. 17.

"The 'three mile' diminished into 'like a mile and a bittock.'" Scott, Guy Mannering, c. 1,

The combination of -ock and -ie gives -ockie, -ukie, which implies something very small indeed; and wee bit is often prefixed, giving a very intensive diminutive form:

"There was a wee bit wifukie, was comin' frae the fair, Had got a wee bit drappukie, that bred her meikle care." Alexander Geddes, The Wee Wifukie.

179. -Oot, -out.

Out, oot, ut, as a suffix signifies "outside," "in the open":

"It lats fowk get the young beasts keepit thereoot." W.

Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 37.

A gang-thereout, 'ganderut; rintheroot, 'rınderut, is "one fond of gadding or going outside":

"I daurna for my life open the door to ony o' your gangthereout sort o' bodies." Scott, Guy Mannering, c. 1.

"Ye'll be drooned afore the mornin'..., ye fashous rintherout." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 62.

180. -Ous.

The French facheux is found in Sc. as fasheous, fashous, fashious = "troublesome," one of the many borrowings from France during the century and a half of close alliance:

"Tell them frae me, wi' chiels be cautious,

For, faith! they'll aiblins fin' them fashious."

Burns, Letter to James Tennant.

This may explain the formation, or at least the final form, of byous = "extraordinary"; as an adverb, "extremely" (cf. by-ordinar):

"Be sure an' plot 'er milk dishes weel, in this byous weather." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 1.

"I was byous anxious to hear about her."

It has the form bias:

"Our faithfu' servant Colonel Stuart got nae sic bias courtesy." St. Johnstoun (1823), 11, 276. (W.)

181. - Rick.

Survival of O.E. rīc, "province":

"They sate dousely down and made laws for a haill country and kinrick." Scott, Rob Roy, c. 14.

182. -Rife.

Adjectival -rife, rtf = "abundant," makes compound adjectives, signifying "full of the quality of—."

Cauldrife is "disposed to chilliness"; wakerife, 'wekrif, waukrife, 'wa:krif, 'wo:krif, is "disposed to be watchful or wakeful":

"Their poor forlorn mother sitting by herself at the embers of a cauldrife fire." Galt, A. of the Parish, c. 17.

"There was a wakerife common sense abroad among the opinions of men that the new way of ruling was to follow." Galt, Provost, c. 28.

"Wae worth the wife
That has a waukrife wean,
A wee stoozie stumpie,
That winna bide its lane."

Popular Rhyme.

COMPOUNDS.

183. Ahint, behint.

Ahint, behint = "behind" give the compounds:

Behint-hand, ahint the hand = "behind in payments."

"Ye ken I never was behint hand." Wilson,  $Tales\ B$ , "The Hen-pecked Man."

"Honest folks that may chance to be a wee ahint the hand, like me." Scott, Rob Roy, c. 28.

184. By, bye.

By, bar, in the sense of "over" or "past," gives bygane:

"The ball that the gentry used to hae at my bit house a gude wheen years bygane." Scott, St Ronan's Well, c. 2.

By-gane also = "extra," "beyond," "more":

"A lusty, good-looking kimmer, of some forty or by-gane." Scott, Fortunes of Nigel, c. 14.

So by-ordinar, 'bar'orner = "beyond the common," "extragood," "first-rate":

"They had a by-ordinar sermon frae a student." Ian Maclaren, Days of A. L. S., "For Conscience' Sake."

Bye, bar, in the sense of "aside," gives bye-hands:

"I think we may as weel, for the present, set them by hands (bar handz), for I have got dreadful news." Galt, Sir A. Wylie, II, c. 30.

In the sense of extra, bye-bit = an "odd morsel":

"I had set that down for a bye-bit between meals for mysell." Scott, B. of Lammermoor, c. 3.

In the sense of "off the regular," to fall bye is to "get sick":

"Some jots o' wark at the Manse offices, that's been lyin' owre sin' he fell bye." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 49.

Bye-ganging, 'barganen = "passing":

"Where your beasts had been taking a rug of their muirland grass in the bye-ganging." Scott, Rob Roy, c. 35.

To let bye is to "allow to pass":

"Gin they'll no let me bye, I maun try to run through aneath their legs." Galt, Sir A. Wylie, I, c. 9.

By, bye following words like down, north, out signifies "near," "in the immediate neighbourhood":

"There was a man in a glen north-bye...'at wes sober." Ian Maclaren, Days of A. L. S., "A Nippy Tongue."

"Noo, man, ye'll jist mak' an erran' owre bye to the smiddy." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 32.

"The tabledot, as they ca' their new-fangled ordinary downby yonder." Scott, St Ronan's Well, c. 2.

"Here I am after a trot of sixty mile, or near by (about so far)." Scott, Guy Mannering, c. 45.

With "in," bye signifies "into the house," "inside":

"Gang in bye, and up the turnpike stair." Scott, H. of Midlothian, c. 12.

"Gang in bye, and be a better bairn another time." Ibid., c. 4.

With "on," bye signifies "along," "in company":

"'Take my way of it,' says he, 'and come on by with the rest of us here to Rotterdam.'" R. L. Stevenson, David Balfour, c. 22.

Owre bye = "over here," "with us":

"It's keerious no, that Dawvid sudna been owre bye ere this time." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 36.

To care na by = to "have no interest," to "be indifferent":

"For, laik o' gear ye lightly me,
But, trowth, I care na by."
Burns, Tibbie, I Hae Seen the Day.

185. Cam-, kam-.

Cam, kam is an adjective signifying "awry." (Cf. "This is clean kam." Shakespeare, Cor. III, 304.)

It is used as the first component with other words to give the sense of what is twisted, e.g. camsteary, kam'sti:ri, camstairie; camstrairie, camstrairy, kam'stre:ri = "difficult to manage," "going the wrong way":

"But the'll aye be some camstreary craturs in the warld." Ian Maclaren, Days of A. L. S., "Milton's Conversion."

"And wash Ethiopians in the shape of an east country gentleman's camstrairy weans." Galt, A. of the Parish, c. 22.

"He's a camsteary chield, and fasheous about marches." Scott, Guy Mannering, c. 50.

"'Ye're a camstairie lassie,' -said Bruce." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 21.

Camseuch, 'kamsyx, is "cross-grained," "crabbed":

"Just her camseuch faither, and a thrawn auld limmer o' a servant lass." Cross, Disruption, c. 6.

Kamshackle, 'kamjakl, is "twisted" or "mixed-up."
"It's sae kamshackle, I canna word it." Hogg, Tales. (W.)

186. Deil in compounds.

Deil in negative phrases has already been treated under Adverbs, par. 79. Deil haet:

"Tho' deil haet ails them, yet uneasy."

Burns, The Twa Dogs.

It is used in various other ways:

"There is probably still room for a dissertation on the part the Devil has played in colouring the national imagination of Scotland. As is well known, all over the country instances may be found where remarkable natural features are assigned to his handiwork. Thus we have 'Devil's punchbowls' among the hills and 'Devil's cauldrons' in the river-channels. Perched boulders are known as 'De'il's putting-stanes,' and natural heaps and hummocks of sand or gravel have been regarded as 'De'il's spadefuls.' Even among the smaller objects of nature a connection with the enemy of mankind has suggested itself to the popular mind. The common puff-ball is known as the 'De'il's snuff-box'; some of the broad-leaved plants have been named 'De'il's spoons': the dragon-fly is the 'De'il's darningneedle.' Then the unlucky number thirteen has been stigmatized as the 'De'il's dozen,' and a perverse unmanageable person as a 'De'il's buckie.'" A. Geikie, Scottish Reminiscences, c. 4.

187. Doun.

Phrases and compounds with down, doon, down, dun:

Douncome = "fall," "ruin":

"It had amaist a douncome lang syne at the Reformation." Scott, Rob Roy, c. 19.

Put down = to "hang," "execute":

"And we were a' put down for ane,
A fair young wanton lady."
Child's Ballads, Gypsy Laddie, p. 483.

Doon-laid = "laid-down," "express":

"But to cairry oot Sir Simon's doon-laid orders." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 45.

Doonsittin' = "resting-place":

"Hoot! hoot! dinna further the ill hither by makin' a bien doonsittin' an' a bed for't." G. Macdonald, David Elginbrod, c. 13.

Doon throu' = "in the lower territory," "nearer sea level":

"Dr Drogemweal, who had settled 'doon throu',' so as to be beyond the limits of his father's 'suchen.'" W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 19.

Doon the watter = "down the river Clyde," "at the seaside." A Glasgow phrase:

"Doon the watter, five in a bed, an' takin' your meat on the tap o' a tin box is nae holiday wi' ma reckonin'." H. Maclaine, M. F. the P., p. 35.

Doonwith = "downward," "to a later time":

"As mony a man frae King Dawvid doonwith afore him." G. Macdonald, Alec Forbes, c. 73.

188. Fore, fur, far.

The word "furrow" is found in the forms fur, fore, to form compounds.

Fur ahin, fur afore, the two "furrow" or right-hand animals drawing the plough. The other two in the team were known as lan' (land) ahin and lan' afore:

"My fur-ahin's a wordy beast As e'er in tug or tow was traced."

Burns, The Inventory.

"I might as weel hae tried to drive our auld fore-a-hand (= fur-ahin) ox without the goad." Scott, Old Mortality, c. 13.

189. Gate, gait.

Gate signifies "road," "way." The Canongate in Edinburgh is a continuation of High Street, leading down from the Tron to Holyrood; the Cowgate is the road by which the cattle were formerly driven to market. In Glasgow the Trongate is "Market Street." In Ayr, Burns's town, Sandgate is the thoroughfare west of High Street, and closer to the sands.

Naegate or naegait signifies "in no wise" or "nowhere."

Outgait = "going about," "visiting":

"She was a fine Leddy—maybe a wee that dressy and fond o' outgait." Galt, Sir A. Wylie, I, c. 28.

That gate signifies "in that manner":

"Dear brother, dinna speak that gate o' the gentlemen volunteers." Scott, The Antiquary, c. 6.

Other gate is used as an adjectival phrase = "different," "a different kind of":

"But Solomon should sit in other gate company than Francis of France." Scott, Fortunes of Nigel, c. 5.

190. In.

In about = "under one's influence":

"An' fan the like o' 'im's amo' them that canna keep 'im in about." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 23.

Income = (a) a contracted disease affecting the general health:

"Afflicted with the rheumatics, and suchlike incomes." Galt, The Steamboat, c. 4.

(b) a tumor or gathering:

"Maister John, this is the mistress; she's got a trouble in her breest; some kind o' an income, I'm thinking." John Brown, Rab and His Friends.

Infare = a reception after the wedding at the bridegroom's new home:

"At bridal and infare I've braced me wi' pride." J. Baillie, Todlin' Hame, p. 350.

Infield, in-field, infeedle (Abd.); see quotation 1:

"The part of the township properly arable, and kept as such continually under the plough, was called in-field." Scott, The Monastery, c. 1.

"The Tower of Glendearg was distant, and there was but a trifling quantity of arable or infield land attached to it." Ibid., c. 13.

"That bit elbuck at the back o' your infeedle." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 45.

Intown, intoon, is another name for the same kind of land:

"The cultivators...are obliged to bring their corn to be grinded at the mill of the territory, for which they pay a heavy charge, called the intown multures." Scott, The Monastery, c. 13.

Inlack, inlaik, inlake, signifies "gap," "loss":

"Egad, he dashed at the old lord, and there would have been inlake among the peerage, if the Master had not whipt roundly in." Scott, The Bride of Lammermoor, c. 3.

Input is "contribution":

"...Ilka ane to be liable for their ain input." Scott, H. of Midlothian, c. 12.

191. On.

On is found in various compounds.

Onding = 'onding, "downfall" (ding on):

"'Onding o's naw, father, 'answered Jock, after having opened the window, and looked out with great composure." Scott, H. of Midlothian, c. 8.

Ongae, 'onge:, is "business" or "affair," a "going on":

"A sad ongae they made o't." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 18.

Oncomes—see quotation:

"The pretended cures which she performed, especially 'in oncomes,' as the Scotch call them, or mysterious diseases, which baffle the regular physician." Scott, B. of Lammermoor, c. 31.

On-cairry = "carrying on," "celebration":

"They've been haein' a gey on-cairry doon at the Ward." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 17.

192. Oot-, out-.

Ootwuth, 'utwa0, is "further," "outlying":

"Nae the ootwuth nyeuk o' fat we ca' the Pardes park?" W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 45.

Out-cast is a quarrel:

"The twa best herds in a' the wast Hae had a bitter black out-cast."

Burns, The Twa Herds.

Out, oot, ut, is used freely as a prefix:

Outbye, ootbye, ut'bar, is "outside," "out of doors":

"Did ye no' see hoo sweirt he wis to gang ootbye?" J. J. Bell, Wee Macgreegor, c. 8.

Outfields, ootfeedles (Abd.) are arable lands lying some distance from the farmstead:

"The grun offisher...cam' oure to lay aff a bit o' oor ootfeedles last year." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 10.

"There was, besides, out-field land, from which it was thought possible to extract a crop now and then, after it was abandoned to the 'skyey influences,' until the exhausted powers of vegetation were restored." Scott, Monastery, c. 1.

Out an' in="constantly," "intensely"; said of great intimacy:

"Duncan sighed baith out and in." Burns, Duncan Gray.

"Out an' in neighbours." Watson, Poems. (W.)

193. Ower-, owre-, o'er-.

Owregae, Aur'ge: = to "trespass" (pres. part. owregyaun, Aur'gja:n):

"Gin we dinna tak' an order wi' them that's owregyaun the laws o' the land." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 42.

O'ercome, 'Aurkam = "repetition" or "refrain":

"An' aye the o'ercome o' his sang Was 'Wae's me for Prince Charlie.'"

Jacobite song usually attributed to WILLIAM GLEN.

O'erhie, Aur'hi:; o'erhigh, o'erhye, Aur'ha: "overtake"; o'erturn = "refrain" or "chorus of a song." "At last one of the best mounted overhighed the postilion." Crookshank, Hist. (1751), 1. 395.

Ower and abune—"over and above":

"There will aye be some odd expenses ower and abune." Scott, Guy Mannering, c. 44.

Owre bye_(1) "over here":

"It's keerious no, that Dawvid sudna been owre bye ere this time." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 36.

(2) "close at hand":

"She answered meekly, 'I was taking a dander to him owrebye." G. Douglas, H. with Green Shutters, c. 4.

(3) "across the way":

"I saw the Lord Keeper's servants drinking and driving ower at Luckie Sma'trash's, owre-bye yonder." Scott, B. of Lammermoor, c. 13.

194. Up-.

Upgang, 'Apgan (an "ascent"); upgive, Ap'gi: (to inform); uppit, Ap'pit (to put up or lodge); up-tak, 'Aptak (catching-on or understanding):

"Maybe we will win there the night yet, God sain us; though our minnie here's ratherd riegh in the upgang (slow at ascent)." Scott, Heart of Midlothian, c. 28.

"I freely here upgive with thee." Child's Ballads, Outlaw Murray, p. 635.

"Whilk Francis, Yerl o' Bothwell, tenanted o' me for sax hale months, and then absconded, without payin' me a plack for his uppitting." Wilson, Tales B., "The Fatal Secret."

"Hoot-toot-toot, ye're wrang i' the up-tak' (you take me up wrongly)." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 10.

"The notary may be mair gleg i' the uptak' (quicker at grasping things) than ye're thinking." Wilson, Tales B., "The Fatal Secret."

Up by, up bye—(1) "to the place up there," "in the place up there":

"This was lattin at me, ye ken, for inveetin the coachman an' the gamekeeper up bye." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 19.

(2) Metaphorically,—"out of one's reach," "in a high position":

"Weel, weel, Thomas, we'll get that an' mony ither things redd up to us when we gang up by (to heaven)." D. Gilmour, Pen Folk, p. 57.

Up by cairts is a proverbial expression, traditionally traced to the eighteenth century. During a heavy snowfall at Aberdeen, a fool, Jamie Fleeman, tethered his mare to what he believed was the chimney or "lumhead" of a cottage. A thaw came during the night, and he found the mare dangling from the steeple of the tolbooth. "Ay, faith," said Jamie, "ye're up by cairts this mornin'." Wright's Dialect Dictionary (with W. Murison as authority). It implies "rising socially":

"It winns be in oor day that Willie M°Aul an' the lassie 'll be so far up b' cairts (well-to-do) as be needin' a castell to haud their braw company." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 44.

Up-throu', 'Δp'θrΔu = " the upper part of the country":

"A visitor, a particular friend from 'up-throu,' an agriculturist like himself." W. Alexander, Johnny Gibb, c. 11.

INTRUSION OF ENGLISH INTO SCOTS

As Scots and Standard English are descended from the same original speech, they contain many words that are still similar and even identical in form. The further back we go in the history of each dialect, the greater we find this similarity to be. The spelling of Scots words is founded on the Midlothian dialect spoken at the Scottish Court prior to 1603, while that of Standard English represents roughly the London pronunciation of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries. Each dialect is presented to the eye in an earlier stage of its history and therefore in a form in which the words are more alike. This partly explains the well-known fact that an Englishman finds it easier to read Scots than to understand the spoken dialect.

Before the Union of the Crowns in 1603, many Southern words and spellings had crept into our literary Scots, chiefly through the influence of our Scottish Chaucerians and of the religious writers of the sixteenth century. For nearly 100 years after 1603, Scots was used but rarely for literary purposes. When it was revived as a medium of poetic expression by Ramsay and his followers in the eighteenth century, much of the old Scottish vocabulary had been lost, or had been replaced by Southern words. English was also taking the place of Scots in the pulpit, in the school, on the public platform and in polite conversation. All classes heard the stately language of the Authorized Version every Sunday in the Scripture lesson, in the prayer and in the sermon. In many a humble home, too, the language of Holy Writ would be used in family worship, in the father's exhortation and prayer. Hence in the consciousness of the Scottish speaker, English was regarded as the language of serious and reasoned discourse and a dignified form of speech for strangers and superiors. In the best of our Scottish writers, it will be found that an approach to English or the complete substitution of English for Scots, corresponds to a subtle change in the mental attitude of the speaker, and is therefore as a rule artistically correct. Thus, in Tam o' Shanter, VII A, when Burns is moralising, he drops into English, as in the passage beginning "But pleasures are like poppies spread." In The Cotter's Saturday Night, the dedicatory verse is in English, so also are the verses in which the poet speaks about injured innocence and the verses that describe the family worship. In this poem it should be noted that Burns was using an English metre so that Scots did not come to him as readily as when he was handling an old Scottish stave. In the extract from Johnny Gibb XIV A, Sammy, the piper, makes a ludicrous attempt at English in order to impress his boisterous companions, "Seelance that shottin this moment or I'll not play anoder stroke for no man livin'." Again in the extract from Rob Roy, II A, Scott makes a subtle distinction between the language of the Highland Chieftain and that of his burgher relative, Bailie Nicol Jarvie. In the extract from Mansie Wauch X A, the narrative is couched in a kind of Anglified Scots while the conversation is in genuine dialect.

We must not suppose, however, that English spelling always means English pronunciation. Examples to the contrary may be found in rhymes, and the following are a few culled from our extracts:

On the other hand, numerous examples may be found in the rhymes, showing conclusively that English spelling can be interpreted only by English pronunciation, unless the rhyme is to be sacrificed.

Yet in this same Extract XIII B, away is made to rhyme correctly with a:, E. all.

It is evident, then, that the Scottish versifier often has recourse to English to eke out his rhymes, and this practice of borrowing from the sister dialect has been extended to the body of the verse and to prose. We have already seen (Intro. pp. xx, xxi) that Stevenson openly boasts of using English when his rhyme jibs. Allan Ramsay set the pernicious example of writing popular songs in Anglified Scots or Scottified English and he has had many imitators—no doubt because these abominations are well received in English music halls and command a high price. Now it must be admitted that there are districts in Scotland where the mixture of population has led to a curious amalgam of English and Scots, and that writers who seek local colour are perfectly entitled to use such a hybrid dialect, but it should not pass muster as Scots. Good Scots, notwithstanding the School Board, may still be heard in many parts of the country, particularly in Buchan, Caithness, Roxburgh, Forfar, Galloway; and something should be done to foster it. Instead of weakly using an English equivalent our writers should strive to find the appropriate native word; and if they are to succeed, a thorough knowledge of a living dialect is absolutely essential. Scots writers, furthermore, ought to know something of the history of their language and of its grammar in so far as it differs from Standard English. They should be steeped in ancient and modern Scots literature, so that they can draw from the literary vocabulary as well as from their own local speech. To this end we ought to have a systematic study of our old national speech and literature in our schools and colleges. The Scottish Language can never be national in the same sense as it was before King Jamie left Auld Reekie for the delights of London town, but there are still some features of Scottish life and character that find their truest and most artistic expression in the Northern Lede. Burns and Scott and Barrie and many another writer are sufficient proof of this. Every Scotsman should take a pride in being bilingual and refuse to merge his individuality in the Englishman, however much he may glory in being a citizen of the British Empire.

READER 203

THE GENTLE SHEPHERD.

ALLAN RAMSAY (1686-1758).

ACT SECOND, SCENE I.

A snug thack-house, before the door a green;
Hens on the midden, ducks in dubs are seen.
On this side stands a barn, on that a byre;
A peat-stack joins, an' forms a rural square.
The house is Glaud's—there you may see him lean,
An' to his divot-seat invites his frien'.

Time-11 A.M.

Glaud. Good-morrow, neibour Symon—come, sit down, An' gie's your cracks.—What's a' the news in town? They tell me ye was in the ither day, An' sald your crummock, an' her bassen'd quey. I'll warrant ye've coft a pund o' cut an' dry; Lug out your box, an' gie's a pipe to try.

Symon. Wi' a' my heart;—an' tent me now, auld boy, I've gather'd news will kittle your heart wi' joy. I cou'dna rest till I cam o'er the burn, To tell ye things hae taken sic a turn, Will gar our vile oppressors stend like flaes, An' skulk in hidlings on the heather braes.

II A. THE FREEBOOTER AND THE BAILIE

ROB ROY.

SIR WALTER SCOTT (1771-1832).

CHAPTER XXIII.

Bailie Nicol Jarvie, a Glasgow magistrate, pays a visit to the Tolbooth of that city, to succour an unfortunate Englishman, the agent of a London commercial house, who had been imprisoned for the debts of his firm. The Bailie finds two visitors in the prisoner's cell. One of them is Rob Roy, a famous outlaw and a cousin of Jarvie's, and the other is a young English gentleman, Frank Osbaldistone, the son of the prisoner's employer. The conversation that follows brings out clearly the Bailie's Scottish caution, his respect for the law, and his keen anxiety, withal, for his kinsman's safety. These form a strong contrast to the reckless daring of the freebooter and his humorous appreciation of the magistrate's real character.

"Ah!—Eh!—O!" exclaimed the Bailie. "My conscience!—it's impossible—and yet—no!—Conscience, it canna be!—and yet again—Deil hae me! that I suld say sae—Ye robber—ye cateran—ye born deevil that ye are, to a' bad ends and nae gude ane—can this be you?"

"E'en as ye see, Bailie," was the laconic answer.

"Conscience! if I am na clean bumbaized—you, ye cheatthe-wuddy rogue, you here on your venture in the Tolbooth o' Glasgow?—What d'ye think's the value o' your head?"

"Umph!—why, fairly weighed, and Dutch weight, it might weigh down one provost's, four bailies', a town-clerk's, six deacons', besides stent-masters"—

"Ah, ye reiving villain!" interrupted Mr Jarvie. "But tell ower your sins, and prepare ye, for if I say the word"——

"True, Bailie," said he who was thus addressed, folding his hands behind him with the utmost nonchalance, "but ye will never say that word."

"And why suld I not, sir?" exclaimed the magistrate—
"Why suld I not?" Answer me that—why suld I not?"

"For three sufficient reasons, Bailie Jarvie.—First, for auld langsyne;—second, for the sake of the auld wife ayont the fire at Stuckavrallachan, that made some mixture of our bluids, to

"Ye're a bauld desperate villain, sir," retorted the undaunted Bailie; "and ye ken that I ken ye to be sae, and that I wadna

"Ay," replied the Highlander, "but I keep neither snaw nor dollars in my sporran. And as to when you'll see it—why, just when the king enjoys his ain again, as the auld sang says."

"Warst of a', Robin," retorted the Glaswegian,—"I mean, ye disloyal traitor—Warst of a'!—Wad ye bring popery in on us, and arbitrary power, and a foist and a warming-pan, and the set forms, and the curates, and the auld enormities o' surplices and cearments? Ye had better stick to your auld trade o' theft-boot, blackmail, spreaghs, and gillravaging—better stealing nowte than ruining nations."

"Hout, man, whisht wi' your whiggery," answered the Celt, "we hae kend ane anither mony a lang day. I'se take care your counting-room is no cleaned out when the Gillon-a-naillie come to redd up the Glasgow buiths, and clear them o' their auld shop-wares. And, unless it just fa' in the precesse way o' your duty, ye maunna see me oftener, Nicol, than I am disposed to be seen."

"Ye are a dauring villain, Rob," answered the Bailie; "and ye will be hanged, that will be seen and heard tell o'; but I'se ne'er be the ill bird and foul my nest, set apart strong necessity and the skriegh of duty, which no man should hear and be inobedient."

Rob invites the Bailie and the young Englishman to visit his Highland home, and the Bailie finally consents to do so.

"If ye daur venture sae muckle as to eat a dish of Scotch collops, and a leg o' red-deer venison wi' me, come ye wi' this Sassenach gentleman as far as Drymen or Bucklivie,—or the Clachan of Aberfoil will be better than ony o' them,—and I'll hae somebody waiting to weise ye the gate to the place where I may be for the time—What say ye, man! "I swear to ye," said the Highlander, "upon the halidome of him that sleeps beneath the grey stane at Inch-Cailleach."

"Nae fear—nae fear," said Campbell; "I'll be as true as the steel blade that never failed its master. But I must be budging, cousin, for the air o' Glasgow tolbooth is no that ower salutary to a Highlander's constitution."

"Troth," replied the merchant, "and if my duty were to be dune, ye couldna change your atmosphere, as the minister ca's it, this as were while—Ochon, that I sud ever be concerned in aiding and abetting an escape frae justice! it will be a shame and disgrace to me and mine, and my very father's memory, for ever."

CHAPTER XXVI.

Effie Deans has been condemned to death at Edinburgh for the murder of her new-born child. Her sister, Jeanie, resolves to go to London to plead with the king for Effie's life. Before starting on her journey, Jeanie visits the house of the Laird of Dumbiedykes, to ask him for a loan of money to help her in her design. She is very badly received by the laird's housekeeper, Mrs Balchristie. The laird hears part of the conversation from his room and intervenes as follows:

"Hark ye," he exclaimed from the window, "ye auld limb o' Satan—wha the deil gies you commission to guide an honest man's daughter that gate."

Mrs Balchristie replies more humbly.

"She was but speaking for the house's credit, and she couldna think of disturbing his honour in the morning sae early, when the young woman might as weel wait or call again; and to be sure, she might make a mistake between the twa sisters, for ane o' them wasna sae creditable an acquaintance."

"Haud your peace, ye auld jade," said Dumbiedikes; "the warst quean e'er stude in their shoon may ca' you cousin, an a' be true that I have heard.—Jeanie, my woman, gang into the parlour—but stay, that winna be redd up yet—wait there a minute till I come down to let ye in—Dinna mind what Jenny says to ye."

"Na, na," said Jenny, with a laugh of affected heartiness, "never mind me, lass—a' the warld kens my bark's waur than my bite—if ye had had an appointment wi' the Laird, ye might hae tauld me—I am nae uncivil person—gang your ways in by, hinny." And she opened the door of the house with a master-key.

"But I had no appointment wi' the Laird," said Jeanie, drawing back; "I want just to speak twa words to him, and I wad rather do it standing here, Mrs Balchristie."

"Guide and deliver us!—twenty mile—twenty mile on your feet!" ejaculated Dumbiedikes, whose walks were of a very circumscribed diameter, "Ye maun never think o' that—come in by."

"Outby his knowledge, Jeanie!—Is that right? Ye maun think o't again—it's no right," said Dumbiedikes, with a countenance of great concern.

"If I were anes at Lunnon," said Jeanie, in exculpation, "I am amaist sure I could get means to speak to the queen about my sister's life."

Dumbiedikes, on comprehending the nature of this application, could scarce trust his ears—he made no answer whatever, but stood with his eyes riveted on the ground.

"I see ye are no for assisting me, Laird," said Jeanie; "sae fare ye weel—and gang and see my poor father as aften as ye can—he will be lonely eneugh now."

"Where is the silly bairn gaun?" said Dumbiedikes; and, laying hold of her hand, he led her into the house. "It's no that I didna think o't before," he said, "but it stack in my throat."

Thus speaking to himself, he led her into an old-fashioned parlour, shut the door behind them, and fastened it with a bolt. While Jeanie, surprised at this manœuvre, remained as near the door as possible, the Laird quitted her hand, and pressed upon a spring lock fixed in an oak panel in the wainscot, which instantly slipped aside. An iron strong-box was discovered in a recess of the wall; he opened this also, and, pulling out two or three drawers, showed that they were filled with leathern-bags, full of gold and silver coin.

"This is my bank, Jeanie lass," he said, looking first at her, and then at the treasure, with an air of great complacency,— "nane o' your goldsmith's bills for me,—they bring folk to ruin."

Then suddenly changing his tone, he resolutely said—"Jeanie, I will make ye Leddy Dumbiedikes afore the sun sets, and ye may ride to Lunnon in your ain coach, if ye like."

"Na, Laird," said Jeanie, "that can never be—my father's grief—my sister's situation—the discredit to you—"

"That's my business," said Dumbiedikes; "ye wad say naething about that if ye werena a fule—and yet I like ye the better for't—ae wise body's eneugh in the married state. But if your heart's ower fu', take what siller will serve ye, and let it be when ye come back again—as gude syne as sune."

"But, Laird," said Jeanie, who felt the necessity of being explicit with so extraordinary a lover, "I like another man better than you, and I canna marry ye."

"Another man better than me, Jeanie?" said Dumbiedikes —"how is that possible?—It's no possible, woman—ye hae kend me sae lang."

"Ay but, Laird," said Jeanie, with persevering simplicity,

"I hae kend him langer."

"Langer?—It's no possible!" exclaimed the poor Laird, "It canna be; ye were born on the land. O Jeanie, woman, ye haena lookit—ye haena seen the half o' the gear." He drew out another drawer—"A' gowd, Jeanie, and there's bands for siller lent—And the rental book, Jeanie—clear three hunder sterling—deil a wadset, heritable band, or burden—Ye haena lookit at them, woman—And then my mother's wardrobe, and my grandmother's forby—silk gowns wad stand on their ends, pearlin-lace as fine as spiders' webs, and rings and ear-rings to the boot of a' that—they are a' in the chamber of deas—Oh, Jeanie, gang up the stair and look at them!"

But Jeanie held fast her integrity, though beset with temptations, which perhaps the Laird of Dumbiedikes did not greatly err in supposing were those most affecting to her sex.

"It canna be, Laird—I have said it—and I canna break my word till him, if ye wad gie me the haill barony of Dalkeith, and Lugton into the bargain."

"Your word to him," said the Laird, somewhat pettishly; "but wha is he, Jeanie?—wha is he?—I haena heard his name yet—Come now, Jeanie, ye are but queering us—I am no trowing that there is sic a ane in the warld—ye are but making fashion—What is he?—wha is he?"

"Just Reuben Butler, that's schulemaster at Libberton," said Jeanie.

"Reuben Butler! Reuben Butler!" echoed the Laird of Dumbiedikes, pacing the apartment in high disdain,—"Reuben Butler, the dominie at Libberton—and a dominie depute too!"—Reuben, the son of my cottar!—Very weel, Jeanie lass, wilfu' woman will hae her way—Reuben Butler! he hasna in his pouch the value o' the auld black coat he wears—but it disna

There was something in the last hint that nettled Jeanie's honest pride. "I was begging nane frae your honour," she said; "least of a' on sic a score as ye pit it on.—Gude morning to ye, sir; ye hae been kind to my father, and it isna in my heart to think otherwise than kindly of you."

Jeanie leaves Dumbiedikes in hot indignation against the laird, but the latter soon overtakes her on the high road and the first words he utters are,—

"Jeanie, they say ane shouldna aye take a woman at her first word?"

"Ay, but ye maun tak me at mine, Laird," said Jeanie, looking on the ground, and walking on without a pause. "I hae but ae word to bestow on onybody, and that's aye a true ane."

"Then," said Dumbiedikes, "at least ye suldna aye take a man at his first word. Ye maunna gang this wilfu' gate sillerless, come o't what like."—He put a purse into her hand. "I wad gie you Rory too, but he's as wilfu' as yoursell and he's ower weel used to a gate that maybe he and I hae gaen ower aften, and he'll gang nae road else."

"But, Laird," said Jeanie, "though I ken my father will satisfy every penny of this siller, whatever there's o't, yet I wadna like to borrow it frae ane that maybe thinks of something mair than the paying o't back again."

"There's just twenty-five guineas o't," said Dumbiedikes, with a gentle sigh, "and whether your father pays or disna pay, I make ye free till't without another word. Gang where ye like—do what ye like—and marry a' the Butlers in the country, gin ye like—And sae, gude morning to you, Jeanie."

"And God bless you, Laird, wi mony a gude morning," said Jeanie, her heart more softened by the unwonted generosity of this uncouth character, than perhaps Butler might have approved, had he known her feelings at that moment; "and comfort, and the Lord's peace, and the peace of the world, be with you, if we suld never meet again!"

SIR WALTER SCOTT.

CHAPTER XII.

In this novel, the scene is laid in or near the town of Arbroath, E. Forfarshire. The language, however, is Mid-Scottish and, unlike "My Man Sandy" (see Ext. XVII A), gives little evidence of local peculiarities. Edie Ochiltree, who appears in this extract, was one of those professional beggars who in former days were licensed to collect alms from the countryside and went by the name of blue-gowns or gaberlunzies. By his coolness and daring, Edie had helped to rescue Sir Arthur Wardour and his daughter from a terrible death. Miss Wardour, in her kindness of heart, asked the old man to spend the rest of his life in her father's castle or at least under his protection. The old man smiled and shook his head, and his answer shows the sturdy independence and pawky humour of the Scotsmen even of the humblest class.

"I wad be baith a grievance and a disgrace to your fine servants, my leddy, and I have never been a disgrace to ony body yet, that I ken of."

"Sir Arthur would give strict orders—"

"Ye're very kind—I doubtna, I doubtna; but there are some things a master can command, and some he canna—I daresay he would gar them keep hands aff me—(and troth, I think they wad hardly venture on that ony gate)—and he wad gar them gie me my soup parritch and bit meat.—But trow ye that Sir Arthur's command could forbid the gibe o' the tongue or the blink o' the ee, or gar them gie me my food wi' the look o' kindness that gars it digest sae weel, or that he could make them forbear a' the slights and taunts that hurt ane's spirit mair nor downright misca'ing?—Besides, I am the idlest auld carle that ever lived; I downa be bound down to hours o' eating and sleeping; and, to speak the honest truth, I wad be a very bad example in ony weel-regulated family."

"Well then, Edie, what do you think of a neat cottage and a garden, and a daily dole, and nothing to do but to dig a little in your garden when you pleased yourself?"

"And how often wad that be, trow ye, my leddy? maybe no ance atween Candlemas and Yule—and if a' thing were done to "O, you are a licensed man," said Isabella; "we shall give you all reasonable scope: so you had better be ruled, and remember your age."

"But I am no that sair failed yet," replied the mendicant. "Od, ance I gat a wee soupled yestreen, I was as yauld as an eel.—And then what wad a' the country about do for want o' auld Edie Ochiltree, that brings news and country cracks frae ae farm-steading to anither, and gingerbread to the lasses, and helps the lads to mend their fiddles, and the gudewives to clout their pans, and plaits rush-swords and grenadier caps for the weans, and busks the laird's flees, and has skill o' cow-ills and horse-ills, and kens mair auld sangs and tales than a' the barony besides, and gars ilka body laugh wherever he comes?—troth, my leddy, I canna lay down my vocation; it would be a public loss."

"Well, Edie, if your idea of your importance is so strong as not to be shaken by the prospect of independence—"

"Na, na, Miss—it's because I am mair independent as I am," answered the old man; "I beg nae mair at ony single house than a meal o' meat, or maybe but a mouthfu o't—if it's refused at ae place, I get it at anither—sae I canna be said to depend on ony body in particular, but just on the country at large."

"Well, then, only promise me that you will let me know should you ever wish to settle as you turn old, and more incapable of making your usual rounds; and, in the meantime, take this."

"Na, na, my leddy; I downa take muckle siller at anes, it's against our rule—and—though it's maybe no civil to be repeating the like o' that—they say that siller is like to be scarce wi' Sir Arthur himsell, and that he's run himsell out o' thought wi' his houkings and minings for lead and copper yonder."

Isabella had some anxious anticipations to the same effect, but was shocked to hear that her father's embarrassments were such public talk; as if scandal ever failed to stoop upon so acceptable a quarry, as the failings of the good man, the decline of the powerful, or the decay of the prosperous. Miss Wardour sighed deeply—" Well, Edie, we have enough to pay our debts, let folks say what they will, and requiting you is one of the foremost—let me press this sum upon you."

"That I might be robbed and murdered some night between town and town? or, what's as bad, that I might live in constant apprehension o't?—I am no—(lowering his voice to a whisper, and looking keenly around him)—I am no that clean unprovided for neither; and though I should die at the back of a dike, they'll find as muckle quilted in this auld blue gown as will bury me like a Christian, and gie the lads and lasses a blithe lykewake too; sae there's the gaberlunzie's burial provided for, and I need nae mair. Were the like o' me ever to change a note, wha the deil d'ye think wad be sic fules as to gie me charity after that?—it wad flee through the country like wild-fire, that auld Edie suld hae done siccan a like thing, and then, I'se warrant I might grane my heart out or ony body wad gie me either a bane or a bodle."

"Is there nothing, then, that I can do for you?"

"Ou ay—I'll aye come for my awmous as usual—and whiles I wad be fain o' a pickle sneeshin, and ye maun speak to the constable and ground-officer just to owerlook me, and maybe ye'll gie a gude word for me to Sandie Netherstanes, the miller, that he may chain up his muckle dog—I wadna hae him to hurt the puir beast, for it just does its office in barking at a gaberlunzie like me.—And there's ae thing maybe mair, but ye'll think it's very bauld o' the like o' me to speak o't."

VIA. MAUDGE AND THE ORPHAN

JOHN GALT (1779-1839).

THE ENTAIL.

CHAPTERS I AND II.

Claud Walkinshaw was the sole surviving male heir of the Walkinshaws of Kittlestonheugh. The family estate had been lost in the Darien speculation and Claud had been left in the care of an old nurse, Maudge Dobbie. The old woman and her charge lived in Glasgow in the direst poverty. One afternoon, they had been walking in the suburbs of Glasgow, talking of the former glory of the family and viewing in the distance Claud's ancestral estate, when the Provost of Glasgow and his good lady appeared on the scene. This gives Maudge an opportunity of comparing their upstart grandeur with that of her master's family in days gone by. Then a conversation ensues between Maudge and the Provost and his wife. Maudge exhibits the same stubborn independence as the gaberlunzie in Ext. IV.

Claud was filled with wonder and awe at the sight of such splendid examples of Glasgow pomp and prosperity, but Maudge speedily rebuked his juvenile admiration.

"They're no worth the looking at," said she; "had ye but seen the last Leddy Kittlestonheugh, your ain muckle respekit grandmother, and her twa sisters, in their hench-hoops, with their fans in their han's—the three in a row would hae soopit the whole breadth o' the Trongate—ye would hae seen something. They were nane o' your new-made leddies, but come o' a pedigree. Foul would hae been the gait, and drooking the shower, that would hae gart them jook their heads intil the door o' ony sic thing as a Glasgow bailie-Na; Claudie, my lamb, thou maun lift thy een aboon the trash o' the town, and ay keep mind that the hills are standing yet that might hae been thy ain; and so may they yet be, an thou can but master the pride o' back and belly, and seek for something mair solid than the bravery o' sic a Solomon in all his glory as you Provost Gorbals.—Heh, sirs, what a kyteful o' pride's yon'er! and yet I would be nane surprised the morn to hear that the Nebuchadnezzar was a' gane to pigs and whistles, and driven out wi' the divor's bill to the barren pastures of bankruptcy."

After taking a stroll round the brow of the hill, Provost Gorbals and his lady approached the spot where Maudge and Claud were sitting. As they drew near, the old woman rose, for she recognized in Mrs Gorbals one of the former visitors at Kittlestonheugh. The figure of Maudge herself was so remarkable, that, seen once, it was seldom forgotten, and the worthy lady, almost at the same instant, said to the Provost,—

"Eh! Megsty, gudeman, if I dinna think yon's auld Kittlestonheugh's crookit bairnswoman. I won'er what's come o' the Laird, poor bodie, sin' he was rookit by the Darien. Eh! what an alteration it was to Mrs Walkinshaw, his gudedochter. She was a bonny bodie; but frae the time o' the sore news, she croynt awa, and her life gied out like the snuff o' a can'le. Hey, Magdalene Dobbie, come hither to me, I'm wanting to speak to thee."

Maudge, at this shrill obstreperous summons, leading Claud by the hand, went forward to the lady, who immediately said,—

"Ist t'ou ay in Kittlestonheugh's service, and what's come o' him, sin' his lan' was roupit?"

Maudge replied respectfully, and with the tear in her eye, that the Laird was dead.

"Dead!" exclaimed Mrs Gorbals, "that's very extraordinare. I doubt he was ill off at his latter end. Whar did he die, poor man?"

"We were obligated," said Maudge, somewhat comforted by the compassionate accent of the lady, "to come intil Glasgow, where he fell into a decay o' nature." And she added, with a sigh that was almost a sob, "'Deed, it's vera true, he died in a sare straitened circumstance, and left this helpless laddie upon my hands."

The Provost, who had in the meantime been still looking about in quest of a site for his intended mansion, on hearing this, turned round, and putting his hand in his pocket, said,—

"An' is this Kittlestonheugh's oe? I'm sure it's a vera pitiful thing o' you, lucky, to take compassion on the orphan; hae, my laddie, there's a saxpence."

"Saxpence, gudeman!" exclaimed the Provost's lady, "ye'll ne'er even your han' wi' a saxpence to the like of Kittlestonheugh, for sae we're bound in nature to call him, landless though his lairdship now be; poor bairn, I'm wae for't. Ye ken his mother was sib to mine by the father's side, and blood's thicker than water ony day."

Generosity is in some degree one of the necessary qualifications of a Glasgow magistrate, and Provost Gorbals being as well endowed with it as any of his successors have been since, was not displeased with the benevolent warmth of his wife, especially when he understood that Claud was of their own kin. On the contrary, he said affectionately,—

"Really it was vera thoughtless o' me, Liezy, my dear; but ye ken I have na an instinct to make me acquaint wi' the particulars of folk, before hearing about them. I'm sure no living soul can have a greater compassion than mysel' for gentle blood come to needcessity."

Mrs Gorbals, however, instead of replying to this remark—indeed, what could she say, for experience had taught her that it was perfectly just—addressed herself again to Maudge.

"And whar dost t'ou live? and what hast t'ou to live upon?"

"I hae but the mercy of Providence," was the humble answer of honest Maudge, "and a garret-room in John Sinclair's lan'. I ettle as weel as I can for a morsel, by working stockings; but Claud's a rumbling laddie, and needs mair than I hae to gi'e him: a young appetite's a growing evil in the poor's aught."

The Provost and his wife looked kindly at each other, and the latter added,—

"Gudeman, ye maun do something for them. It'll no fare the waur wi' our basket and our store."

And Maudge was in consequence requested to bring Claud with her that evening to the Provost's House in the Bridgegate. "I think," added Mrs Gorbals, "that our Hughoc's auld claes will just do for him; and Maudge, keep a good heart, we'll no let thee want. I won'er t'ou did na think of making an application to us afore."

"No," replied the old woman, "I could ne'er do that—I would hae been in an unco strait before I would hae begget on my own account; and how could I think o' disgracing the family? Any help that the Lord may dispose your hearts to gi'e, I'll accept wi' great thankfulness, but an almous is what I hope He'll ne'er put it upon me to seek; and though Claud be for the present a weight and burden, yet, an he's sparet, he'll be able belyve to do something for himsel'."

Both the Provost and Mrs Gorbals commended her spirit; and, from this interview, the situation of Maudge was considerably improved by their constant kindness.

VII A. TAM O' SHANTER .

ROBERT BURNS (1759-1796).

Ayrshire Dialect.

In this, as in all the other poems of Burns, printed in this work, the text is taken from the Centenary Edition of Robert Burns by Henley and Henderson.

In Burns' dialect all the  $\epsilon$  sounds are very broad, almost equal to  $\epsilon$ . a: is generally represented by  $\epsilon$ : and  $\epsilon$  by  $\epsilon$ . The glottal catch is heard before t, p, k, and both medially and finally in familiar speech may take the place of the consonant.

When chapman billies leave the street,
And drouthy neebors, neebors meet;
As market-days are wearing late,
An' folk begin to tak the gate;
While we sit bousing at the nappy,
An' getting fou and unco happy,
We think na on the lang Scots miles,
The mosses, waters, slaps, and stiles,
That lie between us and our hame,
Whare sits our sulky, sullen dame,
Gathering her brows like gathering storm,
Nursing her wrath to keep it warm.

This truth fand honest Tam o' Shanter,
As he frae Ayr ae night did canter, (Auld Ayr, wham ne'er a town surpasses,
For honest men and bonie lasses.)
O Tam, had'st thou but been sae wise,
As taen thy ain wife Kate's advice!
She tauld thee weel thou was a skellum,
A blethering, blustering, drunken blellum;
That frae November till October,
Ae market-day thou was nae sober;
That ilka melder wi' the miller,
Thou sat as lang as thou had siller;

But to our tale :—Ae market-night, Tam had got planted unco right, Fast by an ingle, bleezing finely, Wi' reaming swats, that drank divinely; And at his elbow, Souter Johnie, His ancient, trusty, drouthy cronie: Tam lo'ed him like a vera brither; They had been fou for weeks thegither. The night drave on wi' sangs and clatter; And aye the ale was growing better: The landlady and Tam grew gracious, Wi' secret favours, sweet, and precious: The souter tauld his queerest stories; The landlord's laugh was ready chorus: The storm without might rair and rustle, Tam did na mind the storm a whistle. Care, mad to see a man sae happy, E'en drown'd himsel amang the nappy. As bees flee hame wi' lades o' treasure, The minutes wing'd their way wi' pleasure; Kings may be blest, but Tam was glorious, O'er a' the ills o' life victorious!

Nae man can tether time or tide;
The hour approaches Tam maun ride:
That hour, o' night's black arch the key-stane,
That dreary hour Tam mounts his beast in;
And sic a night he taks the road in,
As ne'er poor sinner was abroad in.
The wind blew as 'twad blawn its last;
The rattlin' showers rose on the blast;
The speedy gleams the darkness swallow'd;
Loud, deep, and lang the thunder bellow'd;
That night, a child might understand,
The deil had business on his hand.

Weel mounted on his gray mare Meg,
A better never lifted leg,
Tam skelpit on thro' dub and mire,
Despising wind, and rain, and fire;
Whiles holding fast his guid blue bonnet;
Whiles crooning o'er some auld Scots sonnet;
Whiles glow'ring round wi' prudent cares,
Lest bogles catch him unawares:
Kirk-Alloway was drawing nigh,
Whare ghaists and houlets nightly cry.

By this time he was cross the ford,
Whare in the snaw the chapman smoor'd;
And past the birks and meikle stane,
Whare drunken Charlie brak's neck-bane;
And thro' the whins, and by the cairn,
Whare hunters fand the murder'd bairn;
And near the thorn, aboon the well,
Whare Mungo's mither hang'd hersel.
Before him Doon pours all his floods;
The doubling storm roars thro' the woods!
The lightnings flash from pole to pole;
Near and more near the thunders roll;
When, glimmering thro' the groaning trees,
Kirk-Alloway seem'd in a bleeze;

Warlocks and witches in a dance: Nae cotillion, brent new frae France, But hornpipes, jigs, strathspeys, and reels, Put life and mettle in their heels. A winnock-bunker in the east, There sat Auld Nick, in shape o' beast; A tousie tyke, black, grim, and large, To give them music was his charge: He screw'd the pipes and gart them skirl, Till roof and rafters a' did dirl.

Coffins stood round, like open presses, That shaw'd the dead in their last dresses; And, by some devilish cantraip sleight, Each in his cauld hand held a light: By which heroic Tam was able To note upon the haly table, A murderer's banes in gibbet-airns; Twa span-lang, wee, unchristen'd bairns;

A thief new-cutted frae a rape-Wi' his last gasp his gab did gape; Five tomahawks, wi' bluid red-rusted; Five scymitars, wi' murder crusted; A garter which a babe had strangled;

As Tammie glower'd, amaz'd and curious,
The mirth and fun grew fast and furious;
The piper loud and louder blew,
The dancers quick and quicker flew;
They reel'd, they set, they cross'd, they cleekit,
Till ilka carlin swat and reekit,
And coost her duddies to the wark,
And linket at it in her sark!

Wi' twa pund Scots ('twas a' her riches),
Wad ever grac'd a dance o' witches!

But here my Muse her wing maun cour,
Sic flights are far beyond her power:
To sing how Nannie lap and flang,
(A souple jad she was and strang),
And how Tam stood like ane bewitch'd,
And thought his very een enrich'd:
Even Satan glowr'd, and fldg'd fu' fain,
And hotch'd and blew wi' might and main;
Till first ae caper, syne anither,
Tam tint his reason a'thegither.
And roars out: "Weel done, Cutty-sark!"
And in an instant all was dark:
And scarcely had he Maggie rallied,
When out the hellish legion sallied.

As bees bizz out wi' angry fyke,
When plundering herds assail their byke;
As open pussie's mortal foes
When, pop! she starts before their nose;
As eager runs the market-crowd,
When "Catch the thief!" resounds aloud;
So Maggie runs, the witches follow,
Wi' monie an eldritch scriech and hollo.

Now, do thy speedy utmost, Meg,
And win the key-stane of the brig;
There, at them thou thy tail may toss,
A running stream they dare na cross!
But ere the key-stane she could make,
The fient a tail she had to shake!
For Nannie, far before the rest,
Hard upon noble Maggie prest,
And flew at Tam wi' furious ettle;
But little wist she Maggie's mettle!
Ae spring brought aff her master hale,
But left behind her ain grey tail:
The carlin claught her by the rump,
And left poor Maggie scarce a stump!

CHAPTER XXXIV.

By her spelling, the authoress gives a fair indication of the pronunciation of Mrs Macshake, so that we do not require to note variants to the same extent as in the other extracts.

"An wha thought o' seein ye enow," said she, in a quick gabbling voice; "what's brought you to the toon? are ye come to spend your honest faither's siller, e'er he's weel cauld in his grave, puir man?"

Mr Douglas explained, that it was upon account of his niece's health.

"Health!" repeated she, with a sardonic smile, "it wad mak an ool laugh to hear the wark that's made about young fowk's health noo-a-days. I wonder what ye're aw made o'," grasping Mary's arm in her great bony hand—"a wheen puir feckless windlestraes—ye maun awa to Ingland for yere healths. Set ye up! I wunder what cam o' the lasses i' my time, that bute to bide at hame? And whilk o' ye, I sude like to ken, 'll.ere leive to see ninety-sax, like me—Health! he, he!"

Mary, glad of a pretence to indulge the mirth the old lady's manner and appearance had excited, joined most heartily in the laugh.

"Tak aff yere bannet, bairn, an let me see yere face; wha can tell what like ye are wi'that snule o' a thing on yere head." Then after taking an accurate survey of her face, she pushed aside her pelisse—"Weel, it's ae mercy, I see ye hae neither the red heed, nor the muckle cuits o' the Douglases. I ken nae whuther ye're faither had them or no. I ne'er set een on him: • neither him, nor his braw leddie, thought it worth their while to speer after me; but I was at nae loss, by aw accounts."

"You have not asked after any of your Glenfern friends," said Mr Douglas, hoping to touch a more sympathetic chord.

"Time eneugh—wull ye let me draw my breath, man?—fowk canna say aw thing at ance.—An ye bute to hae an Inglish wife tu, a Scotch lass wad nae serr ye.—An yere wean, I'se warran', it's ane o' the warld's wonders—it's been unca lang o' cummin—he, he!"

"He has begun life under very melancholy auspices, poor fellow!" said Mr Douglas, in allusion to his father's death.

"An wha's faut was that?—I ne'er heard tell the like o't, to hae the bairn kirsened an' its grandfather deein'!—But fowk are neither born, nor kirsened, nor do they wad or dee as they used to dae—aw thing's changed."

"You must, indeed, have witnessed many changes," observed Mr Douglas, rather at a loss how to utter anything of a conciliatory nature.

"Changes! weel a waat, I sometimes wunder if it's the same waurld, an if it's my ain heed that's upon my shoothers."

"But with these changes, you must also have seen many improvements?" said Mary, in a tone of diffidence.

"Impruvements!" turning sharply round upon her, "what ken ye about impruvements, bairn? A bonny impruvement or ens no, to see tyleyors and sclaters leavin-whar I mind Jewks and Yerls.—An that great glowrin new toon there," pointing out of her windows, "whar I used to sit an luck oot at bonny green parks, and see the coos milket, and the bits o' bairnies rowin an' tummlin, an the lasses tramplin i' their tubs.—What see I noo, but stane an lime, an stoor an dirt, an idle cheels, an dinket-oot madams prancin'. Impruvements indeed!"

Mary found she was not likely to advance her uncle's fortune by the judiciousness of her remarks, therefore prudently resolved to hazard no more. Mr Douglas, who was more au fait to the prejudices of old age, and who was always amused with her bitter remarks, when they did not touch himself, encouraged her to continue the conversation by some observation on the prevailing manners.

"Mainers!" repeated she, with a contemptuous laugh, "what caw ye mainers noo, for I dinna ken; ilk ane gangs bang in till their neebor's hoose, and bang oot o't as it war a chynge hoose; an as for the maister o't, he's no' o' sae muckle vaalu as the flunky ahint his chyre. I' my grandfather's time, as I hae heard him tell, ilka maister o' a faamily had his ain sate in his ane hoose aye, an sat wi' his hat on his heed afore the best o' the land, an had his ain dish, an was aye helpit first, an keepit up his owthority as a man sude dae. Paurents war paurents then—bairns dardna set up their gabs afore them than as they dae noo. They ne'er presumed to say their heeds war their ain i' thae days—wife an servants—reteeners an' childer, aw trummelt i' the presence o' their heed."

Here a long pinch of snuff caused a pause in the old lady's harangue; but after having duly wiped her nose with her coloured handkerchief, and shook off all the particles that might be presumed to have lodged upon her cardinal, she resumed—

"An nae word o' any o' your sisters gawn to get husbands yet? They tell me they're but coorse lasses; an' wha'll tak ill-farred tocherless queans, when there's walth o' bonny faces an lang purses i' the market—he, he!" Then resuming her scrutiny of Mary—"An' I'se warren ye'll be lucken for an Inglish sweetheart tae; that'll be what's takin' ye awa to Ingland."

"On the contrary," said Mr Douglas, seeing Mary was too much frightened to answer for herself, "on the contrary, Mary declares she will never marry any but a true Highlander; one who wears the dirk and plaid, and has the second-sight. And the nuptials are to be celebrated with all the pomp of feudal times; with bagpipes, and bonfires, and gatherings of clans, and roasted sheep, and barrels of whisky, and——"

"Weel a wat an' she's i' the right there," interrupted Mrs Macshake, with more complacency than she had yet shown. "They may caw them what they like, but there's nae waddins noo. Wha's the better o' them but innkeepers and chise-drivers? I wud nae count mysel married i' the hiddlins way they gang about it noo."

"I daresay you remember these things done in a very different style?" said Mr Douglas.

"I dinna mind them when they war at the best; but I hae heard my mither tell what a bonny ploy was at her waddin. I canna tell ye hoo mony was at her waddin. I canna tell ye hoo mony was at it; mair nor the room wad haud, ye may be "An' the bride's goon was aw shewed ow'r wi' favours, frae the tap doon to the tail, an' aw roond the neck, an' about the sleeves: and, as soon as the ceremony was ow'r, ilk ane ran till her an' . rugget an' rave at her for the favours, till they hardly left the claise upon her back. An' was nae that something like a waddin? It was worth while to be married i' thae days—he, he!"

Mr Douglas, who was now rather tired of the old lady's reminiscences, availed himself of the opportunity of a fresh pinch, to rise and take leave.

"Oo, what's takin ye awa, Archie, in sic a hurry? Sit doon there," laying her hand upon his arm, "an' rest ye, an' tak a glass o' wine, an' a bit breed; or may be," turning to Mary, "ye wad rather hae a drap broth to warm ye. What gars ye luck sae blae, bairn? I'm sure it's no cauld; but ye're juste like the lave: ye gang aw skiltin aboot the streets half naked, an' than ye maun sit an' birsle yoursels afore the fire at hame."

She had now shuffled along to the further end of the room, and opening a press, took out wine, and a plateful of various-shaped articles of bread, which she handed to Mary.

"Hae, bairn, take a cookie, tak it up—what are you fear'd for? It'll no bite. Here's t'ye, Glenfern, an' your wife, an' your wean, puir tead, it's no had a very chancy ootset weel a wat."

The wine being drank, and the cookies discussed, Mr Douglas made another attempt to withdraw, but in vain.

"Canna ye sit still a wee, man, an' let me spear after my auld freens at Glenfern. Hoo's Grizzy, an' Jacky, and Nicky?

swallowed a pill, nor gied a doit for drogs aw my days, an' see an ony of them'll rin a race wi' me whan they're naur five score."

Mr Douglas here paid her some compliments upon her appearance, which were pretty graciously received; and added that he was the bearer of a letter from his aunt Grizzy, which he would send along with a roebuck and brace of moor-game.

"Gin your roebuck's nae better than your last, atweel it's no worth the sendin'. Poor dry fisinless dirt, no worth the chowing; weel a wat, I begrudged my teeth on't. Your muirfowl was na that ill, but they're no worth the carryin; they're dong cheap i' the market enoo, so it's nae great compliment. Gin ye had brought me a leg o' gude mutton, or a cauler sawmont, there would hae been some sense in't; but ye're ane o' the fowk that'll ne'er harry yoursel wi' your presents; it's but the pickle poother they cost you, an' I'se warran ye're thinkin mair o' your ain diversion than o' my stamick, when ye're at the shootin' o' them, puir beasts."

Mr Douglas had borne the various indignities levelled against himself and his family with a philosophy that had no parallel in his life before; but to this attack upon his game, he was not proof. His colour rose, his eyes flashed fire, and something resembling an oath burst from his lips, as he strode indignantly towards the door.

His friend, however, was too nimble for him. She stepped before him, and, breaking into a discordant laugh, as she patted him on the back, "So I see ye're just the auld man, Archie,—aye ready to tak the strums, an' ye dinna get a' thing ye're ain wye. Mony a time I had to fleech ye oot o' the dorts whan ye was a callant. Weel a wat, ye're wife maun hae her ain adoos to manage ye, for ye're a cumstairy chield, Archie."

Mr Douglas still looked as if he was irresolute whether to laugh or be angry.

"Come, come, sit ye doon there till I speak to this bairn," said she, as she pulled Mary into an adjoining bedchamber, which wore the same aspect of chilly neatness as the one they had quitted. Then pulling a huge bunch of keys from her pocket, she opened a drawer, out of which she took a pair of diamond ear-rings. "Hae, bairn," said she, as she stuffed them into Mary's hand; "they belanged to your faither's grandmother. She was a gude woman, an' had four-an'-twenty sons and dochters, an' I wiss ye nae war fortin than just to hae as mony. But mind ye," with a shake of her bony finger, "they maun a' be Scots. # IX A. THE COTTER'S SATURDAY NIGHT

ROBERT BURNS.

November chill blaws loud wi' angry sugh;
The short'ning winter-day is near a close;
The miry beasts retreating frae the pleugh;
The black'ning trains o' craws to their repose:
The toil-worn Cotter frae his labor goes—
This night his weekly moil is at an end,
Collects his spades, his mattocks, and his hoes,
Hoping the morn in ease and rest to spend,
And weary, o'er the moor his course does hameward bend.

At length his lonely cot appears in view,
Beneath the shelter of an aged tree;
Th' expectant wee-things, toddlin, stacher through
To meet their dad, wi' flichterin' noise an' glee.
His wee bit ingle, blinkin bonilie,
His clean hearth-stane, his thrifty wifie's smile,
The lisping infant, prattling on his knee,
Does a' his weary kiaugh and care beguile,
And makes him quite forget his labor and his toil.

Belyve, the elder bairns come drapping in,
At service out, amang the farmers roun',
Some ca' the pleugh, some herd, some tentie rin
A cannie errand to a neebor town:
Their eldest hope, their Jenny, woman grown,
In youthfu' bloom, love sparkling in her e'e,
Comes hame; perhaps, to show a braw new gown,
Or deposite her sair-won penny-fee,
To help her parents dear, if they in hardship be.

With joy unfeign'd brothers and sisters meet,
And each for other's weelfare kindly spiers:
The social hours, swift-winged, unnotic'd fleet;
Each tells the uncos that he sees or hears.
The parents partial eye their hopeful years;
Anticipation forward points the view;
The mother, wi' her needle and her shears,

"And O! be sure to fear the Lord alway,
And mind your duty, duly, morn and night;
Lest in temptation's path ye gang astray,
Implore His counsel and assisting might
They never sought in vain that sought the Lord aright."

But hark! a rap comes gently to the door;
Jenny, wha kens the meaning o' the same,
Tells how a neebor lad came o'er the moor,
To do some errands, and convoy her hame.
The wily mother sees the conscious flame
Sparkle in Jenny's e'e, and flush her cheek;

The mother, wi' a woman's wiles, can spy
What makes the youth sae bashfu' and sae grave;

The halesome parritch, chief o' Scotia's food;
The soupe their only hawkie does afford,
That 'yont the hallan snugly chows her cood:
The dame brings forth in complimental mood,
To grace the lad, her weel-hain'd kebbuck, fell,
And aft he's prest, and aft he ca's it guid;

X A. THE RESURRECTIONERS

LIFE OF MANSIE WAUCH.

CHAPTER X.

Then up and spak the red-headed laddie: "It's no fair; anither should hae come by this time. I wad rin awa hame, only I am frighted to gang out my lane. Do ye think the doup of that candle wad carry i' my cap?"

"Na, na, lad; we maun bide here, as we are here now. Leave me alane? Lord safe us! and the yett lockit, and the bethrel sleeping with the key in his breek pouches! We canna win out now though we would," answered I, trying to look brave, though half frightened out of my seven senses: "Sit down, sit down; I've baith whisky and porter wi'me. Hae, man, there's a cawker to keep your heart warm; and set down that bottle," quoth I, wiping the sawdust affin't with my hand, "to get a toast; I'se warrant it for Deacon Jaffrey's best brown stout."

The wind blew higher, and like a hurricane; the rain began to fall in perfect spouts; the auld kirk rumbled and rowed, and made a sad soughing; and the branches of the bourtree behind the house, where auld Cockburn that cut his throat was buried, creaked and crazed in a frightful manner; but as to the roaring of the troubled waters, and the bumming in the lum-head, they were past all power of description. To make bad worse, just in the heart of the brattle, the grating sound of the yett turning on its rusty hinges was but too plainly heard. What was to be done? I thought of our both running away; and then of our locking ourselves in, and firing through the door; but who was to pull the trigger?

Gudeness watch over us! I tremble yet when I think on it. We were perfectly between the de'il and the deep sea—either to stand still and fire our gun, or run and be shot at. It was really a hang choice. As I stood swithering and shaking, the laddie flew to the door, and, thrawing round the key, clapped his back to it. Oh! how I looked at him, as he stood for a gliff, like a magpie hearkening with his lug cocked up, or rather like a terrier watching a rotten. "They're coming! they're coming!" he cried out; "cock the piece, ye sumph"; while the red hair rose up from his pow like feathers; "they're coming, I hear them tramping on the gravel!" Out he stretched his arms against the wall, and brizzed his back against the door like mad; as if he had been Samson pushing over the pillars in the house of Dagon. "For the Lord's sake, prime the gun," he cried out, "or our throats will be cut frae lug to lug before we can cry Jack Robison! See that there's priming in the pan."

I did the best I could; but my whole strength could hardly lift up the piece, which waggled to and fro like a cock's tail on a rainy day; my knees knocked against one another, and though I was resigned to die—I trust I was resigned to die—'od, but it was a frightful thing to be out of one's bed, and to be murdered in an old session-house, at the dead hour of night, by unearthly resurrection men, or rather let me call them deevils incarnate, wrapt up in dreadnoughts, with blacked faces, pistols, big sticks, and other deadly weapons.

A snuff-snuffing was heard; and, through below the door, I saw a pair of glancing black een. 'Od, but my heart nearly louped off the bit—a snouff, and a gur-gurring, and over all the plain tramp of a man's heavy tackets and cuddy-heels among the gravel. Then came a great slap like thunder on the wall; and the laddie, quitting his grip, fell down, crying, "Fire, fire!—murder! holy murder!"

"Wha's there?" growled a deep rough voice; "open,—I'm a freend."

I tried to speak, but could not; something like a halfpenny roll was sticking in my throat, so I tried to cough it up, but it would not come. "Gie the pass-word then," said the laddie, staring as if his eyes would loup out; "gie the password!"

First came a loud whistle, and then "Copmahagen," answered the voice. Oh! what a relief! The laddie started up, like one crazy with joy. "Ou! ou!" cried he, thrawing round the key, and rubbing his hands; "by jingo, it's the bethrel—it's the bethrel—it's auld Isaac himsell."

First rushed in the dog, and then Isaac, with his glazed hat slouched over his brow, and his horn bowet glimmering by his knee. "Has the French landed, do ye think? Losh keep us a'," said he, with a smile on his half-idiot face (for he was a kind of a sort of a natural, with an infirmity in his leg), "'od sauf us, man, put by your gun. Ye dinna mean to shoot me, do ye? What are ye about here with the door lockit? I just keppit four resurrectioners louping ower the wa'."

"Gude guide us!" I said, taking a long breath to drive the blood from my heart, and something relieved by Isaac's company—"Come now, Isaac, ye're just gieing us a fright. Isn't

"Yes, I'm joking—and what for no?—but they might have been, for onything ye wad hae hindered them to the contrair, I'm thinking. Na, na, ye maunna lock the door: that's no fair

When the door was put ajee, and the furm set fornent the fire, I gave Isaac a dram to keep his heart up on such a cold stormy night. 'Od, but he was a droll fellow, Isaac. He sung and leuch as if he had been boozing in Luckie Tamson's, with some of his drucken cronies. Feint a hair cared he about auld kirks, or kirkyards, or vouts, or throughstanes, or dead folk in their winding-sheets, with the wet grass growing over them; and at last I began to brighten up a wee myself; so when he had gone over a good few funny stories, I said to him, quoth I, "Mony folk, I daresay, mak' mair noise about their sitting up in a kirkyard than it's a' worth. There's naething here to harm us?"

"I beg to differ wi'ye there," answered Isaac, taking out his horn mull from his coat pouch, and tapping on the lid in a queer style—"I could gie anither version of that story. Did ye no ken of three young doctors—Eirish students—alang with some resurrectioners, as waff and wild as themsells, firing shottie for shottie with the guard at Kirkmabreck, and lodging three slugs in ane of their backs, forbye firing a ramrod through anither ane's hat?"

"But, let alane resurrectioners, do ye no think there is sic a thing as ghaists? Guide ye, man, my grannie could hae telled as muckle about them as would have filled a minister's sermons from June to January."

"Kay—kay—that's all buff," I said. "Are there nae cuttystool businesses—are there nae marriages going on just now, Isaac?" for I was keen to change the subject.

"Ye may kay—kay, as ye like, though; I can just tell ye this:—Ye'll mind auld Armstrong with the leather breeks, and the brown three-story wig—him that was the gravedigger? Weel, he saw a ghaist wi' his leeving een—ay, and what's better, in this very kirkyard too. It was a cauld spring morning, and daylight just coming in, whan he cam' to the yett yonder, thinking to meet his man—paidling Jock—but Jock had sleepit in, and wasna there. Weel, to the wast corner ower yonder he gaed, and throwing his coat ower a headstane, and his hat on the tap o't, he dug away with his spade, casting out the mools, and the coffin handles, and the green banes and sic like, till he stoppit a wee to take breath. What! are ye whistling to yoursell?" quoth Isaac to me, "and no hearing what's God's truth?"

"Ou ay," said I; "but ye didna tell me if onybody was cried last Sunday?"—I would have given every farthing I had made by the needle, to have been at that blessed time in my bed with my wife and wean. Ay, how I was gruing! I mostly chacked off my tongue in chittering. But all would not do.

"Weel, speaking of ghaists—when he was resting on his spade he looked up to the steeple, to see what o'clock it was, wondering what way Jock hadna come, when lo and behold! in the lang diced window of the kirk yonder, he saw a lady a' in white, with her hands clasped thegither, looking out to the kirk-yard at him.

"He couldna believe his een, so he rubbit them with his sark sleeve, but she was still there bodily; and, keeping ae ee on her, and anither on his road to the yett, he drew his coat and hat to him below his arm, and aff like mad, throwing the shool half a mile ahint him. Jock fand that; for he was coming singing in at the yett, when his maister ran clean ower the tap o' him, and capsized him like a toom barrel; never stopping till he was in at his ain house, and the door baith bolted and barred at his tail.

"Did ye ever hear the like of that, Mansie? Weel, man, I'll explain the hail history of it to ye. Ye see—'Od! how sound that callant's sleeping," continued Isaac; "he's snoring like a nine-year-auld!"

I was glad he had stopped, for I was like to sink through the ground with fear; but no, it would not do.

"Dinna ye ken—sauf us! what a fearsome night this is! The trees will be all broken. What a noise in the lum! I daresay there's some auld hag of a witch-wife gaun to come rumble doun't. It's no the first time, I'll swear. Hae ye a silver sixpence? Wad ye like that?" he bawled up the chimney. "Ye'll hae heard," said he, "lang ago, that a wee murdered wean was buried—didna ye hear a voice?—was buried below that corner—the hearthstane there, where the laddie's lying on?"

I had now lost my breath, so that I could not stop him.

"Ye never heard tell o't, didna ye? Weel, I'se tell't ye—Sauf us, what swurls of smoke coming down the chimley—I could swear something no canny's stopping up the lum-head—Gang out and see!"

At that moment a clap like thunder was heard—the candle was driven over—the sleeping laddie roared "Help!" and "Murder!" and "Thieves!" and as the furm on which we were sitting played flee backwards, cripple Isaac bellowed out, "I'm dead!—I'm killed—shot through the head!—Oh! oh! oh!"

Surely I had fainted away; for when I came to myself I found my red comforter loosed, my face all wet—Isaac rubbing down his waistcoat with his sleeve—the laddie swigging ale out of a bicker—and the brisk brown stout, which, by casting its cork, had caused all the alarm, whizz—whizz—whizzing in the chimley lug.

XI A. THE AULD FARMER'S NEW-YEAR MORNING SALUTATION TO HIS AULD MARE, MAGGIE

ROBERT BURNS.

A Guid New-Year I wish thee, Maggie!
Hae, there's a ripp to thy auld baggie:
Tho' thou's howe-backit now, an' knaggie,
I've seen the day
Thou could hae gaen like onie staggie
Out-owre the lay.

Tho' now thou's dowie, stiff, an' crazy,
An' thy auld hide's as white's a daisie,
I've seen thee dappl't, sleek, an' glaizie,
A bonie gray:

He should been tight that dau'rt to raize thee Ance in a day.

Thou ance was i' the foremost rank,
A filly buirdly, steeve, an' swank,
An' set weel down a shapely shank
As e'er tread yird;
An' could ha'e flown out-owre a stank

Like onie bird.

It's now some nine-an'-twenty year
Sin' thou was my guid-father's meere;
He gied me thee, o' tocher clear,
An' fifty mark.

Tho' it was sma', 'twas weel-won gear, An' thou was stark.

XII A. BLIN' TIBBIE

ALEC FORBES OF HOWGLEN.

GEORGE MACDONALD (1824-1905).

CHAPTER XLIV.

The scene of Alec Forbes is the village and neighbourhood of Huntly in W. Abd. Macdonald makes his characters use the "Lingua Scottica" and not the local dialect, no doubt because he wished to be easily intelligible to all Scottish speakers. Thus he uses the ordinary Scottish spellings guid or gude, wha, whan, hoo, auld, wrang, frae, which his characters would have pro-

In the course of her study of Milton, Annie had come upon Samson's lamentation over his blindness; and had found, soon after, the passage in which Milton, in his own person, bewails the loss of light. The thought that she would read them to Tibbie Dyster was a natural one. She borrowed the volumes from Mrs Forbes; and, the next evening, made her way to Tibbie's cottage, where she was welcomed as usual by her gruff voice of gratefulness.

"Ye're a gude bairn to come a' this gait through the snaw to see an auld blin' body like me. It's dingin' on (snawing or raining)—is na 't, bairn?"

"Ay is't. Hoo do ye ken, Tibbie?"

"I dinna ken hoo I ken. I was na sure. The snaw maks unco little din, ye see. It comes doon like the speerit himsel' upo' quaiet herts."

"Did ye ever see, Tibbie?" asked Annie, after a pause.

"Na; nae that I min' upo'. I was but twa year auld, my mither used to tell fowk, whan I had the pock, an' it jist closed up my een for ever—i' this warl, ye ken. I s' see some day as weel's ony o' ye, lass."

"Do ye ken what licht is, Tibbie?" said Annie, whom Milton had set meditating on Tibbie's physical in relation to her mental condition.

Annie was neither able nor willing to enter into an argument on the matter, although she was not satisfied. She would rather think than dispute about it. So she changed the subject in a measure.

"Did ye ever hear o' John Milton, Tibbie?" she asked.

"Ow! ay. He was blin' like mysel', wasna he?"

"Ay, was he. I hae been readin' a heap o' his poetry."

"Eh! I wad richt weel like to hear a bittie o' 't."

"Ay, I ken weel eneuch. Read it."

Annie read the well-known passage. Tibbie listened to the end, without word of remark or question, her face turned towards the reader, and her sightless balls rolling under their closed lids. When Annie's voice ceased, she said, after a little reflection:

"Ay! ay! It's bonnie, an' verra true. And, puir man! it was waur for him nor for me and Milton; for it was a' his ain wyte; and it was no to be expecket he cud be sae quaiet as anither. But he had no richt to queston the ways o' the Maker. But it's bonnie, rael bonnie."

"Noo, I'll jist read to ye what Milton says aboot his ain blin'ness. But it's some ill to unnerstan'."

"Maybe I'll unnerstan' 't better nor you, bairn. Read awa'." So admonished, Annie read. Tibbie fidgeted about on her seat. It was impossible either should understand it. And the proper names were a great puzzle to them.

"Tammy Riss!" said Tibbie; "I ken naething about him."

"Na, neither do I," said Annie; and beginning the line again, she blundered over "blind Maeonides."

"Ye're readin' 't wrang, bairn. It sud be 'nae ony days,' for there's nae days or nichts either to the blin'. They dinna ken the differ, ye see."

"I'm readin' 't as I hae't," answered Annie. "It's a muckle M."

"I ken naething aboot yer muckle or yer little Ms," retorted Tibbie, with indignation. "Gin that binna what it means, it's ayont me. Read awa'. Maybe we'll come to something better."

"Ay will we?" said Annie, and resumed.

With the words, "Thus with the year seasons return," Tibbie's attention grew fixed; and when the reader came to the passage,

"So much the rather thou, Celestial Light, Shine inward,"

her attention rose into rapture.

"Ay, ay, lassie! That man kent a' aboot it! He wad never hae speired gin a blin' crater like me kent what the licht was. He kent what it was weel. Ay did he!"

"But, ye see, he was a gey auld man afore he tint his eesicht," Annie ventured to interpose.

"Sae muckle the better! He kent baith kinds. And he kent that the sicht without the een is better nor the sicht o' the een. Fowk nae doobt has baith; but I think whiles 'at the Lord gies a grainy mair o' the inside licht to mak' up for the loss o' the ootside; and weel I wat it doesna want muckle to do that."

"But ye dinna ken what it is," objected Annie, with unnecessary persistence in the truth.

"Do ye tell me that again?" returned Tibbie, harshly. "Ye'll anger me, bairn. Gin ye kent hoo I lie awauk at nicht, no able to sleep for thinkin' 'at the day will come whan I'll see—wi' my ain open een—the verra face o' him that bore oor griefs an' carried oor sorrows, till I jist lie and greit, for verra wissin', ye wadna say 'at I dinna ken what the sicht o' a body's een is. Sae nae mair o' that! I beg o' ye, or I'll jist need to gang to my prayers to haud me ohn been angry wi' ane o' the Lord's bairns; for that ye are, I do believe, Annie Anderson. Annie dared not say another word. She sat silent—perhaps rebuked. But Tibbie resumed:

"Ye maunna think, hooever, 'cause sic longin' thouchts come ower me, that I gang aboot the hoose girnin' and compleenin' that I canna open the door and win oot. Na, na. I could jist despise the licht, whiles, that ye mak' sic a wark aboot, and sing and shout, as the Psalmist says; for I'm jist that glaid, that I dinna ken hoo to haud it in. For the Lord's my frien'. I can jist tell him a' that comes into my puir blin' heid. Ye see there's ither ways for things to come intil a body's heid. There's mair doors nor the een. There's back doors, whiles, that lat ye oot to the bonnie gairden, and that's better nor the road-side. And the smell o' the braw flooers comes in at the back winnocks, ye ken.—Whilk o' the bonnie flooers do ye think likest Him, Annie Anderson?"

"Eh! I dinna ken, Tibbie. I'm thinkin' they maun be a' like him."

"Ay, ay, nae doobt. But some o' them may be liker him nor ithers."

"Weel, whilk do ye think likest him, Tibbie?"

"I think it maun be the minnonette—sae clean and sae fine and sae weel content."

"Ay, ye're speiken by the smell, Tibbie. But gin ye saw the rose—"

"Hoots! I hae seen the rose mony a time. Nae doobt it's bonnier to luik at—" and here her fingers went moving about as if they were feeling the full-blown sphere of a rose—" but I think, for my pairt, that the minnonette's likest Him."

"May be," was all Annie's reply, and Tibbie went on.

"There maun be faces liker him nor ithers. Come here, Annie, and lat me fin (feel) whether ye be like him or no."

"Hoo can ye ken that?—ye never saw him."

"Never saw him! I hae seen him ower and ower again. I see him whan I like. Come here, I say."

Annie went and knelt down beside her, and the blind woman passed her questioning fingers in solemn silence over and over the features of the child. At length, with her hands still resting upon Annie's head, she uttered her judgment.

"Ay. Some like him, nae doot. But she'll be a heap liker him whan she sees him as he is."

When a Christian proceeds to determine the rightness of his neighbour by his approximation to his fluctuating ideal, it were well if the judgment were tempered by such love as guided the hands of blind Tibbie over the face of Annie in their attempt to discover whether or not she was like the Christ of her visions.

"Do ye think ye're like him, Tibbie?" said Annie with a smile, which Tibbie at once detected in the tone.

"Hoots, bairn! I had the pock dreidfu', ye ken."

"Weel, maybe we a' hae had something or ither that hauds us ohn been sae bonny as we micht hae been. For ae thing, there's the guilt o' Adam's first sin, ye ken."

"Verra richt, bairn. Nae doot that's blaudit mony a face— 'the want o' original richteousness, and the corruption o' our whole natur'.' The wonner is that we're like him at a'. But we maun be like him, for he was a man born o' a wumman. Think o' that, lass!"

At this moment the latch of the door was lifted, and in walked Robert Bruce. He gave a stare when he saw Annie, for he had thought her out of the way at Howglen, and said in a tone of asperity,

"Ye're a' gait at ance, Annie Anderson. A doonricht rintheroot!"

"Lat the bairn be, Master Bruce," said Tibbie. "She's doin' the Lord's will, whether ye may think it or no. She's visitin' them 'at's i' the prison-hoose o' the dark. She's ministerin' to them 'at hae mony preeviledges nae doot, but hae room for mair."

"I'm no saying naething," said Bruce.

"Ye are sayin'. Ye're offendin' ane o' his little anes. Tak ye tent o' the millstane."

"Hoot toot! Tibbie. I was only wissin 'at she wad keep a sma' part o' her ministrations for her ain hame and her ain fowk 'at has the ministerin' to her. There's the mistress and me jist mairtyrs to that chop! And there's the bit infant in want o' some ministration noo and than, gin that be what ye ca' 't."

A grim compression of the mouth was all Tibbie's reply. She did not choose to tell Robert Bruce that although she was blind—and probably because she was blind—she heard rather more gossip than anybody else in Glamerton, and that consequently his appeal to her sympathy had no effect upon her. Finding she made no other answer, Bruce turned to Annie.

"Noo, Annie," said he, "ye're nae wantit here ony langer. I hae a word or twa to say to Tibbie. Gang hame and learn yer lessons for the morn."

"It's Setterday nicht," answered Annie.

"But ye hae yer lessons to learn for the Mononday."

"Ow ay! But I hae a buik or twa to tak' hame to Mistress Forbes. And I daursay I'll bide, and come to the kirk wi' her i' the mornin'."

Now, although all that Bruce wanted was to get rid of her, he went on to oppose her; for common-minded people always feel that they give the enemy an advantage if they show themselves content.

"It's no safe to rin aboot i' the mirk (dark). It's dingin' on forbye. Ye'll be a' wat, and maybe fa' into the dam. Ye couldna see yer han' afore yer face—ance oot o' the toon."

"I ken the road to Mistress Forbes's as weel's the road up your garret-stairs, Mr Bruce."

"Ow nae doobt!" he answered, with a sneering acerbity peculiar to him, in which his voice seemed sharpened and concentrated to a point by the contraction of his lips. "And there's tykes aboot," he added, remembering Annie's fear of dogs.

But by this time Annie, gentle as she was, had got a little angry.

"The Lord'll tak care o' me frae the dark and the tykes, and the lave o' ye, Mr Bruce," she said.

And bidding Tibbie good-night, she took up her books, and departed, to wade through the dark and the snow, trembling lest some unseen tyke should lay hold of her as she went.

As soon as she was gone, Bruce proceeded to make himself agreeable to Tibbie by retailing all the bits of gossip he could think of. While thus engaged, he kept peering earnestly about the room from door to chimney, turning his head on every side, and surveying as he turned it. Even Tibbie perceived, from the changes in the sound of his voice, that he was thus occupied.

"Ay, ay, nae doobt. But what wad ye say gin I tell't ye that I had boucht the bit hoosie, and was yer new landlord, Tibbie?"

"No that auld, Maister Bruce, gin ye kent the trowth!"

"Weel, ye're no ower young to need to be ta'en guid care o'—are ye, Tibbie?"

Tibbie grunted.

"Weel, to come to the pint. There's nae doobt the hoose wants a hantle o' doctorin'."

"'Deed does't," interposed Tibbie. "It'll want a new door. For forbye 'at the door's maist as wide as twa ordinar doors, it was ance in twa halves like a chop-door. And they're ill jined thegither, and the win' comes throu like a knife, and maist cuts a body in twa. Ye see the bit hoosie was ance the dyer's dryin' hoose, afore he gaed further doon the watter."

"Nae doobt ye're richt, Tibbie. But seein' that I maun lay oot sae muckle, I'll be compelled to pit anither thrippence on to the rent."

"Ither thrippence, Robert Bruce! That's three thrippences i' the ook in place o' twa. That's an unco rise! Ye canna mean what ye say! It's a' that I'm able to do to pay my saxpence.

Robert Bruce went away, and did not purchase the cottage, which was in the market at a low price. He had intended Tibbie to believe, as she did, that he had already bought it; and if she had agreed to pay even the sevenpence, he would have gone from her to secure it.

XIII A. THE WHISTLE

CHARLES MURRAY.

Charles Murray, one of the very best of our modern Scots poets, comes from the "North Countree." He does not in this poem introduce the characteristic pronunciations of his Aberdeenshire Doric. The only exception worth noting is futtrat for whutrit, i.e. weasel. We find when, whistle, porridge, nose, from, which in N.E. Sc. would be fan or fin, masl, porrif or potrif, niz, fe. "Dool" and "school" do not rhyme in N.E. Sc., being dul and skwil, although they rhyme in St. Eng. dul, skul, or in Mid Sc. dyl, skyl.

Some of Murray's other poems smack more distinctly of the North-East, e.g. Winter:

He cut a sappy sucker from the muckle rodden-tree,
He trimmed it, an' he wet it, an' he thumped it on his knee;
He never heard the teuchat when the harrow broke her eggs,
He missed the craggit heron nabbin' puddocks in the seggs,
He forgot to hound the collie at the cattle when they strayed,
But you should hae seen the whistle that the wee herd made!

He wheepled on't at mornin' an' he tweetled on't at nicht, He puffed his freckled cheeks until his nose sank oot o' sicht, The kye were late for milkin' when he piped them up the closs, The kitlins got his supper syne, an' he was beddit boss; But he cared na doit nor docken what they did or thocht or said, There was comfort in the whistle that the wee herd made.

For lyin' lang o' mornin's he had clawed the caup for weeks, But noo he had his bonnet on afore the lave had breeks; He was whistlin' to the porridge that were hott'rin' on the fire, He was whistlin' ower the travise to the baillie in the byre; Nae a blackbird nor a mavis, that hae pipin' for their trade, Was a marrow for the whistle that the wee herd made.

"The Ingle's heaped wi' bleezin peats
An bits o' splutt'rin firry reets
Which shortly thow the ploughman's beets;
An peels appear
That trickle oot aneth their seats
A' ower the fleer.

Here "peats," reets (roots), beets (boots), "seats" all rhyme with the Aberdeensh. pronunciation i. Fleer for "floor," Mid Sc. flure, rhymes with "appear," i.e. flire, e'pir. The spelling peels (pools) also clearly indicates the N.E. pronunciation of this word.

XIV A. THE "NEWS" OF THE MARRIAGE

JOHNNY GIBB OF GUSHETNEUK.

DR WILLIAM ALEXANDER (1826-1894).

CHAPTER XL.

The scene of "Johnny Gibb" is supposed to be the neighbourhood of Culsalmond, Central Abd., and the dialect used is that of the N.E. The spelling attempts to represent the local pronunciation and with a large measure of success.

N.E. Scots extends from Deeside to Caithness. Its most marked phonetic distinction is its treatment of O.E. and Scan.  $\bar{o}$ , Fr. u, which generally become i, e.g. "done, moon, roose (praise), music, assure" are deen, meen, reeze, meesic, asseer, din, min, ri:z, 'mi:zik, ə'si:r. When the vowel is followed by a back consonant, ju is the modern development; thus "took, cook, nook," are tyeuk, kyeuk, nyeuk, tjuk, kjuk, njuk. When a back consonant precedes the vowel a w is developed, e.g. "good, cool" become gweed (Mid Sc. gude or guid), cweel, gwid, kwil.

From Arbroath in Forfarsh. all along the coast to the Spey, O.E.  $\bar{a}$  before n appears as i; thus "one, bone" are pronounced in, bin. In Central Bnff., however, the pronunciation is ane, bane, en, ben. In this Extract we find aleen and neen alongside of ane, banes, stanes, which variation may be the result of the influence of literary Scots, or perhaps be due to the fact that the writer lived on the borders of two sub-dialects.

&quot;Ou ay, Hairry, man! This is a bonny wye o' gyaun on! Dinna ye gar me troo't ye wasna dancin' the heilan' walloch the streen. Fa wud 'a thocht 't ye wud 'a been needin' a file o' an aul' day to rest yer banes aifter the mairriage?"

Such was the form of salutation adopted by Meg Raffan as she entered the dwelling of Hairry Muggart early in the afternoon of the day after Patie's wedding, and found Hairry stretched at full length on the deece.

&quot;Deed, an' ye may jist say 't, Hennie," answered Hairry Muggart's wife. "Come awa' ben an' lean ye doon. Fat time, think ye, came he hame, noo?"

XIV A. THE "NEWS" OF THE MARRIAGE

JOHNNY GIBB OF GUSHETNEUK.

DR WILLIAM ALEXANDER (1826-1894).

CHAPTER XL.

There are some curious diphthongs in this dialect, e.g. fyow, byowtifu', fjau, 'bjautifə for "few, beautiful," wyte, gryte, seyvn, speyke, wəit, qrəit, səivn, spəik for "wait, great, seven, speak."

Among the consonantal peculiarities we find f = m over the N.E. area. Thus "who, what, why, whisky" are fa:, fat, fu:, 'fask. This distinction extends as far south as Arbroath, but south of the Dee valley tends to limit its action to the pronominals.

θ is used as a substitute for xt as in "daughter, might," dother, mith, 'doθər, mṛθ, and w is often replaced by v, e.g. "wrong, lawyer, sow, snow," vrang, lavyer, schaave, snyaave, vran, lavjər, [a.v., sn<sub>i</sub>a.v.

This and that are used both as Singular and Plural. Thir,  $\mathfrak{F}_{\mathbf{tr}}$  = these or those is unknown.  $On = \mathbf{on}$  or  $\mathbf{un}$ , meaning "without," is employed with the Past Part. or Gerund (see Gr.  $\S$  49.51, notes 1,2); example in Extract on lee't = "without lying."

The above are a few of the characteristics of this most interesting of Scottish Dialects which has, moreover, preserved a large number of old words now obsolete in other parts of Scotland.

"Weel gloam't!" exclaimed Mrs Muggart. "I 'se jist haud my tongue, than. Better to ye speak o' grey daylicht i' the Wee, sleekit, cowrin, tim'rous beastie,

O, what a panic's in thy breastie!
Thou needna start awa' sae hasty,
Wi' bickering brattle!
I wad be laith to rin and chase thee,
Wi' murdering pattle!

I'm truly sorry man's dominion Has broken nature's social union,

An' justifies that ill opinion

Which makes thee startle

At me, thy poor earth-born companion,

And fellow-mortal!

I doubt na, whyles, but thou may thieve; What then? poor beastie, thou maun live! A daimen icker in a thrave

's a sma' request:
I'll get a blessin wi' the lave,
An' never miss't!

Thy wee bit housie, too, in ruin!
Its silly wa's the win's are strewin'!
An' naething now to big a new ane
O' foggage green!

An' bleak December's winds ensuin',
Baith snell an' keen!

Thou saw the fields laid bare an' waste,
An' weary winter comin' fast,
An' cozie here, beneath the blast,
Thou thought to dwell,
Till crash! the cruel coulter past

Out thro' thy cell.

XVI A. THE SAVING OF ANNIE

BESIDE THE BONNIE BRIER BUSH.

IAN MACLAREN (1850-1907).

Doctor MacLure did not lead a solemn procession from the sick-bed to the dining-room, and give his opinion from the hearthrug with an air of wisdom bordering on the supernatural, because neither the Drumtochty houses nor his manners were on that large scale. He was accustomed to deliver himself in the yard, and to conclude his directions with one foot in the stirrup; but when he left the room where the life of Annie Mitchell was ebbing slowly away, our doctor said not one word, and at the sight of his face her husband's heart was troubled.

He was a dull man, Tammas, who could not read the meaning of a sign, and laboured under a perpetual disability of speech; but love was eyes to him that day, and a mouth.

"Is't as bad as yir lookin', doctor? Tell's the truth; wull Annie no come through?" and Tammas looked MacLure straight in the face, who never flinched his duty or said smooth things.

"A' wud gie onything tae say Annie hes a chance, but a' daurna; a' doot yir gaein' tae lose her, Tammas."

MacLure was in the saddle, and as he gave his judgment, he laid his hand on Tammas's shoulder with one of the rare caresses that pass between men.

"It's a sair business, but ye 'ill play the man and no vex Annie; she 'ill dae her best, a'll warrant."

"An' a'll dae mine"; and Tammas gave MacLure's hand a grip that would have crushed the bones of a weakling. Drumtochty felt in such moments the brotherliness of this roughlooking man, and loved him.

Tammas hid his face in Jess's mane, who looked round with sorrow in her beautiful eyes, for she had seen many tragedies, and in this silent sympathy the stricken man drank his cup, drop by drop.

"A' wesna prepared for this, for a' aye thocht she wud live the langest....She's younger than me by ten years, and never wes ill....We've been mairit twal year laist Martinmas, but it's juist like a year the day....A' was never worthy o' her, the bonniest, snoddest, kindliest lass in the Glen...A' never cud mak oot hoo she ever lookit at me, 'at hesna hed ae word tae say aboot her till it's ower late....She didna cuist up tae me that a' wesna worthy o' her, no her, but aye she said, 'Yir ma ain gudeman, and nane cud be kinder tae me.'...An' a' wes minded tae be kind, but a' see noo mony little trokes a' micht hae dune for her, and noo the time is bye....Naebody kens hoo patient she wes wi' me, an' ave made the best o' me, an' never pit me tae shame afore the fouk....An' we never hed ae cross word, no ane in twal year....We were mair nor man and wife, we were sweethearts a' the time....Oh, ma bonnie lass, what 'ill the bairnies an' me dae without ve, Annie?"

The winter night was falling fast, the snow lay deep upon the ground, and the merciless north wind moaned through the close as Tammas wrestled with his sorrow dry-eyed, for tears were denied Drumtochty men. Neither the doctor nor Jess moved hand or foot, but their hearts were with their fellow-creature, and at length the doctor made a sign to Marget Howe, who had come out in search of Tammas, and now stood by his side.

"Dinna mourn tae the brakin' o' yir hert, Tammas," she said, "as if Annie an' you hed never luved. Neither death nor time can pairt them that luve; there's naethin' in a' the warld sae strong as luve. If Annie gaes frae the sicht o' yir een she 'ill come the nearer tae yir hert. "Can naethin' be dune, doctor? Ye savit Flora Cammil, and young Burnbrae, an' yon shepherd's wife Dunleith wy, an' we were a' sae prood o' ye, an' pleased tae think that ye hed keepit deith frae anither hame. Can ye no think o' somethin' tae help Annie, and gie her back tae her man and bairnies?" and Tammas searched the doctor's face in the cold, weird light.

"There's nae pooer in heaven or airth like luve," Marget said to me afterwards; "it maks the weak strong and the dumb tae speak. Oor herts were as water afore Tamınas's words, an' a' saw the doctor shake in his saddle. A' never kent till that meenut hoo he hed a share in a'body's grief, an' carried the heaviest wecht o' a' the Glen. A' peetied him wi' Tammas lookin' at him sae wistfully, as if he hed the keys o' life an' deith in his hands. But he wes honest, and wudna hold oot a false houp tae deceive a sore hert or win escape for himsel'."

"Ye needna plead wi' me, Tammas, to dae the best a' can for yir wife. Man, a' kent her lang afore ye ever luved her; a' brocht her intae the warld, and a' saw her through the fever when she wes a bit lassikie; a' closed her mither's een, and it wes me hed tae tell her she wes an orphan, an' nae man wes better pleased when she got a gude husband, and a' helpit her wi' her fower bairns. A've naither wife nor bairns o' ma own, an' a' coont a' the fouk o' the Glen ma family. Div ye think a' wudna save Annie if I cud? If there wes a man in Muirtown 'at cud dae mair for her, a'd have him this verra nicht, but a' the doctors in Perthshire are helpless for this tribble.

"Tammas, ma puir fallow, if it could avail, a' tell ye a' wud lay doon this auld worn-oot ruckle o' a body o' mine juist tae see ye baith sittin' at the fireside, an' the bairns roond ye, couthy an' canty again; but it's no tae be, Tammas; it's no tae be."

"When a' lookit at the doctor's face," Marget said, "a' thocht him the winsomest man a' ever saw. He wes transfigured that nicht, for a'm judging there's nae transfiguration like luve."

"It's God's wull an' maun be borne, but it's a sair wull for me, an' a'm no ungratefu' tae you, doctor, for a' ye've dune and what ye said the nicht"; and Tammas went back to sit with Annie for the last time.

with a skill that came of long experience, and the doctor held converse with her according to his wont.

"Eh, Jess wumman, yon wes the hardest wark a' hae tae face, and a' wud raither hae ta'en ma chance o' anither row in a Glen Urtach drift than tell Tammas Mitchell his wife wes deein'.

"A' said she cudna be cured, and it wes true, for there's juist ae man in the land for't, and they micht as weel try tae get the mune oot o' heaven. Sae a' said naethin' tae vex Tammas's hert, for it's heavy eneuch without regrets.

"But it's hard, Jess, that money wull buy life after a', an' if Annie wes a duchess her man wudna lose her; but bein' only a puir cottar's wife, she maun dee afore the week's oot.

"Gin we hed him the morn there's little doot she wud be saved, for he hesna lost mair than five per cent. o' his cases, and they'll be puir toon's craturs, no strappin' women like Annie.

"It's oot o' the question, Jess, sae hurry up, lass, for we've hed a heavy day. But it wud be the grandest thing that was ever dune in the Glen in oor time if it cud be managed by hook or crook.

"We 'ill gang and see Drumsheugh, Jess; he's anither man sin' Geordie Hoo's deith, and he wes aye kinder than fouk kent"; and the doctor passed at a gallop through the village, whose lights shone across the white, frost-bound road.

"Come in by, doctor; a' heard ye on the road. Ye'll hae been at Tammas Mitchell's; hoo's the gudewife? A doot she's sober."

"Annie's deein', Drumsheugh, an' Tammas is like tae brak his hert."

"That's no lichtsome, doctor, no lichtsome ava, for a' dinna ken ony man in Drumtochty sae bund up in his wife as Tammas, an' there's no a bonnier wumman o' her age crosses oor kirk door than Annie, nor a cleverer at her wark. Man, ye 'ill need tae pit yir brains in steep. Is she clean beyond ye?"

"Beyond me and every ither in the land but ane, and it wud cost a hundred guineas tae bring him tae Drumtochty."

"Are ye meanin' it, Drumsheugh?" and MacLure turned white below the tan.

"William MacLure," said Drumsheugh, in one of the few confidences that ever broke the Drumtochty reserve, "a'm a lonely man, wi' naebody o' ma ain blude tae care for me livin', or tae lift me intae ma coffin when a'm deid.

"A' fecht awa at Muirtown market for an extra pund on a beast, or a shillin' on the quarter o' barley, an' what's the gude o't? Burnbrae gaes aff tae get a goon for his wife or a buke for his college laddie, an' Lachlan Campbell 'll no leave the place noo without a ribbon for Flora.

"Ilka man in the Kildrummie train has some bit fairin' in his pooch for the fouk at hame that he's bocht wi' the siller he won.

"But there's naebody tae be lookin' oot for me, an' comin' doon the road tae meet me, and daffin' wi' me aboot their fairing, or feeling ma pockets. Ou ay, a've seen it a' at ither hooses, though they tried tae hide it frae me for fear a' wud lauch at them. Me lauch, wi' my cauld, empty hame!

Ma hert turned tae bitterness, but that passed awa beside the brier bush whar George Hoo lay yon sad simmer-time. Some day a'll tell ye ma story, Weelum, for you an' me are auld freends, and will be till we dee."

MacLure felt beneath the table for Drumsheugh's hand, but neither man looked at the other.

"Weel, a' we can dae noo, Weelum, gin we haena mickle brichtness in oor ain hames, is tae keep the licht frae gaein' oot in anither hoose. Write the telegram, man, and Sandy 'ill send it aff frae Kildrummie this verra nicht, and ye 'ill hae yir man the morn."

Next morning a figure received Sir George on the Kildrummie platform whom that famous surgeon took for a gillie, but who introduced himself as "MacLure of Drumtochty." It seemed as if the East had come to meet the West when these two stood together, the one in travelling furs, handsome and distinguished, with his strong, cultured face and carriage of authority, a characteristic type of his profession; and the other more marvellously dressed than ever, for Drumsheugh's topcoat had been forced upon him for the occasion, his face and neck one redness with the bitter cold; rough and ungainly, yet not without some signs of power in his eye and voice, the most heroic type of his noble profession. MacLure compassed the precious arrival with observances till he was securely seated in Drumsheugh's dogcart—a vehicle that lent itself to history—with two full-sized plaids added to his equipment—Drumsheugh and Hillocks had both been requisitioned—and MacLure wrapped another plaid round a leather case, which was placed below the seat with such reverence as might be given to the Queen's regalia. Peter attended their departure full of interest, and as soon as they were in the fir-woods MacLure explained that it would be an eventful journey.

"It's a' richt in here, for the wind disna get at the snaw, but the drifts are deep in the Glen, and th'ill be some engineerin' afore we get tae oor destination."

Four times they left the road, and took their way over fields; twice they forced a passage through a slap in a dyke; thrice they used gaps in the paling which MacLure had made on his downward journey.

"A' seleckit the road this mornin', an' a' ken the depth tae an inch; we'ill get through this steadin' here tae the main road, but oor worst job'ill be crossin' the Tochty.

"Ye see the bridge hes been shakin' wi' this winter's flood, and we daurna venture on it, sae we hev tae ford, and the snaw's been melting up Urtach way. There's nae doot the water's gey big, an' it's threatenin' tae rise, but we'll win through wi' a warstle.

"It micht be safer tae lift the instruments oot o' reach o' the water; wud ye mind haddin' them on yir knee till we're ower? An' keep firm in yir seat in case we come on a stane in the bed o' the river."

"tts a: rtxt in hi:r, fər də wind 'dtznə get ət də sna:, bət də drifts ər dip in də glen, ən dil bi: sam indzi'ni:rən ə'fo:r wi get tə ur destr'nesn."

By this time they had come to the edge, and it was not a cheering sight. The Tochty had spread out over the meadows, and while they waited they could see it cover another two inches on the trunk of a tree. There are summer floods, when the water is brown and flecked with foam, but this was a winter flood, which is black and sullen, and runs in the centre with a strong, flerce, silent current. Upon the opposite side Hillocks stood to give directions by word and hand, as the ford was on his land, and none knew the Tochty better in all its ways.

They passed through the shallow water without mishap, save when the wheel struck a hidden stone or fell suddenly into a rut; but when they neared the body of the river MacLure halted, to give Jess a minute's breathing.

"It'll tak ye a' yir time, lass, an' a' wud raither be on yir back; but ye never failed me yet, and a wumman's life is hangin' on the crossin'."

With the first plunge into the bed of the stream the water rose to the axles, and then it crept up to the shafts, so that the surgeon could feel it lapping in about his feet, while the dogcart began to quiver, and it seemed as if it were to be carried away. Sir George was as brave as most men, but he had never forded a Highland river in flood, and the mass of black water racing past beneath, before, behind him, affected his imagination and shook his nerves. He rose from his seat and ordered MacLure to turn back, declaring that he would be condemned utterly and eternally if he allowed himself to be drowned for any person.

"Sit doon," thundered MacLure; "condemned ye will be suner or later gin ye shirk yir duty, but through the water ye gang the day."

Both men spoke much more strongly and shortly, but this is what they intended to say, and it was MacLure that prevailed.

Jess trailed her feet along the ground with cunning art, and held her shoulder against the stream; MacLure leant forward in his seat, a rein in each hand, and his eyes fixed on Hillocks, who was now standing up to the waist in the water, shouting directions and cheering on horse and driver.

"Haud tae the richt, doctor; there's a hole yonder. Keep oot o't for ony sake. That's it; yir daein' fine. Steady, man, steady.

"ttl tak ji a: jir təim, las, ən ə wad ¹reðər bi ən jir bak; bət ji 'nivər felt mi jet, ən ə 'wamənz ləif tz 'haŋən ən ðə ²'krosən."

Yir at the deepest; sit heavy in yir seats. Up the channel noo, an' ye'll be oot o' the swirl. Weel dune, Jess, weel dune, auld mare! Mak straicht for me, doctor, an' a'll gie ye the road oot. Ma word, ye've dune yir best, baith o' ye, this mornin'," cried Hillocks, splashing up to the dogcart, now in the shallows.

"Sall, it wes titch an' go for a meenut in the middle; a Hielan' ford is a kittle road in the snaw time, but ye're safe noo.

"Gude luck tae ye up at Westerton, sir; nane but a richthearted man wud hae riskit the Tochty in flood. Ye're boond tae succeed aifter sic a graund beginnin'"; for it had spread already that a famous surgeon had come to do his best for Annie, Tammas Mitchell's wife.

Two hours later MacLure came out from Annie's room and laid hold of Tammas, a heap of speechless misery by the kitchen fire, and carried him off to the barn, and spread some corn on the threshing-floor and thrust a flail into his hands.

"Noo we've tae begin, an' we 'ill no be dune for an' oor, and ye've tae lay on without stoppin' till a' come for ye; an' a'll shut the door tae haud in the noise, an' keep yir dog beside ye, for there maunna be a cheep about the hoose for Annie's sake."

"A'll dae onything ye want me, but if—if"——

"A'll come for ye, Tammas, gin there be danger; but what are ye feared for wi' the Queen's ain surgeon here?"

Fifty minutes did the flail rise and fall, save twice, when Tammas crept to the door and listened, the dog lifting his head and whining.

It seemed twelve hours instead of one when the door swung back, and MacLure filled the doorway, preceded by a great burst of light, for the sun had arisen on the snow.

His face was as tidings of great joy, and Elspeth told me that there was nothing like it to be seen that afternoon for glory, save the sun itself in the heavens.

"A' never saw the marrow o't, Tammas, an' a'll never see the like again; it's a' ower, man, without a hitch frae beginnin' tae end, and she's fa'in' asleep as fine as ye like."

"Dis he think Annie...'ill live?"

"Ye're a' richt noo; sit doon on the strae. A'll come back in a whilie, an' ye'ill see Annie juist for a meenut, but ye maunna say a word."

Marget took him in and let him kneel by Annie's bedside.

He said nothing then or afterwards, for speech came only once in his lifetime to Tammas, but Annie whispered, "Ma ain dear man."

When the doctor placed the precious bag beside Sir George in our solitary first next morning, he laid a cheque beside it and was about to leave.

"No, no," said the great man. "Mrs Macfadyen and I were on the gossip last night, and I know the whole story about you and your friend.

"You have some right to call me a coward, but I'll never let you count me a mean, miserly rascal"; and the cheque with Drumsheugh's painful writing fell in fifty pieces on the floor.

As the train began to move, a voice from the first called so that all in the station heard.

"Give's another shake of your hand, MacLure; I'm proud to have met you; you are an honour to our profession. Mind the antiseptic dressings."

It was market-day, but only Jamie Soutar and Hillocks had ventured down.

"Did ye hear yon, Hillocks? Hoo dae ye feel? A'll no deny a'm lifted."

Half-way to the Junction Hillocks had recovered, and began to grasp the situation.

"Tell's what he said. A' wud like to hae it exact for Drumsheugh."

"Thae's the eedentical words, an' they're true; there's no a man in Drumtochty disna ken that, except ane."

"An' wha's that, Jamie?"

"It's Weelum MacLure himsel'. Man, a've often girned that he sud fecht awa for us a', and maybe dee before he kent that he hed githered mair luve than ony man in the glen.

"'A'm prood tae hae met ye,' says Sir George, an' him the greatest doctor in the land. 'Yir an honour tae oor profession.'

"Hillocks, a' wudna hae missed it for twenty notes," said James Soutar, cynic-in-ordinary to the parish of Drumtochty.

XVII A. THE NEW BUITS

MY MAN SANDY.

J. B. SALMOND.

The scene of Mr Salmond's sketches is the town of Arbroath in E. Forfar. The author writes generally in Mid Sc. but he introduces a good many local words and pronunciations.

The Arbroath dialect exhibits at least two features found in

N.E. Sc.;

(1) f = m mostly in pronominal words, e.g. fa: = Mid Sc. ma:, mo: = "who" (interrogative); in our extract "what" and "when" are written with ordinary English spelling.

(2) O.E.  $\bar{a} + n$  turns up as  $\dot{i}$ ; thus O.E.  $st\bar{a}n$ ,  $\bar{a}n$ ,  $b\bar{a}n$ ,  $n\bar{a}n$  become steen, een, been, neen phonetically stin, in, bin, nin;

There's twa things Sandy Bowden's haen sin' ever I got acquant wi' him—an' that's no' the day nor yesterday—that's fairntickles an' cheepin' buits. I never kent Sandy bein' withoot a pair o' 'lastic-sided buits that gaed squakin' to the kirk like twa croakin' hens. I've seen the fowk sometimes turn roond-aboot in their seats, when Sandy cam' creakin' up the passage, as gin they thocht it was a brass-band comin' in. But Sandy appears to think there's something reverint an' Sabbath-like in cheepin' buits, an' he sticks to them, rissen be't or neen. I can tell ye, it's a blissin' there's no' mony mair like him, or we'd hae gey streets on Sabbath. The noise the maitter o' twenty chields like Sandy cud mak' wi' their buit soles wud fair deave a hale neeperhude.

Hooever, it wasna Sandy's buits I was to tell you aboot; it was my nain. But afore I say onything aboot them, I maun tell you aboot the fairntickles. As I was sayin', Sandy's terriple fairntickled aboot the neck an' the sides o' the nose, an' oor lest holiday made him a hankle waur than uswal. He's a gey prood mannie too, mind ye, although he winna haud wi't. But I can tell you it's no a bawbee-wirth o' hair oil that sairs Sandy i' the week. But that's nether here nor there.

XVII A. THE NEW BUITS

MY MAN SANDY.

J. B. SALMOND.

Mid Sc. stane, ane, bane, nane. neen is the only example of this localism in our text.

On the other hand, the Arbroath dialect agrees with Mid Sc. in rendering O.E.  $\bar{o}$  or Fr. u by  $\mathbf{y}$  or  $\phi$ , the ordinary spelling being u + consonant as in gude, or ui as in buits.

It rejects  $\mathbf{q}$  as a substitute for  $\mathbf{a}$ : as in  $\mathbf{a}$ :  $\mathbf{d} = old$ . The glottal catch is rare.

A curious unvoicing is heard in the suffixes age, ble, e.g.

manish, 'manis = "manage," terriple, 'terripl = terrible.

Lastly kn becomes tn (see Ph. § 21) as in our text tnet, tnet = "knit," knock, tnok = clock (timepiece).

Weel, Sandy had been speakin' aboot his fairntickles to Saunders Robb. Saunders, in my opinion, is juist a haiverin' auld ass. He's a hoddel-dochlin', hungert-lookin' wisgan o' a cratur; an', I'm shure, he has a mind to match his body. There's naethin' he disna ken aboot—an', the fac' is, he kens naething. He's aye i' the wey o' improvin' ither fowk's wark. There's naethin' Saunders disna think he could improve, excep' himsel' mibby. I canna be bathered wi' the chatterin', fykie, kyowowin' little wratch. He's aye throwin' oot suggestions an' hints aboot this and that. He's naething but a suggestion himsel', an' I'm shure I cud of'en throw him oot, wi' richt gude will.

Weel, he'd gien Sandy some cure for his fairntickles, an' Sandy, unbekent to me, had gotten something frae the druggie an' mixed it up wi' a guid three-bawbee's wirth o' cream that I had in the upstairs press. He had rubbit it on his face an' neck afore he gaed till his bed; but he wasna an 'oor beddit when he had to rise. An' sik a sicht as he was! His face an' neck were as yellow's mairyguilds, an' yallower; an' though I've taen washin' soda, an' pooder, an' the very scrubbin' brush till't, Sandy's gaen aboot yet juist like's he was noo oot o' the yallow fivver an' the jaundice thegither.

"Ye'll better speer at Saunders what'll tak' it aff," says I till him the ither mornin'.

"If I had a grip o' Saunders, I'll tak' mair than the fairntickles aff him," says he; an' faigs, mind you, there's nae sayin' but he may do't; he's a spunky carlie Sandy, when he's raised.

But, as far as that's concerned, I'm no' sorry at it, for it'll keep the cratur awa' frae the place. Sin' Sandy put that sofa into the washin'-hoose, him an' twa-three mair's never lain oot o't. Lyin' smokin' an' spittin' an' crackin' aboot life bein' a trauchle, an' so on! I tell you, if it had lested muckle langer, I'd gien them a bucket o' water sweesh aboot their lugs some day; that's juist as fac's ocht.

But I maun tell you aboot my mischanter wi' my noo buits. I'm sure it has fair delighted Sandy. He thinks he's gotten a hair i' my neck noo that'll haud him gaen a while. He was needin't, I can tell you. If ilky mairter he's made had been a hair in his neck, I'll swag, there wudna been room for mony fairntickles.

Weel, I gaed awa' to the kirk lest Sabbath—Sandy, of coorse, cudna get oot wi' his yallow face an' neck. He had a bran poultice on't to see if it wud do ony guid. I canna do wi' noo buits ava, till I've worn them a while. I pet them on mibby to rin an errand or twa, till they get the set o' my fit, an' syne I can manish them to the kirk. But I canna sit wi' noo buits; they're that uneasy. I got a noo pair lest Fursday, an' tried them on on Sabbath mornin'. But na, na! Altho' my auld anes were gey binkit, an' worn doon at the heels, I juist put them on gey hurried, an' aff I set to the kirk, leavin' Sandy to look efter the denner.

I was feelin' akinda queerish when I startit; but I thocht it was juist the hurry, an' that a breath o' the caller air wud mak' me a' richt. But faigs, mind ye, instead o' better I grew waur. My legs were like to double up aneth me, an' my knees knokit up again' ane anither like's they'd haen a pley aboot something. I fand a sweit brakin' oot a' ower me, an' I had to stop on the brae an' grip the railin's, or, it's juist as fac's ocht, I wudda been doon i' the road on the braid o' my back. I thocht I was in for a roraborialis, or some o' thae terriple diseases. Eh, I was feard I wud dee on the open street; I was that! Mysie Meldrum noticed me, an' she cam' rinnin' to speer what was ado.

"I've taen an awfu' dwam, Mysie," says I. "I think I'm genna dee. Ye micht juist sit doon on the railin's aside's till the fowk be by."

"I think we're aboot the henmost, Bawbie," says she. "We're gey late; but I'll bide aside you, lassie."

We sat for the maitter o' ten meenits, an' I got akinda roond, an' thocht I wud try an' get hame. Mistress Kenawee had putten on her tatties an' come oot for a dander a bittie, an' noticed the twa o's; so she cam' up, an' I got her airm an' Mysie's, an', though it was a gey job, we manished to get hame. An' gled I was when I saw Sandy's yallow nose again, I can tell ye, for I was shure syne I wud dee at hame amon' my nain bed-claes.

"The Lord preserve's a'!" says Mysie when she saw Sandy. "What i' the name o' peace has come ower you? I'll need to go! I've Leeb's bairns at hame, you see, an' this is the collery

"I think I'll rin for the docter, Bawbie," said Mistress Kenawee. She kent aboot Sandy's fairntickles afore, of coorse, an' Sandy's yallow fizog didna pet her aboot.

"Juist hover a blink," says I, "till I see if I come to mysel'."

I sat doon in the easy-chair, an' Sandy was in a terriple wey aboot me. He cudna speak a wird, but juist keepit sayin', "O dinna dee, Bawbie, dinna dee; your denner's ready!" He lookit me up an' doon, an' then booin' doon till he was for a' the world juist like a half-steekit knife he roars oot, "What's ado wi' your feet, Bawbie? Look at them! "Preserve's a', Bawbie," says she; "you have your buits on the wrang feet! Nae winder than your knees were knokin' thegither wi' thae auld worn-doon heels turned inside, an' your taes turned oot."

But I'll better no' say nae mair aboot it. I was that angry; and Mistress Kenawee, the bissam, was like to tnet hersel' lauchin'; but, I ashure ye, I never got sik a fleg in my life—an' sik simple dune too, mind ye.

XVIII A. HUGHIE'S INDIGNATION AT THE CONDUCT OF THE ABSCONDING ELDER

J. LOGIE ROBERTSON.

He's aff the kintra at a spang!

He's on the sea—they've tint him!

The warst o' weather wi' him gang!

Gude weather bide ahint him!

O for a rattlin' bauld Scots blast

To follow an' owretak' him—

To screed his sails, an' brak' his mast,

An' grup his ship, an' shak' him.

Yet wha was less possessed wi' guile,
Or prayed wi' readier unction?
He brocht the sweetness o' a smile
To every public function.
There wasna ane had half the grace
Or graciousness o' Peter;
There wasna ane in a' the place
For the millennium meeter.

He's fairly aff, he's stown awa',
A wolf that wore a fleece, man!
He's cheated justice, jinkit law,
An' lauch'd at the policeman.
The mission fund, the parish rate,
He had the haill control o't;
The very pennies i' the plate—
He's skirtit wi' the whole o't!

It's juist a year—it's no' a year,
I'm no' a hair the belder,
Since in the Session Chaumer here
We made him rulin' elder.

XIX A. THE WOOER

ROBBIE DOO.

JOSEPH LAING WAUGH.

I dinna ken hoo Davie got word ower to the lassies, but whenever we landed I saw at aince that I was expected. Marget left Davie staunin' at the ootside' door and took me richt ben to the kitchen, and there, sittin' on the settle was the biggest, fattest lass I had ever seen, wi' a face like a full harvest moon and a crap o' hair like the mane o' a chestnut pownie. Man, she was a stoot yin. Her claes seemed to be juist at the burst and the expectant kind o' wey she was sittin' on the edge o' the settle made her stootness a' the mair pronounced. I couldna help lookin' at her, and stood sayin' nocht, but gey dumbfoondered like. Then I heard the ooter door steek, and when I lookit roon Marget was off, and I was my leave-a-lane wi' the fat fremit lassie.

Efter a wee, when the tickin' o' the clock had got awfu' lood, I remarked that it was a nice nicht for the time o' year, and she said at aince that it was. Mind ye, we had never shaken hauns, or ocht o' that kind, and we micht easily hae dune sae, withoot pittin' oorsel's to muckle trouble, for mine were in my pooch, and hers were lyin' on her lap as if she never intended usin' them again in this warld. You see, I had never been to see the lassies before. I was a novice at the usual formalities, and wasna juist very sure o' what was expected o' me, so I made some ither remark aboot the tattie crap, and sat doon at the ither end o' the settle, and twirled my bonnet roon my finger.

Man, the nearer I was to her, the bigger she was, and the redder her face, and hair, and hauns seemed to be. Dod, my lass, thinks I to mysel', I've seen something like you made in a brickwark. I gied a bit lauch to mysel', as the thocht struck me, and lookit at her oot o' the tail o' my e'e. In a moment she lookit side-weys at me, and lauched, too, and says she, "There ye go noo. Ye've sterted."

"Sterted," says I, "what to dae?"

"H'm! what to dae—as if ye didna ken. My word, but you toon chiels are great boys," and she gaed a wee bit loll in the settle and giggled and jippled.

Dod, thinks I, she's gien me credit for bein' a bit o' a blade, and, to tell ye the truth, I admit it flattered my vanity, so I thocht it juist as weel to act up to the character, as yin micht say.

"Aye, you're richt," says I, "Thornhill chiels ken a thing or twae, I tell ye."

"Yes," says she, "but if you're a sample o' them, there's ae thing they dinna ken."

"What's that?" I asked, raither ta'en aback.

"Hoo to sit on a settle beside a lass," said she, and she lookit up to a side o' bacon hingin' on the ceilin' and giggled again.

Man, that took the stairch oot o' me, as it were, and I didna very weel ken what to say. I lookit at the lang length o' settle that was between us, and muttered something about meetin' her hauf-road. Govanenty! she cam' her hauf glibly, and I sidel'd ower mine, and there we sat cheek-for-jowl; but I keepit my bonnet in my haun.

Man, d'ye ken this, when I was close beside her she seemed sae big, and me sae wee, that I felt like a wee sparra cooryin' aside a corn stook.

Just for something to say, I asked her where she belanged to and she said, "Crawfordjohn." Then I spiert if she had ever been in Thornhill, and she said "Yes," that she had gaen through it aince in a cairt.

"Where were they cairtin' ye to?" I asked without lauchin'.

"Oh," says she, "they werena cairtin' me onywhere. I was gaun to Scaurbrig Kirk."

"Oh, then," says I, "ye'll be a Cameronian."

"Not at all," says she, "I'm a dairywoman."

So I let it staun at that, and put my bonnet doon on the flaer.

"That's the thing," says she, and she hotched hersel' up; "ye're the better o' baith hauns free when ye come to see the lassies."

Man, I kenned then that I was in a tichtish place, and I began to wonder hoo in the name o' guidness I was to get oot o't. I saw at aince that it was policy to keep sweet wi' her, so, to appear mair at hame and taen wi' my quarters, I put my airm on the back o' the settle. Dod, she was quick o' the uptak', for she sune leaned back till her shooder touched my airm, and then she turned her face to mine, and, in the firelicht, man, d'ye ken it was juist like a sunset.

Hoo I did curse Davie Gracie, and hoo I wished he wad come in, or that the ceilin' wad fa', or the hoose tak' on fire, or something desperate wad tak' place to save me. Nocht happened tho', and I juist sat quate, but a' the time I felt she was gettin' mair and mair cooriet into me, and my airm, wi' her great wecht on't, was beginnin' to sleep, and to feel terribly jaggy weys and prickly. Mair than that, I had the uncomfortable feelin' that she was makin' things gang, what yin micht ca', "swift a wee."

At last, efter a lang silence, she spiert at me if I kenned a nice piece o' poetry ca'd "The Pangs o' Love."

"No," says I, "I never heard o't, but the fact is love's no muckle in my line."

"Hoo's that?" she asked quite surprised.

I didna very weel ken what to say. Then a happy thocht struck me. It cam' like an inspiration—a' in a flash, as it were —and I saw my wey oot o't. Efter hurridly thinkin' ower maitters, says I, "Weel, I daursay I needna say that love's no' in my line, for it is. Nocht wad gie me greater pleesure than to hae a nice lassie like you for a sweethert, and the prospect before me o' a happy mairrit life, but that can never be," and I pou'd my hair doon aboot my een and shook my heid frae side to side. "Of coorse, you, bein' a stranger in this locality, will no' ken that a' my family's peculiar—not only peculiar but dangerous."

"In what wey?" she asked.

WEE MACGREEGOR.

J. J. Bell.

The dialect of Wee Macgreegor is the Scotch of the Glasgow working man. Its most marked phonetic feature is the use of the glottal catch (see Ph. § 44) before the consonants t, p, k, and sometimes n. In rapid speech, these consonants are frequently replaced by the glottal catch whether in medial or final position, the only limit to the use of the substitute being intelligibility.

Lizzie moistened her finger and thumb, twirled the end of a thread, and inserted it into the eye of a needle ere she replied. "Whit kin' o' a penter? Is't pictur's ye're wantin' to pent, Macgreegor?"

"Naw!" said her son with great scorn. "I'm gaun to ha'e a big pot o' pent an' a big brush, an' I'm gaun to staun' on a ladder, an' pent wi' white pent, an' rid pent, an' bew pent, an'——"

"Aw, ye're gaun to be a hoose-penter, Macgreegor," said his father.

"Ay. But I'm gaun to pent shopes tae. An' I'm gaun to ha'e big dauds of potty fur stickin' in holes. I like potty. Here a bit!" And Macgregor produced from his trouser pocket a lump of the greyish, plastic substance.

"Feech!" exclaimed Lizzie in disgust. "Whaur got ye that?

Yell jist file yer claes wi' the nesty stuff."

"Wullie Thomson whiles gets potty frae his Paw. Wullie's Paw's a jiner."

"I thocht you an' Wullie had cast oot," said John. "Ha'e ye been makin' freens wi' him again?"

&quot;When I'm a man," observed Macgregor, leaning against the knees of his father, who was enjoying an evening pipe before the kitchen fire, "when I'm a man, I'm gaun to be a penter"

In the text, the symbol for the glottal catch, viz. ?, is used only when the consonant is omitted.

Note also in this dialect (1) or for ar as horf = "half," (2) bew, bjur, "blue," (3) the unrounding of of and y to e and r as in dae, der, "do," jist, d3ist, "just," and of u before a back consonant to A as tuk, tAk, "took."

"Naw. But I seen him wi' the potty, an' I askit him for a daud."

"It wis rale nice o' the laddie to gi'e ye a bit," remarked Lizzie, looking up from her seam.

"He didna gi'e it, Maw. I tuk it frae him."

"Aw, Macgreegor!" said Lizzie, shaking her head reproachfully.

"Wullie's bigger nor me, Maw."

"Ay; but he's gey wake i' the legs."

"I hut him, an' he tummilt; an' I jist tuk hauf his potty," said Macgregor unconcernedly.

John was about to laugh, when he caught his wife's eye.

"An' hoo wud ye like," she said addressing her son, "if yer Paw gi'ed ye potty, an' anither laddie cam' an'——"

"Paw hasna ony potty."

John sniggered behind his hand.

"Weel," said Lizzie, casting her husband a severe look, and turning again to her son, "hoo wud ye like if yer Paw gi'ed ye taiblet, an' anither laddie cam' an' tuk hauf o' 't awa'?"

"I wud gi'e him yin on the neb twicet!" said Macgregor boldly, going over to the window to see the lamps being lighted.

"But if he hut ye an' knocked ye doon?"

"I wudna let him. Paw hasna gi'ed me taiblet fur a lang while," said the boy over his shoulder.

"Macgreegor," said his mother solemnly, "I'm thinkin' ye're gettin' waur every day."

"Aw, the wean's fine, Lizzie," interposed John, softly.

"Haud yer tongue, John," retorted Lizzie quietly. "The wean's no fine! An' instead o' lauchin' at him an' makin' a pet o' him, ye ocht to be gi'ein' him a guid skelpin'."

"I've never skelpit a wean yet, an'---"

"It's easy seen ye've never skelpit Macgregor, John. Ye jist let him get his ain wey, an' he dis'na ken when he's misbehavin' hissel'. Weans needs to be checkit whiles."

"Aweel, whit dae ye want me to dae, Lizzie?"

"I want ye to punish Macgreegor for hittin' that puir speldron o' a laddie, Wullie Thomson, an' stealing his potty," said Lizzie in an undertone.

"Tak' it aff this meenit!" cried Lizzie. "John, ye micht think shame o' yersel' to sit there lauchin' at his nesty tricks! D'ye no' mind hoo Mrs. Cochrane's man tell't us his neb wis aye bew wi' him pittin' potty on't when he wis a wean?...Tak' it aff, Macgreegor, or I'll sort ye!"

Macgregor, but little abashed, returned to the window, removed the offending plaster, rolled it into a ball, and proceeded to squeeze it through his fingers with undisguised relish.

"John," whispered Lizzie, "dae whit I tell't ye."

"I canna," returned John miserably. "It micht wauken wee Jeannie," he added a little hopefully.

"I didna exac'ly say ye wis to—to wheep the laddie," said his wife, "but ye maun gi'e him a lesson he'll no' furget. I'm no' gaun to ha'e him boastin' an' ill-usin' ither weans. D'ye see?"

"Maybe ye're richt, Lizzie. But it's a hard thing ye're askin'. Wud it no' dae to gi'e him hauf the taiblet to tak' to Wullie Thomson?"

"Na, na," said Lizzie firmly. "Here, Macgreegor," she called to her son. "Yer Paw wants to speak to ye....Noo, John!"

With a huge sigh, John rose, went to the wee drawer in the dresser, and returned with the poke of "taiblet."

"Paw," said Macgreegor absently, "I like taiblet better nor potty."

The father glanced appealingly at the mother, but she was adamant. She had resumed her needle, but was keeping an eye on the twain.

"Macgreegor," said John with a painful effort, "whit wey did ye strike puir Wullie Thomson?"

"I wantit a wee daud o' potty."

"Ay," murmured John, and paused for a moment. "Are ye sorry ye hut him?"

"Naw. I got the potty, Paw."

"But ye sud be sorry, Macgreegor."

"Whit wey, Paw?"

"Wis he greetin'?"

"Ay; wis he!"

John looked across at Lizzie for aid, but she was sewing diligently.

"Weel," he said, haltingly, "yer Maw an' me's no' vera pleased wi' whit ye done to Wullie Thomson. It wisna fair to strike the likes o' him."

Macgregor's visage began to assume an anxious expression.

"Yer Maw," continued John, "yer Maw says ye canna-"

"John!" murmured Lizzie, warningly.

"Yer Maw and me thinks ye canna get ony taiblet the morn." Macgregor's under lip shot out quivering.

"An'—ye've got to gi'e the taiblet to Wullie Thomson, an' gi'e him back his potty, furbye, an'—an'—oh, Lizzie, I canna say ony mair!"

It took a few seconds for the dire truth to dawn upon Macgregor, but when it did, a low wail issued from him, and the tears began to flow.

John was about to lift him on to his knee, but Lizzie interposed.

"Pit on yer bunnet, Macgregor," she said quietly, "an' tak' the taiblet an' potty roon' to Wullie Thomson. It's no' dark yet," she added, glancing out of the window.

"I'm no' wantin' to gi'e the taiblet to Wullie Thomson," sobbed the luckless youngster.

"Ye've jist to dae whit ye're tell't," returned his mother calmly, but not unkindly. "Ye're no' to be a tawpy noo," she went on, endeavouring to dry his eyes. "Ye're to be a man. Whit wud Wullie Thomson think if he seen ye greetin'? Eh, Macgreegor?"

Lizzie had struck the right note. The sobs ceased, though the breath still came gustily. He mopped the tears with his cap, and replaced it on his head.

"Am I to gi'e him a' the taiblet an' the potty furbye?" he inquired plaintively.

"Ay. An ye're to say ye're sorry fur hurtin' him. He's no' a fine, strong laddie like yersel', Macgreegor—mind that! Yer Paw an' me wudna like if ye wis wake i' the legs like puir Wullie. Noo, jist gang roon' an' gi'e him the taiblet an' his potty, an' see if ye canna mak' freen's wi' him again."

"I'm no' wantin' to be freen's," said Macgregor, rebelliously.

"I'm no' wantin' to gang."

"Are ye feart fur Wullie Thomson?" asked Lizzie. Another clever stroke!

"I'm no' feart! I'll gang!"

"Fine, man!" cried John, who had been listening in gloomy silence. "I kent ye wisna feart."

Macgregor began to feel himself rather a hero. In dignified silence he took the poke of "taiblet," which his mother had tied securely with a piece of tape from her work-bag, and departed on his errand.

John looked anxiously to Lizzie.

She sat down to her seam again, but her fingers were less deft than usual. They both eyed the clock frequently.

"He sudna be mair nor five meenits," remarked John. "I doot we wis ower hard on the wean, wumman."

Lizzie made no response, and ten minutes dragged slowly past.

"Did ye expec' he wud dae't?" asked John presently.

"Och, ay!" she answered with affected carelessness.

"I wisht I had went wi' him," said John.

Lizzie put in half-a-dozen stitches in silence. Then she said—"Ye micht gang roon an' see whit's keepin' him, John."

"I'll dae that, Lizzie....Dae ye think I micht buy him a bit taiblet when I'm ootbye?" He asked the question diffidently.

His wife looked up from her seam.

"If ye like, John," she said, gently. "I'm thinkin' the laddie's had his lesson noo. He's unco prood fur to be a wean, is he no'?"

"Ay," said John. "There's no mony like Macgreegor." He nodded to his wife, and went out.

About twenty minutes later father and son re-entered the house together. Both were beaming.

"I cudna get Macgreegor awa' frae Wullie Thomson, Lizzie," said John, smiling.

"Weel, weel," said his wife, looking pleased. "An' did ye gi'e Wullie the taiblet an' the potty, Macgreegor?"

"Ay, Maw."

Whereupon his mother caught and cuddled him. "Gi'e him a bit taiblet, John," she said.

John did so right gladly and generously, and Macgregor crumped away to his heart's content.

"An' whit kep' ye waitin' at Wullie's a' this time?" inquired Lizzie, pleasantly.

"He gi'ed me a big daud o' potty, Maw," said the boy, producing a lump the size of an orange.

"Oh!" exclaimed Lizzie, trying not to look annoyed.

"An' him an' me ett the taiblet," added Macgregor.

This extract is an example of Galloway and Nithsdale speech which is sharply distinguished from that of East Dumfries. Gaelic lingered up till the beginning of the 18th century in Sth. Ayrshire and Galloway, but at a very early date "Inglis" was no doubt spoken in the boroughs like Kirkcudbright and Dumfries. Galloway Scots is distinctly of the Lothian type. Among middle-aged speakers in the country  $\mathbf{y}$  and  $\mathbf{\phi}$  are still rounded vowels, though with younger people and in the towns they are tending towards  $\mathbf{r}$  and  $\mathbf{e}$ .  $\mathbf{j}$  occurs very commonly after a back consonant such as  $\mathbf{k}$  or  $\mathbf{g}$  followed by a front vowel, e.g.  $\mathbf{k}\mathbf{j}\mathbf{e}\mathbf{n}$ ,  $\mathbf{g}\mathbf{j}\mathbf{e}\mathbf{d}$ ,  $k\mathbf{e}\mathbf{n}$ , gaed, "know," "went." a nasal, there is a distinct lengthening of the nasal as in kain: = kind. Q: never takes the place of a: as in so many districts of Mid Sc. unless among incomers from Ayrshire and their children. The glottal catch (see Ph. § 44) so common in N. Ayr is also unknown among genuine Galloway speakers. A is very common as a substitute for I or I.

Dr Trotter's sketches are very racy and real specimens of Scottish Vernacular. Those who know the Galloway of last century can testify that they are also true to the old world life of the ancient province.

"Weel!" says Doctor Agnew, "she haes been 'far waur' tae my knowledge for fifty-seven year, sae ye'll no be dishearten't if she keeps 'far waur' for a dizzen year tae come. A suppose she's as badly as ever wi' the clocher an' the floam."

It wus an awfu' relief; an' he cam hame as pleas't as if he had fun a groat; an' the next time aul' Alick cam for him, he speer't if she wusna "far waur"; an' whun he begood aboot the aul' black trousers, he tell't him it wudna be lang or she wus gaun aboot the Ferry, an' beggin' for an aul' black goon tae mak her decent for Alick's burial. It wus months efter afore Alick cam back for him again.

Yae nicht aboot fowr year efter this, Alick wus in maskin' some tea for her, an' quo she—"Dinna lea' me the nicht, Alick! A'm far waur nor ever A wus; A'm horridly chokit wi' the clocher an' the floam." "Deevil choke ye!" quo Alick, "ye can choke awa' there; ye'e been far waur this fifty year; maybe ye think A'm as big a fule as the doctor"; an' he gaed aff tae his bed an' left her.

In the mornin' she wus fun stark deid.

"Confoond her!" says Alick, "could she no 'a' tell't folk! she wus aye cryin' 'far waur!' but wha ever thocht o' heedin' her?"

In coorse o' time Alick dee't too, an' there wus twunty-three coats fun in the hoose, an' seeventy-nine black trousers, a' etten useless wi' the moths; an' the queer pairt o't wus—yt whun Bella dee't he had a new black suit made for the burial, an' made nae use o' a' he had beggit for't.

ECHOES FROM KLINGRAHOOL.

Junda (J. S. Angus).

These verses are written in the Shetland dialect which is Mid Scots grafted upon an original Scandinavian stock. The Orkney and Shetland Islands came under the Scottish Crown in 1469 in pledge for the dowry of Margaret of Denmark on her marriage with King James III. The Scottish governors with their following of officials, retainers and traders, introduced the language of the Lowlands so that the islanders gradually abandoned their old Scanic tongue. According to the late Dr Jakobsen of Copenhagen University, there are still about 10,000 words of Scandinavian origin in the modern dialect. The pronunciation given in this extract is that of Mr Brown, Schoolmaster of John o' Groats, Caithness, who is a native of Fetlar and has had a phonetic training.

ECHOES FROM KLINGRAHOOL.

Junda (J. S. Angus).

Among the phonetic points of interest in this dialect are:

(1) O.E.  $\bar{o}$ , Scan.  $\bar{o}$ , Fr. u become  $\mathbf{y}$  or  $\phi$ , e.g. shörely, pör, cöts, shö.

(2) O.E.  $\bar{a} + n = i$  as in part of N.E., e.g. stane, lane = stin, lin.

(3) Diphthong ou in "through, thought, brought," trou, tout, brout.

(4) 9 and 8 are very widely rendered by t and d (generally advanced), e.g. da = the, tinkin = thinking.

For many years now, fishermen from the N.E. have frequented these islands and many have even settled there. This will account for the occasional appearance of a N.E. pronunciation, e.g. fu, fu ="how," in our poem.

XXIV A. SOUTHERN SCOTTISH

An extract from the story of Ruth (Ch. i) in the Teviotdale dialect of 50 years ago as given by Sir James A. H. Murray in The Dialect of the Southern Counties of Scotland (1873), pp. 242, 244.

The Extract shows the following points of difference between Sth. Sc. and Mid Sc.

An' thay cryed oot lood, an' gràt ageane, an' Orpah kysst hyr guid-muther, but Ruith hang bey'er. An' schui said, "Sey, (y)eir guid-syster's geane away heame tui her ayn fuok, an' tui her gôds; geae 'way yuw tui, æfter (y)eir guid-syster." An' Ruith said, "O dynna treit on-us tui leeve-(y)e, or tui gàng bàk fræ cumein æfter (y)e, for quhayr-ever (y)ee gàng, aa'l gàng, an' quhayr (y)ee beyde, aa'l beyde, yoor fuok'll bey maa fuok, an' yoor Gôd maa Gôd. Quhayr (y)ee dey, aa'l dey, an' bey laid î the greave theare aseyde-(y)e: the Loard dui-seae an mayr tui mey, yf owcht but death cum atwein yuw an' mey!" Quhan schui saa, ăt schui was sæt ònna gangein wui'r, schui gæ ower speikein tyll 'er.

I B. SIR PATRICK SPENS<sup>1</sup>

ANONYMOUS.

The king sits in Dunfermline town, Drinking the bluid-red wine;

"O whare will I get a skeely skipper, To sail this new ship of mine?"

O up and spake an eldern knight, Sat on the king's right knee,

"Sir Patrick Spens is the best sailor That ever sailed the sea."

Our king has written a braid letter And sealed it with his hand, And sent it to Sir Patrick Spens, Was walking on the strand.

"To Noroway, to Noroway,
To Noroway o'er the faem;
The king's daughter of Noroway,
"Tis thou maun bring her hame."

The first word that Sir Patrick read,
Sae loud loud laughed he;
The neist word that Sir Patrick read,
The tear blinded his e'e.

"O wha is this has done this deed,
And tauld the king o' me;
To send us out, at this time of the year,
To sail upon the sea?

"Be it wind, be it weet, be it hail, be it sleet, Our ship must sail the faem; The king's daughter of Noroway, "Tis we must fetch her hame."

&lt;sup>1</sup> The versions of I, II, III, X are taken from George Eyre-Todd's Scottish Ballad Poetry and Ancient Scottish Ballads.

And naebody kens that he lies there
But his hawk, his hound, and his lady fair.

"His hound is to the hunting gane, His hawk to fetch the wild-fowl hame; His lady's ta'en another mate, Sae we may mak' our dinner sweet.

"Ye'll sit on his white hause-bane, And I'll pike out his bonnie blue een. Wi' ae lock o' his gowden hair We'll theek our nest when it grows bare.

"Mony a ane for him mak's mane, But nane sall ken where he is gane. O'er his white banes, when they are bare, The wind sall blaw for evermair."

Late at e'en, drinking the wine,
And ere they paid the lawing,
They set a combat them between
To fight it in the dawing.

"O stay at hame, my noble lord!
O stay at hame, my marrow!
My cruel brother will you betray
On the dowie houms o' Yarrow."

"O fare ye weel, my lady gay!
O fare ye weel, my Sarah!
For I maun gae, though I ne'er return,
Frae the dowie banks o' Yarrow."

She kissed his cheek, she kaimed his hair, As oft she had done before, O; She belted him wi' his noble brand, And he's away to Yarrow.

As he gaed up the Tennies bank,
I wat he gaed wi' sorrow,
Till down in a den he spied nine armed men,
On the dowie houms o' Yarrow.

"O come ye here to part your land, The bonnie forest thorough? Or come ye here to wield your brand, On the dowie houms o' Yarrow?"

"I come not here to part my land, And neither to beg nor borrow; I come to wield my noble brand On the bonnie banks o' Yarrow.

"If I see all, ye're nine to ane,
And that's an unequal marrow;
Yet will I fight while lasts my brand,
On the bonnie banks o' Yarrow."

Maxwellton braes are bonnie,

Her neck is like the swan,
Her face it is the fairest
That e'er the sun shone on—

And dark blue is her e'e;
And for bonnie Annie Laurie

Wha wadna be in love

And spier'd what was't they ca'd her;
Right scornfully she answered him,
"Begone, you hallan shaker,
Jog on your gate, ye bladder scate,
My name is Maggie Lauder."

"Maggie," quo' he, "and by my bags
I'm fidgin' fain to see thee;
Sit down by me, my bonnie bird,
In troth I winna steer thee:
For I'm a piper to my trade,
My name is Rob the Ranter;
The lasses loup as they were daft,
When I blaw up my chanter."

Then to his bags he flew wi' speed,

And lay your disputes all aside,
What signifies't for folks to chide
For what was done before them:
Let Whig and Tory all agree,
Whig and Tory, Whig and Tory,
Whig and Tory all agree,
To drop their Whig-mig-morum;
Let Whig and Tory all agree
To spend the night wi' mirth and glee,
And cheerful sing alang wi' me

X B. THE LAIRD O' COCKPEN

LADY NAIRNE (1766-1845).

The Laird o' Cockpen, he's proud and he's great, His mind is ta'en up wi' things o' the state; He wanted a wife his braw house to keep, But favour wi' wooin' was fashious to seek.

Doun by the dyke-side a lady did dwell, At his table heid he thocht she'd look well; M°Cleish's ae dochter o' Claverseha' Lea, A pennyless lass wi' a lang pedigree.

His wig was weel-pouthered, as gude as when new, His waistcoat was white, his coat it was blue; He put on a ring, a sword, and cocked hat, And wha could refuse the Laird wi' a' that?

He took the grey mare and rade cannily, And rapped at the yett o' Claverseha' Lea. "Gae tell Mistress Jean to come speedily ben: She's wanted to speak wi' the Laird o' Cockpen."

Mistress Jean, she was makin' the elderflower wine: "And what brings the Laird here at sic a like time?' She put off her apron and on her silk goun, Her mutch wi' red ribbons, and gaed awa' doun.

And when she cam' ben, he bowit fu' low; And what was his errand, he soon let her know. Amazed was the Laird when the lady said, Na, And wi' a laigh curtsie she turned awa'.

Dumfoundered was he, but nae sigh did he gie; He mounted his mare and rade cannily, And aften he thocht as he gaed through the glen, "She was daft to refuse the Laird o' Cockpen!"

XIB. THE LAND O' THE LEAL

LADY NAIRNE.

I'm wearin' awa', John, Like snaw-wreaths in thaw, John, I'm wearin' awa'

To the land o' the leal.

There's nae sorrow there, John;

There's neither cauld nor care, John;

The day is aye fair

In the land o' the leal.

Our bonnie bairn's there, John; She was baith gude and fair, John; And oh! we grudged her sair

To the land o' the leal.

But sorrow's sel' wears past, John,
And joy's a-coming fast, John,
The joy that's aye to last
In the land o' the leal.

Sae dear that joy was bought, John, Sae free the battle fought, John, That sinfu' man e'er brought

To the land o' the leal.
Oh! dry your glistening e'e, John,
My soul langs to be free, John,
And angels beckon me

To the land o' the leal.

Oh! haud ye leal and true, John,
Your day it's wearin' through, John,
And I'll welcome you

To the land o' the leal.

Now fare-ye-weel, my ain John,
This warld's cares are vain, John,
We'll meet, and we'll be fain
In the land o' the leal.

XII B. THE FLOWERS OF THE FOREST

JEAN ELLIOT (1727-1805).

I've heard the lilting at our yowe-milking,
Lasses a-lilting, before the dawn of day;
But now they are moaning, on ilka green loaning;
The Flowers of the Forest are a' wede away.

At buchts, in the morning, nae blithe lads are scorning, The lasses are lanely and dowie and wae;

Nae daffin, nae gabbin', but sighing and sabbing,

Ilk ane lifts her leglin, and hies her away.

In hairst, at the shearing, nae youths now are jeering,
The bandsters are lyart, and runkled, and gray;
At fair or at preaching, nae wooing, nae fleeching—
The Flowers of the Forest are a' wede away.

At e'en, in the gloaming, nae swankies are roaming, 'Bout stacks wi' the lasses at bogle to play;
But ilk ane sits drearie, lamenting her dearie—
The Flowers of the Forest are a' wede away.

Dool and wae for the order sent our lads to the Border!

The English, for ance, by guile wan the day;

The Flowers of the Forest, that fought aye the foremost,

The prime of our land, lie cauld in the clay.

We'll hear nae mair lilting at our yowe-milking,
Women and bairns are heartless and wae;
Sighing and moaning on ilka green loaning—
The Flowers of the Forest are a' wede away.

XIII B. AULD ROBIN GRAY

LADY ANNE BARNARD (1750-1825).

When the sheep are in the fauld, when the kye's come hame, And a' the weary warld to rest are gane,

The waes o' my heart fa' in showers frae my ee,

Unkent by my guidman, wha sleeps sound by me.

Young Jamie lo'ed me weel, and sought me for his bride, But saving ae crown-piece he had naething beside; To make the crown a pound my Jamie gaed to sea, And the crown and the pound—they were baith for me.

He hadna been gane a twelvemonth and a day,
When my father broke his arm and the cow was stown away;
My mither she fell sick—my Jamie was at sea,
And auld Robin Gray came a-courting me.

My father couldna wark—my mother couldna spin—I toiled day and night, but their bread I couldna win; Auld Rob maintained them baith, and wi tears in his ee, Said: "Jeanie, O for their sakes, will ye no marry me?"

My heart it said na, and I looked for Jamie back, But hard blew the winds, and his ship was a wrack, His ship was a wrack—why didna Jamie dee, Or why am I spared to cry wae is me?

My father urged me sair—my mither didna speak,
But she looked in my face till my heart was like to break;
They gied him my hand—my heart was in the sea—
And so Robin Gray he was guidman to me.

I hadna been his wife a week but only four, When, mournfu' as I sat on the stane at my door, I saw my Jamie's ghaist, for I couldna think it he, Till he said: "I'm come hame, love, to marry thee!"

XVI B. A MAN'S A MAN FOR A' THAT

BURNS.

Is there, for honest poverty,

That hings his head, an' a' that?

The coward slave, we pass him by—

We dare be poor for a' that!

For a' that, an' a' that,

Our toil's obscure, and a' that,

The rank is but the guinea's stamp,

The man's the gowd for a' that.

What though on hamely fare we dine,
Wear hoddin grey, an' a' that?
Gie fools their silks, and knaves their wine—
A man's a man for a' that!
For a' that, and a' that,
Their tinsel show, an' a' that;
The honest man, tho' e'er sae poor,
Is king o' men for a' that!

Ye see yon birkie, ca'd "a lord,"

Wha struts, and stares, an' a' that;
Tho' hundreds worship at his word,
He's but a cuif for a' that:
For a' that, and a' that,
His ribband, star, and a' that,
The man of independent mind,
He looks and laughs at a' that!

XVII B. DUNCAN GRAY

BURNS.

Duncan Gray cam here to woo,

(Ha, ha, the wooing o't!)

On blithe Yule night when we were fou,

(Ha, ha, the wooing o't!)
Maggie coost her head fu' high,
Looked asklent and unco skeigh,

Gart poor Duncan stand abeigh—Ha, ha, the wooing o't!

Duncan fleech'd and Duncan pray'd,

(Ha, ha, the wooing o't!) Meg was deaf as Ailsa Craig,

(Ha, ha, the wooing o't!)
Duncan sigh'd baith out and in,
Grat his een baith bleer't an' blin',
Spak' o' lowpin o'er a linn—

Ha, ha, the wooing o't!

Time and chance are but a tide, (Ha, ha, the wooing o't!)

Slighted love is sair to bide,
(Ha, ha, the wooing o't!)
"Shall I, like a fool," quoth he,
"For a haughty hizzie die?

She may gae—to France for me!"— Ha, ha, the wooing o't!

How it comes, let doctors tell,

(Ha, ha, the wooing o't!)
Meg grew sick, as he grew hale,

(Ha, ha, the wooing o't!)
Something in her bosom wrings,
For relief a sigh she brings;

And O, her een they spak sic things!—
Ha, ha, the wooing o't!

Duncan was a lad o' grace,

(Ha, ha, the wooing o't!)
Maggie's was a piteous case,

(Ha, ha, the wooing o't!)
Duncan could na be her death,
Swelling pity smoor'd his wrath;
Now they're crouse and canty baith—

Ha, ha, the wooing o't!

Robin was a rovin boy,
A rantin, rovin, rantin rovin,
Robin was a rovin boy,
Rantin, rovin Robin.

There was a lad was born in Kyle,
But whatna day o' whatna style,
I doubt it's hardly worth the while
To be sae nice wi' Robin.

Our monarch's hindmost year but ane
Was five-and-twenty days begun,
'Twas then a blast o' Janwar' win'
Blew hansel in on Robin.

The gossip keekit in his loof,

Quo' scho:—wha lives will see the proof,

This waly boy will be nae coof:

I think we'll ca' him Robin.

He'll hae misfortunes great and sma',
But aye a heart aboon them a';
He'll be a credit till us a',
We'll a' be proud o' Robin!

But sure as three times three mak' nine,
I see by ilka score and line,
This chap will dearly like our kin',
So leeze me on thee, Robin.

Of a' the airts the wind can blaw
I dearly like the west,
For there the bonie lassie lives,
The lassie I loe best.
There's wild woods grow, and rivers row,
And monie a hill between,
But day and night my fancy's flight
Is ever wi' my Jean.

II.

I see her in the dewy flowers—
I see her sweet and fair.

I hear her in the tunefu' birds—
I hear her charm the air.

By fountain, shaw, or green,

There's not a bonie bird that sings,

A wee bird cam' to our ha' door,

Oh! when I heard the bonnie, bonnie bird,

The tears cam' drappin' rarely,

I took my bonnet aff my head,

For weel I lo'ed Prince Charlie!

Quoth I, "My bird, my bonnie, bonnie bird,
Is that a sang ye borrow;
Or is't some words ye've learnt by heart,
Or a lilt o' dool an' sorrow?"
"Oh! no, no, no," the wee bird sang,
"I've flown sin' mornin' early;
But sic a day o' wind an' rain—
Oh! wae's me for Prince Charlie!

He roves a lanely stranger,
On ilka hand he's press'd by want,
On ilka side is danger.

XXIII B. WHEN THE KYE COMES HAME

JAMES HOGG (1770-1835).

Chorus.

When the kye comes hame, When the kye comes hame, 'Tween the gloamin and the mirk When the kye comes hame.

Come all ye jolly shepherds
That whistle through the glen,
I'll tell ye of a secret
That courtiers dinna ken;
What is the greatest bliss
That the tongue o' man can name?
'Tis to woo a bonnie lassie
When the kye comes hame.

'Tis not beneath the coronet,
Nor canopy of state;
'Tis not on couch of velvet,
Nor arbour of the great—
'Tis beneath the spreadin' birk,
In the glen without the name,
Wi' a bonnie, bonnie lassie,
When the kye comes hame.

There the blackbird bigs his nest
For the mate he loe's to see,
And on the topmost bough,
Oh, a happy bird is he!
Then he pours his meltin' ditty,
And love is a' the theme,
And he'll woo his bonnie lassie
When the kye comes hame.

XXIV B. MY LOVE SHE'S BUT A LASSIE YET

James Hogg (1770-1835).

My love she's but a lassie yet,
A lightsome lovely lassie yet;
It scarce wad do
To sit an' woo
Down by the stream sae glassy yet.
But there's a braw time comin' yet,
When we may gang a-roamin' yet,
An' hint wi' glee
O' joys to be,
When fa's the modest gloamin' yet.

She's neither proud nor saucy yet,
She's neither plump nor gaucy yet;
But just a jinkin',
Bonnie blinkin',
Hilty-skilty lassie yet.
But O her artless smile's mair sweet
Than hinny or than marmalete;
An' right or wrang,
Ere it be lang,
I'll bring her to a parley yet.

I'm jealous o' what blesses her,
The very breeze that kisses her.
The flowery beds
On which she treads,
Though wae for ane that misses her.
Then O to meet my lassie yet,
Up in yon glen sae grassy yet;
For all I see
Are nought to me
Save her that's but a lassie yet!

XXV B. THERE'S NAE LUCK ABOUT THE HOUSE

Anonymous.

Chorus.

There's nae luck about the house,
There's nae luck ava;
There's little pleasure in the house
When our gudeman's awa'.

And are ye sure the news is true?
And are ye sure he's weel?
Is this a time to think o' wark?
Ye jauds, fling by your wheel.
Is this a time to think o' wark,
When Colin's at the door?
Rax me my cloak! I'll to the quay

And see him come ashore.

Rise up and mak a clean fireside,
Put on the muckle pot;
Gie little Kate her cotton gown,
And Jock his Sunday coat;
And mak their shoon as black as slaes,
Their hose as white as snaw;
It's a' to please my ain gudeman,
For he's been lang awa'.

There's twa fat hens upon the bauk,

Been fed this month and mair;

Mak haste and thraw their necks about,

That Colin weel may fare;

And mak the table neat and clean,

Let ev'ry thing look braw;

For wha can tell how Colin fared

When he was far awa'?

O gie me down my bigonet,
My bishop satin gown,
For I maun tell the bailie's wife
That Colin's come to town.
My Sunday's shoon they maun gae on,
My hose o' pearlin blue;
'Tis a' to please my ain gudeman,
For he's baith leal and true.

Sae true his words, sae smooth his speech,
His breath's like caller air!
His very foot has music in't
As he comes up the stair.
And will I see his face again?
And will I hear him speak?
I'm downright dizzy wi' the thought—
In troth, I'm like to greet.

<sup>1</sup>The cauld blasts o' the winter wind,
That thrilled through my heart,
They're a' blawn by; I hae him safe,
Till death we'll never part.
But what puts parting in my head?
It may be far awa';
The present moment is our ain,
The neist we never saw.

<sup>2</sup>If Colin's weel, and weel content,
I hae nae mair to crave;
And gin I live to keep him sae,
I'm blest aboon the lave;
And will I see his face again,
And will I hear him speak?
I'm downright dizzy wi' the thought—
In troth, I'm like to greet.

XXVI B. GLOOMY WINTER'S NOW AWA'

ROBERT TANNAHILL (1774-1810).

Gloomy winter's now awa',
Saft the westlan' breezes blaw,
'Mang the birks o' Staneley shaw
The mavis sings fu' cheerie, O;
Sweet the crawflower's early bell
Decks Gleniffer's dewy dell,
Blooming like thy bonnie sel',
My young, my artless dearie, O.
Come, my lassie, let us stray
O'er Glenkilloch's sunny brae,
Blythely spend the gowden day
'Midst joys that never weary, O.

Tow'ring o'er the Newton wuds, Lav'rocks fan the snaw-white cluds, Siller saughs, wi' downy buds,

Adorn the banks sae briery, O; Round the silvan fairy nooks Feathery breckans fringe the rocks, 'Neath the brae the burnie jouks,

And ilka thing is cheerie, O; Trees may bud, and birds may sing, Flow'rs may bloom, and verdure spring. Joy to me they canna bring,

Unless wi' thee, my dearie, O.

XXVII B. CASTLES IN THE AIR

JAMES BALLANTINE (1808-1877).

The bonnie, bonnie bairn, wha sits poking in the ase, Glowerin' in the fire wi' his wee roun' face; Lauchin' at the fuffin' lowe, what sees he there? Ha! the young dreamer's biggin' castles in the air.

His wee chubby face, and his touzie curly pow, Are lauchin' and noddin' to the dancin' lowe; He'll brown his rosy cheeks, and singe his sunny hair, Glowerin' at the imps wi' their castles in the air.

He sees muckle castles towerin' to the moon! He sees little sodgers pu'ing them a' doun! Worlds whamlin' up and doun, bleezin' wi' a flare, See how he loups! as they glimmer in the air.

For a' sae sage he looks, what can the laddie ken? He's thinkin' upon naething, like mony mighty men; A wee thing maks us think, a sma' thing maks us stare, There are mair folk than him biggin' castles in the air.

Sic a night in winter may weel mak him cauld; His chin upon his buffy hand will soon mak him auld; His brow is brent sae braid, O pray that Daddy Care Would let the wean alane wi' his castles in the air!

He'll glower at the fire; and he'll keek at the light! But mony sparklin' stars are swallowed up by night; Aulder een than his are glamoured by a glare, Hearts are broken, heads are turned, wi' castles in the air.
